My biggest inspiration is my daughter, Sarah. I will do everything in my power to help her avoid the same issues her mom has had. Breast cancer is a horrible disease with so many implications. Death rates from breast cancer have only decreased slightly over the last half dozen years to just under 40,000 American women per year and that mostly due to some better treatments and a decreased amount of women being put on HRT (hormonal replacement therapy), but 40,000 American women a year is unacceptable. I think we lost about 60,000 Americans to the Vietnam war, the equivalent to 18 months worth of deaths to breast cancer. That just can't continue...

How can others get involved?

By doing something positive. I have to confess, I did nothing until the recurrence was upon us. Sometimes we don't see the light right away. We are now on our way to donating upwards of $100,000 with the projects underway. There are lots of ways to get involved. We chose to raise money. Rides to chemotherapy or volunteering at the local cancer unit come to mind quickly as other ways for folks to get involved.

THE FACTS

- Breast cancer is cancer that forms in the cells of the breasts.

- Breast cancer can occur in men and women, but it's far more common in women.

- After skin cancer, breast cancer is the most common cancer diagnosed in women in the United States.

- Breast cancer rates have fallen in recent years, though doctors aren't certain why.

- For many women, breast cancer is the disease they fear most.

- Public support for breast cancer awareness and research funding has helped improve the diagnosis and treatment of breast cancer.

- Breast cancer survival rates have increased and the number of deaths has been declining, thanks to earlier detection, new treatments and a better understanding of the disease.

OPINION

EDITORIAL

Open Meeting Law violations

We are not shy about filing requests with the District Attorney's Office to investigate potential violations of the Open Meeting Law.

In the most recent Cohasset case – we did not have to. The School Committee self-reported its potential violation and was found "guilty" on several counts.

The end result is a figurative "slap on the hand" requiring the School Committee to acknowledge the violation at an open meeting.

We can only hope that this latest – in our view egregious flouting of the law – will serve as a stern warning that the School Committee and other governmental entities must do better.

We find a "club" mentality can set in with elected and appointed boards – almost an "us versus them, circle-the-wagons" reaction — when faced with public criticism or controversy.

We can thank the flap over the Obama back-to-school speech for spurring four-of-the-five members of the School Committee to draft a response that was printed in the Mariner.

The decision to draft the letter and how it should be drafted and sent were conducted "behind closed doors."

In an Oct. 7 letter to the School Committee's legal counsel, DA William Keating's Office detailed the illegality of the School Committee's actions regarding the letter submitted to the Mariner and published on Sept. 25:

• Email correspondence to review School Committee member Alfred Slanetz's letter: Private discussions between members where the members share information on public policy issues for the purpose of arriving at a decision constitute serial discussions, which are considered deliberations. Where there was an exchange of views among members in such circumstances – a violation occurred. Communication about government business by a quorum of board members via email constitutes a violation of the Open Meeting Law.

• Telephone conversations between committee members pertaining to the content of the letter: these discussions were also private serial conversations that constituted deliberations and therefore, violated the Open Meeting Law.

• The DA's office also found that making the decision to send the letter and then discussing and deliberating on the contents of such, which expressed the views and position of a quorum of the committee, constituted a deliberation within the meaning of the Open Meeting Law, and was, therefore, a violation of the statue.

The Massachusetts Open Meeting Law is one of the few tools we have – the press and the people – to ensure that government business is conducted openly.

We can only wonder: what was the School Committee thinking in this case?

In September 2008, Assistant District Attorney Alexei Tymoczko of DA Keating's office provided a workshop in Cohasset on the Open Meeting Law. Three selectmen, one school committee member and several heads of town departments and other committee members attended.

We hope the town will make such workshops an annual event and that going forward, our governmental boards and officials will follow the law.

In our view, it is far better to err on the side of the public's right to know than the other way around.

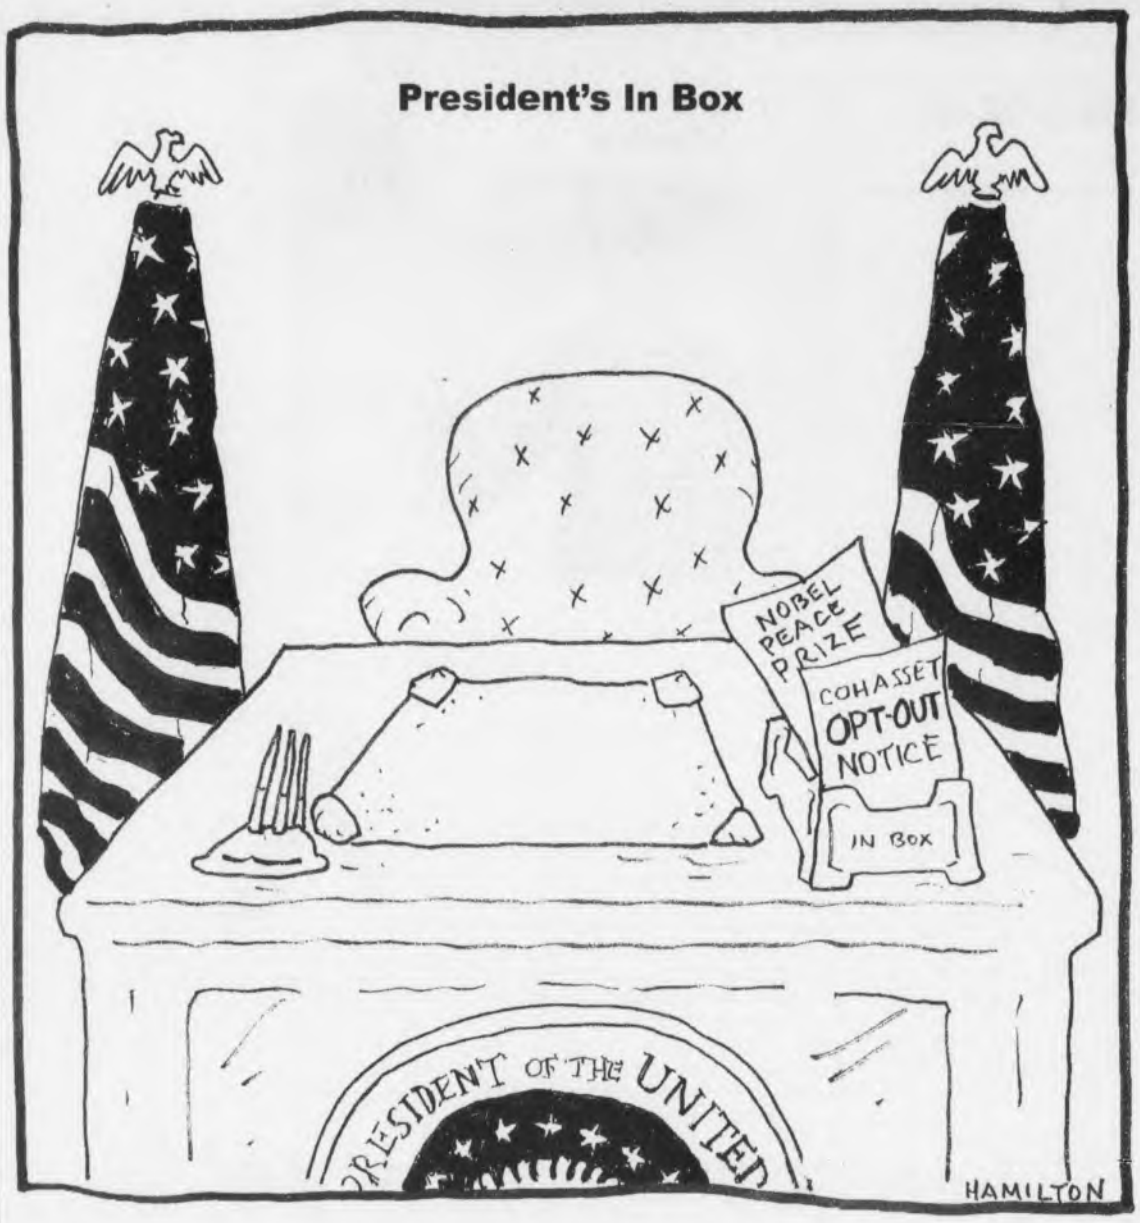
Key points of the Open Meeting Law

• A simple exchange of views on a public matter by members of a board constitutes a meeting.

• Sub-committees appointed by a governmental body are subject to the Open Meeting Law.

• Administrative matters such as scheduling the date, time, and place of a meeting, or soliciting agenda items do not need to be conducted at an open meeting.

• Discussions at meetings must be audible to everyone in attendance.



• Discussions at meetings must be intelligible to all present. If discussions can be understood only by reference to written materials, the written materials must be made available to the public.

• A board that uses its formal meetings merely to ratify decisions made in private is in violation of the Open Meeting Law.

• Except in an emergency, a notice 48 hours in advance of every meeting of any governmental body shall be filed with the Town Clerk. Notice includes Saturdays, but not Sundays and legal holidays. The meeting must be posted on the official bulletin board in Town Hall.

• Minutes are public records and the person having custody of the minutes must permit them to be inspected and examined by any person, under the supervision of the custodian.

Parental diligence at home

TO THE EDITOR:

As to the on-going furor over the President's back-to-school speech to all children in the United States: I sincerely hope that those same Cohasset parents are as diligent about the material their children are viewing on TV and the internet in their own home.

Register to vote for Special Town Meeting

Friday, Nov. 6, will be the last day to register to vote for the Special Town Meeting on Nov. 16. Registration will take place in the Town Clerk's office from 8:30 a.m. to 8 p.m.

Any citizen of the United States who is a Massachusetts resident and who will be 18 years old on or before a town meeting or Election Day may register to vote. There is no waiting period to be eligible to register to vote. If people move, they may register to vote as soon as they move into their new home. Registration is closed for a brief period before each town meeting and election to allow election officials time to prepare the voting lists. If people register during a "closed" period, they will be eligible to vote only in later town meetings or elections.

The Cohasset Director of Veterans' Services and community veterans service organizations will host a forum for veterans, dependents and surviving spouses at St. Anthony Parish hall, 10 Summer St., from 10 a.m. to noon, on Saturday, Oct. 24. All Cohasset residents are welcome.

The forum will help assure that all who are entitled to assistance are aware of the local, state and federal programs designed to assist those in need. It is hoped that those who attend will ask questions and communicate what they learn to local veterans and their families as well as their extended friends and relatives. Emphasis will be placed on giving attendees the opportunity to participate.

Individual letters will be sent to all Cohasset veterans who have registered in the annual census. However, the census makes no provision for identifying surviving spouses. The forum will highlight information sometimes unknown to surviving spouses, answer questions and help if needed and possible.

Rep. Bradley to hold office hours

State Rep. Garrett J. Bradley, D-Hingham, will hold district office hours from 6 to 7 p.m., on Monday, Oct. 19, at the Sons of Italy Hall, 88 Chief Justice Cushing Hwy., Hingham. People should enter through the Route 3A side entrance of the building into his district office.

Anyone unable to attend scheduled office hours, but would like to meet with Bradley, should call 617-722-2520 to schedule an appointment.

POLITICAL NOTES

Democratic senatorial candidates forum

A forum hosting the Democratic candidates for Senator Kennedy's seat will be held at 2 p.m. Sunday Oct. 25, at Scituate High School.

This event is sponsored by the South Shore Democratic Caucus as a public service to citizens who want to hear the democratic candidates running for Senator Kennedy's seat. The primary election is on Dec. 8, 2009. This may be the only and best opportunity for South Shore citizens to hear the democratic candidates for this important U.S. Senate seat. U.S. Congressman Michael Capuano (D) has committed to attending and participating in the Forum and commitments from the other democratic candidates are expected this week.

Democrats to air 'Charlie Wilson's War'

The Cohasset Democratic Town Committee will begin its movie night series this fall with "Charlie Wilson's War" ('07 -R rated) starring Tom Hanks and Julia Roberts. The movie is based on a true story by George Crile which reveals how U.S. Congressman Charlie Wilson almost single-handedly launched the several billion dollar CIA operation in Afghanistan to force out the occupying Soviets, without either a vote in Congress or approval of the President. The Seattle Times wrote that Charlie Wilson's War is "one of the most important books ever written about a U.S. government covert operation."

Charlie Wilson, played by Tom hanks is encourage by a wealthy socialite, Joanne Herring, played by Julia Roberts to develop a covert plan with the CIA to support the Afghan fighters leading to the defeat of the Russians, which ultimately contributed to the fall of the Soviet Union. The movie about Texas Congressman, Charlie Wilson, who aligns himself with a CIA agent played by Phillip Hoffman focuses on the comic side of the politics of some very serious issues

Please join the CDTC at 7 p.m. on Friday Oct. 23 in the meeting room of the Paul Pratt Library, 35 Ripley Road for what should be an interesting and informative evening.

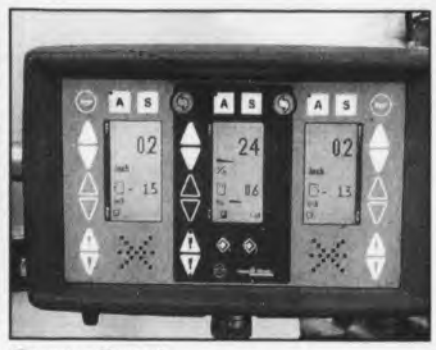
Paving preparation sets the stage

MAKING TRACKS

TOM GRUBER & MARK BRENNAN

So, What's Cold Planing? – Late last week, on Thursday and Friday, Costello Industries came to Town from Connecticut and cold planed the northern part of North Main Street and most of Red Gate Lane. Cold planing is a process in which the top portion of an old asphalt road surface is removed, in preparation for paving. The depth of asphalt removed is usually equal to the amount of new paving to be added. There are several benefits to cold planing. First, drainage in the roadway is unchanged before and after paving, since the final road is at the same level as before paving. Second, any irregularities that trench patching added to the road are removed, so the surface is approximately at the correct level over its full length. Another benefit is that the road surface is roughed up which allows the new asphalt to adhere to the road with a tighter bond.



The cold planing machine is shown in the photo. It has giant teeth that grind or "plane" a fixed amount of the old surface from the road. The spoils are moved by a conveyor that deposits the grindings in the rear of a large truck that drives in front of the cold planer. As an interesting bit of trivia, the machine shown was only about two weeks old, fresh from its German manufacturer. If you'd like to buy one of these machines to play with in your yard, it will set you back about $800,000. We thought you'd like to know this, just in case.

When the cold planing machine comes to structures in the road (manholes, catch basins, etc.) the grinder blades are raised and that area of the road is not ground. Later on, a small, highly mobile grinder is used to clean up these small areas. This mobile grinder has two wheels in back and one in front. This single wheel can be turned almost 90 degrees allowing the small grinder to travel in a very tight circle. Essentially, it can park one of the rear wheels on the manhole and pivot the machine in a circle cutting the asphalt away around a circular structure.

We've often talked about unplanned events that happen during construction that cause delays. This even happens to pros like Costello. We captured a photo of a small Bobcat used to scrape up the excess grindings and load them into a dump truck.

Close-Up of Grinder Teeth and Boot.

Bye-Bye Wheel!

While scooting around, all of the studs holding one of the rear wheels in place sheared off. As the operator joked, "I'm gonna drive it 'till the wheels fall off."

As we said, Costello is very good at what they do. They found new wheel studs in their supply truck, remounted the wheel and the Bobcat was back in action in about 20 minutes!

HEALTH NOTES

Difference between cold and flu

By Steve Bobo
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

This year we have several viruses to discuss and speculate on. The more, the merrier. If you're confused about what you might catch and what virus to protect yourself from, join the club. At a recent health officer's meeting flu and its variations were discussed at length, only to end with mixed conclusions and little consensus among the highest levels of public health officials.

First: A cold is not the flu. Both viruses are similar, but the symptoms of a cold: stuffy nose, sneezing and sore throat, are milder, as is duration and severity.

Flu is different, with all versions having mostly similar symptoms and severity, spreading mostly through droplets (like spit and mucus) from the mouth, nose and throat when a person with the flu coughs or sneezes near another person causing respiratory disease or even broader illness.

Seasonal flu: The H1N1 strain currently circulating is now widespread throughout the world and may continue for some time. Sometimes a new strain of influenza virus emerges to which humans have no natural protection. If the new virus is easily transmitted from person to person, it can result in a pandemic affecting people worldwide. Influenza pandemics have occurred in 1918, 1957 and 1968.

If the new virus is easily transmitted from person to person, it can result in a pandemic affecting people worldwide. Influenza pandemics have occurred in 1918, 1957 and 1968.

- Sometimes people become infected by touching something like a doorknob or telephone that has been touched by someone with the flu, and then touching their own mouth, nose, or eyes.
- People who have the flu can spread it to other people one day before they become sick and up to three to five days after they feel symptoms. Children with the flu can spread it to others for up to seven days after they become sick.
- Wash your hands frequently with soap and warm water or use alcohol based hand sanitizer.
- Cover your cough with a tissue or cough into your inner elbow and not into your hands.
- If you are sick stay home from work, and if your child is sick keep him/her home for seven days, or 24 hours after your symptoms go away – whichever is longer.

Get the flu vaccine. The best way to prevent seasonal flu is to get vaccinated each year. The Board of Health has updated a flyer that we are giving out throughout the town that has the latest facts.

For more information, please contact Mary Goodwin, RN, at 383-2210.

Steve Bobo is a long-time member of the Cohasset Board of Health.

Know the Difference between Cold and H1N1 Flu Symptoms

Symptom	Cold	H1N1 Flu
Fever	Fever is rare with a cold.	Fever is usually present with the flu in up to 80% of all flu cases. A temperature of 100°F or higher for 3 to 4 days is associated with the flu.
Coughing	A hacking, productive (mucus- producing) cough is often present with a cold.	A non-productive (non-mucus producing) cough is usually present with the flu (sometimes referred to as dry cough).
Aches	Slight body aches and pains can be part of a cold.	Severe aches and pains are common with the flu.
Stuffy Nose	Stuffy nose is commonly present with a cold and typically resolves spontaneously within a week.	Stuffy nose is not commonly present with the flu.
Chills	Chills are uncommon with a cold.	60% of people who have the flu experience chills.
Tiredness	Tiredness is fairly mild with a cold.	Tiredness is moderate to severe with the flu.
Sneezing	Sneezing is commonly present with a cold.	Sneezing is not common with the flu.
Sudden Symptoms	Cold symptoms tend to develop over a few days.	The flu has a rapid onset within 3-6 hours. The flu hits hard and includes sudden symptoms like high fever, aches and pains.
Headache	A headache is fairly uncommon with a cold.	A headache is very common with the flu, present in 80% of flu cases.
Sore Throat	Sore throat is commonly present with a cold.	Sore throat is not commonly present with the flu.
Chest Discomfort	Chest discomfort is mild to moderate with a cold.	Chest discomfort is often severe with the flu.

The only way to stop the spread of the epidemic is to spread the awareness.

LIBRARY CORNER

Don't forget Alzheimer's Talk

The following events will take place at Paul Pratt Memorial Library, 35 Ripley Road. For more information, call 781-383-1348 or visit cohassetlibrary.org

Alzheimer's Talk – A free DVD screening of 'How to Communicate with Someone Who Has Alzheimer's Disease or Related Dementia" will be presented at 6:30 p.m., on Thursday, Oct. 22. Kathleen Capuzzo, family caregiver specialist with South Shore Elder Services, will discuss communication techniques that can bring a higher quality of life to the person who has Alzheimer's and to the caregiver. The screening is free and all are welcome.

Library Book Group – Join others for coffee and discussion of "The Guernsey Literary and Potato Peel Pie Society" by Mary Ann Shaffer at 10 a.m., on Wednesday, Oct. 28. Free. All are welcome.

Art Exhibit – South Shore Art Center is hosting an exhibit of oil paintings titled "Shimmering Color" by artist Patricia M. Gray at Paul Pratt Memorial Library through Oct. 30. Gallery hours are 10 a.m. to 8 p.m., Mondays, Tuesdays and Thursdays; 10 a.m. to 5 p.m., Wednesdays and Fridays; and 9 a.m. to 5 p.m., Saturdays.

Cohasset Library Trust presents An Evening with Tracy Kidder –

Meet Tracy Kidder, author of "Strength in What Remains" and "Mountains Beyond Mountains" in the auditorium at Cohasset High School at 7 p.m., on Monday, Nov. 2. Tickets are $10 each and are available at the circulation desk of the library. This event is the first South Shore Music Circus Lecture in recognition of SSMC's $100,000 donation to the Cohasset Library Trust.

Knitting Group – The Library Knitting Group meets from 10 a.m. to noon, every Wednesday, in either the Meeting Room or Historical Room. Edna Finnegan from the Senior Center Knitting Group will be available to help. All are welcome, including people who want to learn to knit or those who have a knitting project they need help with. Free.

FOR CHILDREN

Catie Copely in Person – Join others in the Meeting Room at 3 p.m., on Saturday, Oct. 17, to meet Catie Copley, Deborah Kovacs and Jim. Catie is a black Labrador retriever who lives an unusual life as Canine Ambassador at the Fairmont Copley Plaza Hotel in Boston. Her job includes welcoming guests, taking them for walks and helping Jim at his job as the hotel's chief concierge. Deborah Kovacs, author of "Catie Copley" and "Catie Copley's Great Escape" will give an author talk on both books. Buttonwood Books will have copies of her books for purchase. No tickets or pre-registration required.

Story Time – will be held in the Children's Story Room at 10:30 a.m., on Tuesdays, Oct. 20 and 26. All ages and communities welcome.

Learn to use a Trimble GPS

Cohasset Water Department is teaming up with Environmental Partners to offer a learning opportunity to Cohasset students in a three-session GIS training program.

Students will learn how to use a Trimble GPS unit, a scientific device with sub-meter accuracy to locate discrete points on Earth, combined with mapping software called ArcMap used to manage information such as streets, property lines and utilities.

Training sessions are scheduled for Wednesday, Oct 21; Wednesday, Oct 28; and Tuesday, Nov. 3, possibly including Veterans Day, Nov 11. Training time will be 3 to 5 p.m.

Enrollment for the program is being facilitated by CSCR, the Cohasset Center for Student Coastal Research. Students wishing to sign up for this training should email Jack Buckley at jcbuckleyjr@gmail.com, or call CSCR at 781-383-0129. Space is limited.

Training sessions are scheduled for Wednesday, Oct 21; Wednesday, Oct 28; and Tuesday, Nov. 3, possibly including Veterans Day, Nov 11. Training time will be 3 to 5 p.m.

Concert is sure to be a classic

Sylvia Berry will be performing a program called "Master and Heir Apparent: Music of Haydn and Beethoven." She will play a replica of a Viennese piano from circa 1795, giving listeners the chance to hear an instrument much like the ones Haydn and Beethoven themselves played. The concert will be at First Parish Cohasset on Sunday, Oct. 18 at 4 p.m. First Parish is located on the green at North Main St. Admission will be $15 for adults and $12 for seniors and children.

In celebration of "Haydn Year 2009," Berry will perform a program of works by Haydn and Beethoven that reveals the connection between these musical titans. Beethoven was only briefly Haydn's pupil, and in some ways their relationship was a troubled one; however, it is quite clear that the works of the elder master were an important source of inspiration for the young genius. Soon after moving to Vienna Beethoven was seen as Haydn's heir apparent, and this program shows why. In addition, hearing these works performed on a piano like the ones Haydn and Beethoven knew is a fascinating experience that provides further insight about this spectacular music. The program will include Haydn's late masterpiece, the Sonata in E-flat major, Hob. XVI: 52, and Beethoven's turbulent Sonata in D minor, Op. 31, No. 2, "The Tempest".

Fortepianist Sylvia Berry, a native of Philadelphia, has performed as a soloist and chamber musician in the US, Canada, The Netherlands, and Italy. A specialist in late 18th and early 19th-century Viennese music, she has quickly become a favorite in Boston and beyond not only for her exciting performances, but for her engaging commentary about the music and the instruments she plays. Benjamin Dunham of Early Music America stated of a recent solo appearance: "... [she] revealed a poetic sensibility and a willingness to draw listeners in with spaces to pause and reflect. These qualities contrasted nicely with up-tempo movements, which were handled with verve," while her work in Opera Boston's production of La clemenza di Tito led Lloyd Schwartz to write in the Boston Phoenix, "Special applause for continuo fortepianist Sylvia Berry, [who played] as if she were one of the actors." Highlights of recent performances include a series of solo recitals for the Cambridge Society for Early Music; the debut of her ensemble, Boston Hausmusik, at the Connecticut Early Music Festival; lecture recitals with soprano Clara Rottsolk on early Lieder at the Goethe Institut (Boston) and Swarthmore College (Philadelphia); performances of J.S. Bach's Concertos for Multiple Harpsichords with Ensemble Florilege; and a lecture recital (on harpsichord and fortepiano) for the Haydn Society of North America at the Longy School of Music. This summer she presented a duo recital with Shuann Chai at Fenton House in London, which holds one of the most renowned collections of antique keyboard instruments in the world. Ms. Berry studied at the New England Conservatory, the Oberlin Conservatory (where she received a Masters in historical keyboard instruments), and the Royal Conservatory in The Hague, The Netherlands. She has studied with David Breitman, Lisa Goode Crawford, Bart van Oort, Stanley Hoogland, and Malcolm Bilson.

For information about the concert, contact Allegra Martin at 617-872-0461.

Community Garden Club recycles for conservation

Community Garden Club of Cohasset began a recycling venture at Cohasset's transfer station this past summer. It has proven very successful so far.

People can now recycle used inkjet and laser cartridges, Ipods, cell phones, DVDs, video systems and games, GPS and calculators.

Barbara Canney, the club's Conservation chairwoman, has placed a brown garbage bin next to the Cardboard and Plastics building with a big green arrow on it.

"I check the bin weekly and send the items to a company that pays us for them. The money we receive will go toward our Conservation Fund. It isn't a huge amount of money but more importantly, these items do not end up in the landfill," Canney said.

It is hoped that this effort will make it easier for people to sort recyclables and at the same time support the community conservation efforts of the Community Garden Club of Cohasset.

THE HOUSE AND SENATE. BHRC records local representatives' votes on two roll calls from the week of October 5-9. There were no roll calls in the Senate last week.

PREPARE FOR PANDEMIC AND EMERGENCIES (H 4271)

House 114-36, approved its own version of a bill designed to prepare the state to respond to a potential pandemic flu or other emergency. The House version is different from the Senate one that was passed in April. The House version now goes to the Senate for consideration. If the two branches are not able to agree on a plan, a conference committee would be appointed to hammer out a version agreeable to both chambers.

The House measure would expand the authority of the commissioner of public health to take action when the governor declares a public health emergency. Emergency authority would end when the governor ends it or after 90 days at which point the governor could reauthorize it.

Under the bill, the commissioner is given the power or can give local public health authorities the power over evacuation and decontamination of public buildings; use of a health care facility; control of entering and exiting a stricken public area; safe disposal of infectious waste and procurement, temporary waivers of state licensing requirements for out-of-state health care professionals and allocation of controlled substances.

Sponsors of the measure noted that the House bill is very different from the Senate version and eliminates some of the more controversial provisions that were in the Senate plan. They said that the House version unlike the Senate one, requires that quarantine and isolation orders take place in the least restrictive settings and removes the Senate provision giving states the right to arrest citizens or search their homes without a warrant.

They also noted that current law already provides that if a person refuses to be vaccinated, the local board of health can get a warrant to quarantine or isolate him or her. They pointed out that the bill does not change that law but sets up an appeals process under which the person can challenge the order in court.

Supporters of the bill said that it strikes a reasonable balance between giving government the necessary tools to deal with a pandemic and preserving the liberty and constitutional rights of citizens. They argued that the pending swine flu crisis makes the passage of this measure vital and noted that these laws have not been changed since 1918.

Some opponents said that the bill goes too far and gives the government too much power at the expense of citizens. They said that at best the bill is seriously flawed and at the worst is completely unconstitutional. Others said that the bill has only been in print for a short time and argued that representatives and the public have not had time to read and understand it. They acknowledged that the bill may be a good one but noted that many representatives were tied up with important hearings and urged that action on the measure be postponed until the following week. (A "Yes" vote is for the bill. A "No" vote is against it).

House 22-125, rejected a motion to postpone action on the pandemic bill for five days.

Postponement supporters said that many legislators are at other important hearings and meetings today dealing with several problems including the crisis of declining state revenues, health care reform and transportation reform. They said that this important bill needs the undivided attention of every representative. Others said that members and the public have not had sufficient time to read and comprehend the measure.

Postponement opponents said that various proposals on this issue have been debated in the House for years. They said that it was time to act on it and approve a law that will protect citizens during a pandemic before it is too late. (A "Yes" vote is for postponement. A "No" vote is against postponement).

REINSTATE NOTICES FOR DRIVER'S LICENSE RENEWALS - The Registry of Motor Vehicles (RMV) is reinstating the practice of informing the state's estimated 4.9 million drivers that their driver's licenses are up for renewal. The notices will only be sent to drivers who sign up on the RMV website at: https://secure.rmv.state.ma.us/RMVReminder/intro.aspx

Drivers must sign up for the service at least 45 days prior to the expiration of their driver's license. They will be notified a month before their license expires and can choose to be notified by e-mail, phone or text message. The only option that is not available is notification by regular mail which was the agency's only form of notification until it discontinued it last November in order to save some $800,000.

The state has hired local messaging service Sendza, Inc. of Marlboro to handle the system. The RMV says that the notifications will not cost customers or the state any money because Sendza has sponsors for the electronic messages that they send out. One of the current sponsors is Arbella Insurance.

PAID SICK LEAVE FOR ALL (S 1130)- The Labor and Workforce Development Committee heard testimony on legislation requiring employers to give up to seven paid sick leave days per year to public and private employees. Each employee would receive one sick day for every 30 hours worked. The sick days could be used by a worker to care for his or her own illness or that of a spouse, child or parent. It would also include routine medical exams.

Supporters said that it is outrageous that 47 percent of Massachusetts workers, including 75 percent of lower paid workers, do not have any sick days.

Opponents said that paid sick days should be negotiated by employers and employees.

Steve Ivas, a naturalist, points out witch hazel to the group of walkers during last fall's Discover the Woods Day at Holly Hill Farm. This Sunday, Oct. 18, the Friends of Holly Hill Farm are again inviting the public to "discover the woods."

Holly Hill invites all to come 'Discover the Woods'

"Throughout the day we are going to have discovery games in the woods."

Behind the farm, which is located at 236 Jerusalem Road, there are 120-plus acres of woods with trails open and available for the public. The Richardson and Cornelia White Woods abut Wheelwright Farm and surround the active Holly Hill farmland.

This Sunday, Oct. 18, the Friends of Holly Hill Farm are inviting the public to "discover the woods."

"There are 25 established trails that are good for walking and, we hope, for running," said Jon Belber, Friends of Holly Hill Farm education director. The second annual Discover the Woods Day will kick off with a 5K cross-country run at 10a.m.

According to Belber, who ran the race last year, course has "nice, wide trails" entirely wooded and scenic in true cross-country running style and is currently lined with colorful fall foliage.

Holly Hill Farm is an organic farm, but is home to two separate yet interrelated entities. It is a for-profit business dedicated to growing high quality organic vegetables. The farm is located in the heart of Cohasset on about five acres. The non-profit side, the Friends of the Holly Hill Farm, is devoted to protecting open space and running educational programs using the resources of Holly Hill Farm.

Visitors are invited to come visit the woods from 10a.m. to 4p.m. to participate in activities in the woods. At 11a.m. there will be a one-mile fun run and walk for families and kids.

"Throughout the day we are going to have discovery games in the woods," Belber said. A "quest" type activity has been created for families and adults to guide them in their exploration of the wooded acres.

"The quest is designed to use nature as your guide and draw attention to items that might otherwise go unnoticed," Belber said. "If anything, it will enliven your walk."

Other "nature-focused" games will be ongoing in the afternoon. Maps and guides will be available if visitors want to strike out on their own for a short jaunt or longer hike among the wildlife and fauna of the woods.

For those nature enthusiasts looking for a closer look at what the woods have to offer, Norwell naturalist Steve Ivas will lead a group on a one-hour formal nature walk at 2p.m.

"He'll explain why the trees face a certain way or why a specific moss is growing," Belber said.

The Discover the Woods day is a continuation of the vision created of Holly Hill Farm by Frank White, owner and leader of Holly Hill, who recently passed away.

"Frank envisioned not only bringing people to the farm, but also to discover and use the woods," Belber said.

The Discover the Woods day is part of ongoing outreach and programming at Holly Hill Farm. Educational programs for the young and old are held regularly. The farm screens several farm and food related movie during their summer Films on the Farm program, which just concluded its third year.

"We have wonderful trails that are open to the public for free and should be celebrated," Belber said.

To pre-register for the 5K run or for more information, call Education Director Jon Belber at 781-383-6565 or email jbelberhollyhill@hotmail.com. Cost is $20 per family for FHHF members, $25 for non-members.

Cohasset Cabaret is Nov. 6 & 7

For the first time the great baritone voice of Joel Buford, the musical director from Second Congregational church will sing two memorable show tunes.

Cohasset Cabaret 09 show dates will be Friday and Saturday night Nov. 6 & 7 at 8 p.m.

Don't miss the opportunity to see this local talented cast featuring Doug Trudeau, from Showstopper's fame, as emcee. A little sample of what to expect: Lily Sestito will be back along with her brother Joe Carbone. Barabara Baumgarten will again show off her great vocal talent. For the first time the great baritone voice of Joel Buford, the musical director from Second Congregational church will sing two memorable show tunes. John Campbell and his daughter Catie will sing a duet. There will also be the talented Dunleavy Shaffer Irish Step Dancers. But that is not all, in addition to other great singers and dancers, how about a grandmother and granddaughter comedy routine?

On both evenings a social hour, with appetizers provided, will take place from 7 to 8 p.m. You can try your luck at the raffle and silent auction table, which will have some great items from local artists and merchants. Audience members are encouraged to bring their own snacks "Cabaret Style". There will be a cash bar serving wine, beer and soft drinks. Cohasset Cabaret is sponsored by The Friends of Cohasset Elder Affairs and will benefit the Friends and St. Anthony's Youth Ministry. .

Tickets are $25. You can purchase tickets at St. Anthony's Parish Hall office and the CEA office at the South Shore Community Center or call 781-383-0752 for further information.

Head of the Weir Race Oct. 31

Hull Lifesaving Museum's annual Head of the Weir River Race will take place Saturday, Oct. 31. Cost is $20 per person. Registration, required for all participants, will be 9 to 10 a.m. at the race starting line behind the Hull Public Works building at the Hull Town line on Route 228.

The race is a celebration of the estuary at the height of its fall beauty and the array of the region's open water rowers. As many as 60 boats jockey for position racing out the narrow estuary and onto open water, traveling from West Corner on the Hingham/Hull/Cohasset line, past Bumpkin Island, across Hull Bay, to the museum's Windmill Point Boathouse at Hull Gut. The Weir is an exciting race and a great spectator event, featuring more than 150 of the region's finest rowers from all over New England and New York.

Best spectator views are from the bridge on George Washington Boulevard 10-20 minutes after the start, at the tip of Hull's Sunset Point, or at the Windmill Point Boathouse finish line. Spectators should show care crossing the road on George Washington Boulevard, watching for fast moving traffic.

For more information or information about participating, call Ed McCabe, Hull Lifesaving Museum's Maritime program director or Lory Newmyer, executive director, at the museum at 781-925-5433 or visit the museum's Web site at hulllifesavingmuseum.org.

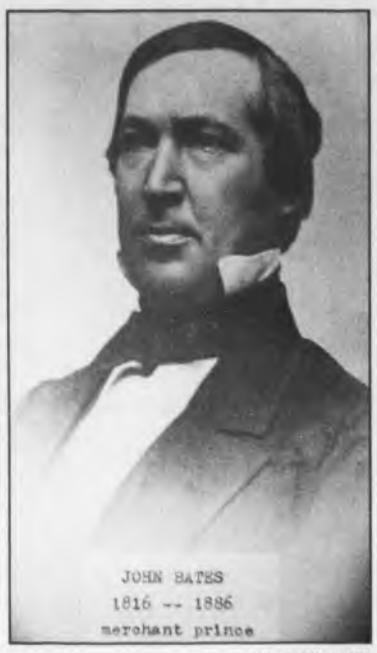
Ghost hunters gear up for busy day

By Pat Martin
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

Cohasset, Mass has always had a reputation for being haunted.

Over the years, several of its historical buildings have been the subject of investigations by teams of paranormal researchers. T.A.P.S., the stars of the Sci-Fi channel's "Ghost Hunters," has even inquired about the possibility of visiting the town for one of its highly popular shows.

In 1960, famed Parapsychologist and original 'ghost hunter' Hans Holzer visited Cohasset to investigate claims that the Historical Society's Maritime Museum was the home of an annoyed ghost who angrily stomped his feet on the second floor while society members met below. Accompanied by his psychic partner, Holzer determined the spirit of John Bates was haunting the house and was, in fact, annoyed.



Bates, the descendent of the original owner Samuel Bates and last owner of the house, was unhappy that his home had been moved from its original location across the harbor. Holzer went on to document the case in his book, "New England Ghosts".

Decades later, after years of rumors of poltergeist activity within Cohasset Town Hall, two separate teams of paranormal investigators, one from Connecticut and one from Massachusetts, studied the building in 2007. Each group encountered paranormal activity and determined two, possibly three, ghosts resided within the building which has served the town in many capacities since it was built in 1857.

A photograph, recently published in "Capturing Ghosts on Film" by Christopher Balzano, taken in conjunction with the investigation, eerily seems to have even captured one of the ghosts believed to have hung himself in one of the ancient jail cells that still reside in the town hall basement.

With the enormous interest that ghost hunting and paranormal pursuits are currently receiving in the media, the Cohasset Historical Society, in the spirit of the Halloween season, has decided to open the buildings to the public for a day of ghost hunting.

On Saturday, Oct. 17, beginning at 10am,The Cohasset Historical Society will offer "Haunted Happenings in Cohasset." The daylong event will begin with a tour of Cohasset Central Cemetery, led by local author and historian Jackie Dormitzer. The cemetery is home to the victims of the tragic shipwreck of the Irish famine ship The Brig St. John in 1849. Author and local expert Paul Fiori will also be present at the world famous Ancient Order of the Hibernians Celtic Cross honoring the victims to retell the tragic event and the huge impact it had on the town of Cohasset.

COURTESY PHOTO

A lecture on the history of the building as well as two types of tours will then be offered of Cohasset Town Hall. One detailing it's history and connections to ghosts and then a second billed as a "quiet tour" designed to allow tour goers to determine for themselves whether they can see or feel the ghosts for themselves.

The days' events continue with psychic readings available by internationally known Psychic Dee White Dove, a session on Past Life Regression conducted by "The Time Traveler Kathryn McGlynn" and an exhibit on "Haunted and Historic" items from the Society's vast collection of mourning portraits, funeral costumes, grave stone rubbings and items from the wreck of the Brig St.John and the movie "The Witches of Eastwick".

The highlight of the event will be a live paranormal investigation from 5:30 pm to 7:30pm of the Maritime Museum by the well-known group, NightFall Paranormal Investigators of Methuen, Mass. This investigation will be the first since Holzer's visit in 1960 and will give the public the rare opportunity to see ghost hunters at work using the many tools and techniques to detect paranormal activity.

The Maritime Museum's next door neighbor and fellow Historical Society property, The John Wilson House, will also be opened at that time and decorated in haunted and historical decor. Never investigated, the building is said to exude its own spiritual presence. Both events are considered not too scary for kids.

Schedule of events

Haunted Happenings in Cohasset takes place Saturday, Oct. 17, to benefit The Cohasset Historical Society.

The price of the one-day long ticket is $15 for adults and $8 for students and will get you into all of the events.

Tickets for the daylong event are $15.00 for adults and $8.00 for youth under the age of 18.

Tickets can be purchased for single events as well. A cemetery or town hall tour as well as a combined visit to both the Haunted Wilson House and Live Paranormal investigation at the Maritime Museum for $5.00 each.

The seminar on past life regression or a psychic reading for $10.00.

Tickets can be purchased at the Cohasset Historical Society Headquarters at 106 S. Main Street, Cohasset, by calling 781-383-1434 or through email cohassethistory@yahoo.com. To avoid lines and guarantee appointment times, get your tickets early.

10 a.m. Take a walking history tour of Cohasset's Historical Central Cemetery and reconnect with those buried within.

11:30 a.m. Cohasset Town Historian David Wadsworth presents the history of Cohasset Town Hall and its history with ghosts.

12:30 to 4 p.m. Talk a guided tour of haunted Cohasset Town Hall and see the historic basement jail cells…or participate in a quiet tour to determine for yourself whether you can see one of the three ghosts that reside there.

2 to 4 p.m. Travel back through time to discover past lives in a session in past life regression with time traveler Katherine McGlynn in the Paul Pratt Building.

6 to 8 p.m. Visit the "haunted" Captain John Wilson House resplendent in festive décor. Interact with psychic medium Dee White Dove as she opens the door between worlds to connect with Cohasset's spirit world.

6 to 8 p.m. Participate in a live paranormal investigation of the Maritime Museum as Nightfall Paranormal hopes to connect with the ghost of Samuel Bates, documented by world-renowned parapsychologist Dr. Hans Holzer in 1960.

8 p.m. Wrap up the evening sharing stories of Cohasset' spirited past and local ghosts at the Paul Pratt Building. Refreshments served.

Skippers get a kick out of Doonan

Cohasset's Brendan Doonan knocks home an extra point in the Skippers' win over Hingham. Doonan's kicking has been a big factor in the Skippers' 5-0 season, especially on kickoffs, where Cohasset has consistently put opponents in poor starting position.

Team's Mr. Everything a big factor for Cohasset

By Dick Trust
CORRESPONDENT

Cohasset High School gets a big kick out of the way Brendan Doonan plays football.

Makes sense. He's kicking the football in a big way.

While the 5-11, 180-pound senior tri-captain has successfully converted on 11 of 13 extra-point attempts for the unbeaten Skippers (5-0) this season, his booming kickoffs have handed the opposition poor field position time after time.

"He does a great job for us," head coach Pete Afanasiw said. "He's somebody about whom coaches say, 'I wish I had him on our team.' I know I say, 'I'm glad I have him on my team.'

"He's a major reason that we've had such good field position throughout the first five games. It's a big, big plus when the opposing offense has 80, 85 yards in front of them. And it's just as nice when your offense has a short field where they only have to go 45, 50 yards because of that good field position.

Cohasset quarterback Jeff Cavanaro and his team are ready and excited to face undefeated Mashpee on Friday night. A win and Cohasset controls its own destiny, a loss could leave the Skippers looking for help from other teams down the line.

Imperfection can crush dreams

Big picture irrelevant in playoff charge

By William Wassersug
WWASSERS@CNC.COM

Tonight's game

vs. Mashpee 6pm • Alumni Field

Football

From tonight's game through the rest of the season, the gameplan is simple for the Cohasset football team.

In much the same way college football works, the plan is win, or forget about playing in the postseason.

That's just the way it is these days in a league like the South Shore League.

The scoreboard watching starts, and inevitably, a team will need help from someone else before all is said and done.

"The chances are that whoever wins in this league controls their own destiny," Cohasset coach Pete Afanasiw said. "Even if you stumble once it's hard to make up one game. Look at Mashpee last year. They were 10-1 overall, but their one loss was to Abington and they didn't make the playoffs. If you have one league loss, you're done."

Mashpee comes into town tonight sporting a 5-0 record that includes a 6-0 win over Sandwich that brings back thoughts of Doug Flutie.

In that win, quarterback Devin Andrade hit Robbie Raymond with a 46-yard touchdown pass as time expired to give the Falcons the victory.

"He hit the kid in stride," Afanasiw said of the exciting finish. "The quarterback has a strong arm. It's a little nerve wracking because he has such a strong arm and he's mobile. When a quarterback can throw and has mobility you have to worry."

Or more precisely, plan for it.

That is something the Skippers have done.

"We match up well with them defensively," Afanasiw said. "We have good players. I think the line could be a significant factor. Our line might be a little stronger, more athletic and they have four or five guys who play both ways. We don't have that. Most of our guys play one side of the line. That should help."

In their first five games, Mashpee has outscored opponents 100-45, including shutouts over Sandwich (6-0) and previously unbeaten Norwell (21-0).

Jordan Kelinui has led a strong rushing attack with 103 yards-per game for Mashpee.

"They don't have as many kids as they've had in the past," Afanasiw said. "But they're 5-0 and have another good group of kids. They have a really good quarterback, good receivers and a triumverate of running backs. They'll give the ball to whoever has the hot hand. They'll try to get them the ball."

Last season, Cohasset lost 28-0 to Mashpee.

Things are different this season.

In the first five games, Cohasset has been playing higher division schools, and have wins over Hingham (3-2) and Scituate (4-1).

Dana Valentine has turned into an elite back, breaking 200 yards twice in five games, while giving his biggest efforts against the toughest competition.

Afanasiw has been especially pleased with a couple of players over the past few weeks.

Three wins and they're in

Girls' Soccer

The Lady Skippers check in at 6-4, and need three wins in their last seven games to make the tournament.

"It is amazing how quickly the season goes by," Cohasset coach Debbie Beal said. "It's hard to believe we have been at it for almost two months now. Our record is 6-4. We have seven regular season games left needing six points or three wins to qualify for the MIAA state tournament. I am confident we can complete that task as long as we stay on course and not get sloppy. The end of our season is going to be challenging and I look forward to facing it head on."

That doesn't mean it will be easy.

" Our last four games include East Bridgewater, Plymouth North and Duxbury," she said. "Three teams that will do wonders for preparing us for the tournament."

Cohasset is coming off a rouh week.

" Last week proved to be challenging for us," Beal said. "We faced Norwell at their place and couldn't quite get things together before it was too late. We allowed four goals in the first half, awful tough to overcome that. I thought in the second half we played much better team soccer but we still played with too much urgency and not enough patience."

Then came a tough Notre Dame Academy team.

"After a day to regroup we faced Notre Dame of Hingham at home on Friday," Beal said. "I was pleased with our efforts and thought we did a much nicer job containing their offensive attacks and creating more opportunities for ourselves. Unfortunately we committed a foul in the first half giving NDA a penalty kick which gave them a 1-0 lead where the game stayed."

Beal said she'd like her team to fight more on the offensive end.

" I would like us to respond more efficiently and really attack the goal," she said. "We seem to wait until the last minute to really go for it. I am overall very happy with our progress and that fact that we have reloaded some positions and we are playing more cohesively. Scoring is our issue on hand but we continue to plug away at it, it will come, we will get there."

" We are at a point where our fitness levels are great and the kids are taking risks on the field," she said. "We need to trust one another on the field and play where we think the ball should go. We need to demand from our teammates that they put the ball on our feet or to usable space. I see too many balls roll out of bounds because the lead pass is just too far out of reach. Taking our time and having confidence in our ability to place the ball will make a big difference. Sometimes we second guess one another and that leads to frustration."

As for an answer, Beal has it.

"Just play kids," is my advice.

If the team does that, they should be in good shape.

Methodical victory for Skippers

Valentine's two touchdowns, defense get the job done against Carver

By William Wassersug
WWASSERS@CNC.COM

Cohasset quarterback Jeff Cavanaro threw two touchdown passes, running back Dana Valentine added two scoring runs and Robert Jones nabbed two interceptions as the Skippers opened their South Shore League schedule with a dominating 28-0 win over Carver on Friday night in Cohasset.

Cavanaro connected on seven-of-15 attempts for 105 yards, including a beautifully thrown 39-yard touchdown to Brendan Doonan on the first play of the second quarter to put the Skippers ahead 14-0 with Valentine's two-point conversion.

Defensively, the Skippers were equally good, forcing eight punts while holding the Crusaders to 70 yards of total offense, the majority on two long runs by quarterback Owen Moore, who had a 52-yard run to start the fourth quarter and bring the ball to the Cohasset 15.

Carver only picked up one first down in the first half, and that was on a penalty.

Valentine finished with 119 yards on 22 carries, including a pair of touchdowns.

The Cohasset offense held the ball for all but six plays in the third quarter, while increasing their lead to 28-0.

"This was a good way to start league play," Cohasset coach Pete Afanasiw said. "We played well on both sides of the ball. The defensive line really deserves some applause."

Jones' second interception of the night, in the end zone, protected the shutout and ended Carver's longest drive of the night.

Afanasiw felt the Skippers were ready for the game.

"We had a good week of practice," he said. "We just had to go out and execute. I thought we were ready. We've played a pretty good non-league schedule.

Carver coach Mike Fraccalossi wasn't as pleased.

"We were flat in the first half," he said. "We weren't ready for them. They were better than us. They made big plays. We didn't. You don't win games when you punt eight times."

Fraccalossi felt Cohasset's offense held too much control.

"It came down to we had to keep the ball out of their hands," he said. "We didn't. We didn't score. You don't win games that way."

The Skippers will be tested tonight when Mashpee visits for a Homecoming showdown between a pair of 5-0 teams.

FROM DOONAN, PAGE 17

"I think a lot of people underestimate the importance of special teams, but at the high school level, if you get a kicker of his caliber with the ability he has, it's very rare. He's really an unsung weapon on our team in regards to that third unit, meaning the special teams unit."

Doonan is Cohasset's Mr. Everything. He handles the team's kickoffs, punts and extra points. He hasn't attempted any field goals because, well, the high-scoring Skippers haven't needed them

Then there's his "side" job as the Skippers' fastest and most productive wide receiver, and the role he says he likes best of all, playing cornerback or safety on defense. "I like defense because you hit people," Doonan said. "But when you have a quarterback like him (junior Jeff Cavanaro) throwing to you, it's equally as fun."

Cavanaro this season has thrown seven touchdown passes, including three to Doonan, whom Afanasiw said is "outstanding" as a wide receiver.

"We have different kids with different roles and Brendan's role basically is as our deep threat," the head coach said. "He's our fastest receiver, so he's the kid we try to get open down the field. (Senior) Dean (Driscoll) works on the inside possession game. Then we have a tight end who can go out into the flat.

"Brendan is our deep weapon. It's nice to have somebody of his ability. He's got great hands and game-changing speed. If he catches the ball in space and stride, he can score from pretty much anywhere on the field."

With senior tailback Dana Valentine racking up the yards (988) and touchdowns (10) in a backfield operated by Cavanaro, who's also supported by such stalwarts as receiver Jack Carrier and junior fullback Thomas Flibotte, it's no wonder the Skippers have put 161 points on the board (and allowed only 48).

"It's a luxury most coaches don't have and we might not get again in my tenure. We'll see," Afanasiw said.

Cavanaro has completed 32 of 66 passes (48.5 percent) for 327 yards and the seven TDs. Doonan leads the receiving corps with 10 receptions for 145 yards and his three TDs.

Doonan and Cavanaro have been good friends since Jeff's freshman year, when Brendan was a sophomore. They play summer league baseball together and travel around during that time period, playing baseball.

"They're inseparable when they're in school," Afanasiw said. "They spend a lot of time together."

Cavanaro acknowledges that their friendship has paid dividends on the gridiron. They click like Brady-to-Moss. "We have pretty good chemistry between us, so that helps," he said.

Said Doonan, "Jeff knows where I'm going to be, so no matter what, if I want to go long, he'll throw it long. If he tells me to go short, I'll go short. He'll hit me wherever I am."

With Valentine exploding out of the backfield behind a heavily protective offensive line, and other backs and pass receivers making their contributions, Cavanaro has quite an arsenal at his command.

"We have a pretty well balanced offense," the 6-1, 170-pound QB said.

The Skippers might need that balance tonight, weather permitting, when they host similarly unbeaten and South Shore League opponent Mashpee (5-0) in the Homecoming game at 6 o'clock. Cohasset comes in off last week's 28-0 victory over SSL foe Carver, while Mashpee visits after having topped Norwell, 21-0.

In addition to his current duties, Doonan used to be part of the kickoff return and punt return teams. But, hey, a guy needs a break once in a while. Doonan can't be expected to play every minute of every game, although he's not one to complain if asked to do so.

"We need to get him rest somewhere, so we've got a couple of other guys stepping up in there," Afanasiw said. "He did (play on the kick return teams) the last two years, and we had him go a couple of games earlier this season, but we realized we have to get him some air."

As for field goals, Cohasset hasn't attempted any because, frankly, the high-scoring Skippers haven't needed them.

"If we have the opportunity, I know Brendan's range is anywhere from 40 to 45 yards," Afanasiw said. "I would feel relatively comfortable going out there, depending on the night, obviously. If there's no wind, if it's a nice night, he's good from within 45 yards, I would say."

The last field goal kicked by Cohasset High came three years ago off the foot of Pat Doonan, Brendan's older brother who's now at University of Connecticut. It was through Pat that Brendan picked up his kicking prowess.

Even one no longer with the program is having an effect on this year's team. Cohasset fans can get a kick out of that.

"Eric Wasel is probably become the second best lineman in the South Shore League behind Will Lynner," he said. "He's learning from Will. When we do drills, he lines up against Will. It's been paying off. Eric has done a phenomenal job."

Carrier has filled in for John Maher after Maher suffered an injury, and has been outstanding.

"Jack Carrier has two touchdowns and an interception in the past two games," Afanasiw said. "He's been a nice surprise. He's come on the scene quickly. He's a great story. He's six-foot, six-one and has great speed. He's become a very good defender. You can't have enough of that, especially in the defensive backfield."

One factor Friday night could be weather.

Driving rain, cold and high winds have been forecast.

Thaat could affect play, or even the game itself.

Depending on the weather, there has been talk of moving the game to Saturday.

Cohasset has played in the rain more than once this season, and has played well.

With their offensive schemes based around Valentine's ground game and strong line play, rain could benefit the Skippers, but it could also take away the team's balance, which has been a big part of the winning streak.

"You can't plan for weather," Afanasiw said. "We'll do what we always do. We'll take what they give us and deal with the elements, use our strengths and minimize mistakes. If it's really horrible, we could push it back to Saturday. You'd hate for a game this big for both teams to be decided by rain or wind. Either way, we're ready to go."

South Coastal Hockey roundup

By Mark Ducharme
CORRESPONDENT

The Grizzlies and the Roadrunner staged an offensive hockey fans delight in their meeting this past Sunday in the South Coastal Men's Hockey League.

It appeared that the Grizzlies were going to have an easy time as they built a 6-2 lead, but the Roadrunners got two goals from Bob Ward to spark a four goal run in the last 10 minutes to tie the game, 6-6 to force a shootout However, Joe Bevilacqua of Abington scored the only goal in the shoot out to give the Grizzlies a 7-6 win. Bevilacqua had four goals and two assists in the game.

Joe McCafferty had two goals and two assists and Jim Bristol had a goal for the Grizzlies.

The first-place team in the Masters Div. the Thunder got two goals from Mike Joy of Hanover in their 5-1 win over the Vipers. Mike Maguire also of Hanover, Ed McVeigh and Clem Fillion of Halifax were the other goal scorers for the Thunder and Peter Fallon of Hanover scored for the Vipers.

Bob McCabe of Pembroke scored three goals and Jeff bradley also of Pembroke and Keith Smith of Marshfield added one each as the Wolves defeated the Aeros, 5-2.

The Rangers controlled the first half of the game with goals by Darron Jacobs of Pembroke, Bob Bibeau and Chris Regan of Marshfield, but had to hang on for a 3-2 win over the Maple Leafs to remain undefeated (5-0) in the Classics Div.

The Canadiens' Tim McCrystal assisted on three goals and goalie Paul DuRoss recorded a shutout in their team's 3-0 win over the Bruins. John Hernon and Jim Donnelly both of Marshfield and Mike Martin of Pembroke scored the goals for the Canadiens.

John Guilderson and Pat Burke scored a goal and assisted on one each in the Red Wings' 4-2 Classics Div. win over the Black Hawks. Harry Mathews of Duxbury and Bob Stafford of Scituate added a goal each for the Red Wings.

The defending Legends Div. champion Toros got a dazzling 27 save effort from goalie Ken Menkello of Pembroke and a goal and two assists from Paul Brinkman in their 5-2 win over the Fighting Saints. Ray Degaust had two goals and Mike Rober of Norwell added a goal on breakaway for the Toros.

Pembroke's Mark Frano stopped 18 shots to give the Stingers a 2-0 Legends Div. win over the Crusaders.

Fall Indoor "Rookie League" & Little League "Battery Club" return to South Shore Baseball Club

The "Rookie League" baseball program, specifically designed for Kindergarten boys and girls between the ages of 5 and 7 with little or no previous experience in organized sports, as well as the invaluable "Battery Club" for Little League aged pitchers and catchers, are both soon returning to the South Shore Baseball Club (SSBC) in Hingham.

Each youngster will receive two hours of instruction each week opposite their school schedule. The four-week program includes a team practice on either Monday (9:30 or 1 p.m.) or Tuesday (9:30 a.m. or 1 p.m.) along with a game on Thursday or Friday. Those in morning kindergarten may sign up for afternoon baseball, while those who go to school in the afternoon can play baseball in the morning.

"Our professional staff excels at teaching the great game of baseball to youngsters," SSBC president/Director Frank Niles, Jr. said. "Players are never too young to learn how to play baseball the right way and have fun doing it."

SSBC's experienced, professional staff, including instructors Jason Trask and Jack Larkin, emphasize basics and fundamentals, as well as safety and sportsmanship. All "Rookie League" players receive a T-shirt and hat. The ball will be pitched – no hitting off a tee!

Another SSBC "Rookie League" session for Kindergarten aged playes will be held indoors in January.

Little League Battery Club

SSBC's first of three Little League Battery Club sessions will be held four consecutive Saturdays, Oct. 31, Nov. 7, 14 and 21 from 10 a.m. through noon for players of ages eight to 12.

"Our Battery Club has been designed for pitchers and catchers who want to learn and work on the finer points of baseball's two most important positions," Niles noted.

Pitching instruction will concentrate on proper mechanics from the wind-up and stretch, strategy and pitch selection, different grips and its effects on the ball, pick-off moves, fielding, and positive attitude. Catching sessions focus on correct receiving and throwing techniques, pitch selection, blocking low pitches, and overall strategy.

Additional Battery Club sessions will be held Jan. 30-Feb. 20 and Mar. 27-Apr. 17 for 8 to 12 years olds; Feb. 27-Mar. 20 for ages 13 to 15; Mar. 1-11 for High School age players. Mar. 5-15, ages 15 to 18

Scituate Duathlon on Saturday morning

The Scituate Duathlon will be taking the streets on Saturday morning, starting at 10:15 a.m. at Cole Parkway.

The race sandwiches a 12-mile bike ride between a 2-mile and 2.7 mile run.

The race, has sold out in its first year with a crowd of over 550 competitors, including the current World Champion Jarrod Shoemaker.

The race benefits local charities Friendship Home in Norwell, Woman Living Authentically in Hingham, and Girls on the Run in Boston.

The race's proceeds will support local charities with the goal of empowering women, their children and their families. Our two charities include Women Living Authentically (supporting women's initiatives and anti-violence campaigns) and Friendship Home (building a respite home for adults with disabilities and supporting their continuing social, educational, physical and mental needs).

On September 27, 2009, Friendship Home broke ground on their $3Million center for families and individuals with developmental disabilities such as Down's Syndrome, Autism, and severe learning disabilities.

The Scituate Duathlon will feature a full day family-friendly expo that will highlight the charities, provide a live 5-band concert for spectators, and feature a post party at one of the Harbor's best restaurants, Riva, open to all racers and spectators. Charities and their members will be on hand to help welcome their supporters and will be running many of the expo events for kids and adults.

The race is drawing competitors from more than 10 states and all over Massachusetts. With the Red Sox gone and the Patriots losing, this is one of the best sports events of New England's week.

The course has recently been altered for safety purposes, but will retain the same length.

Roads will not be closed during the event.

GPS For Mariners – This course is a modern learning experience that focuses on GPS equipment typically owned by the recreational boater. This course is the result of an exciting synergy between textbook's publisher, the book's author, and the Auxiliary. Fee is $35.

Both courses take place at Cohasset Town Hall on Saturdays from 9 a.m. to 1 p.m. BS&S: Nov. 7, 14, 21. GPS: Jan. 9

Computer Explorers – Meets Tuesdays at Cohasset Recreation Center

Engineering: Those who like building with Legos will enjoy this class. Students use LEGO materials to build simple and complex machines as they learn about structures, forces, gear math, simple machines and motorized projects. Using teamwork and a series of challenges, groups will work together to create motorized systems and advanced challenges.

Digital Movie Making: Are you the next Steven Spielberg? Students will create their own Indiana Jones movie using special digital movie making cameras and software. As directors and producers participants will work in teams to create a story and script, build various Indiana Jones Lego scenes and film a movie. Graphic editing techniques and stop motion animation will be used, background noise and music will be added, and the movie will be shown at a private screening on the last day of class to share with family and friends. All students will get a copy of their movie on a CD-ROM upon completion of class.

Engineering 2: Nov. 3 through Dec. 8, 3:45 to 4:30 p.m. For ages 9 through 12. Cost for the six-week class is $90.

Junior Engineering: Nov. 17 through Dec. 22, 4:45 to 5:30 p.m. For ages 7 through 9. Cost of the six-week class is $90.

Kids Just Love Crafts – Join others for a jam filled program of ooey, gooey arts and crafts, stories and songs. Watch your 2 to 4 year-old child make a mess and have some fun as they create crafts that can be treasured for a lifetime. Space is limited to 10 children with a parent. Session 2: Nov. 5 through Dec. 17; Session 3: Jan. 7 through Feb. 11; Session 4: March 4 through April 8; Session 5: April 29 through June 3. Takes place at the Cohasset Recreation Center on Thursdays, from 10 to 10:45 a.m. Fee is $60.

Creative Cupcakes – Join Kitchen Kids and create amazing cupcakes from the book "Hello Cupcake." Each student will bring home a plate full of creative cupcakes. This class brings art and food together in a fun new way. Grades one through five Sundays 12:30 to 2 p.m. First Session Oct. 18 to Nov. 1 Second Session: Nov. 8 to Nov. 22. Fee: $75.

The Gingerbread Man – Get into the holiday season by creating your very own Gingerbread friends. Each child will decorate gingerbread cookies with royal icing and sweet treats galore. We will read the story "The Gingerbread Man." Care giver must attend. Ages 2-6. Fee is $15 per child. Sunday, Dec. 6 from 12:30 to 1:30 p.m.

Gingerbread House – Get into the Holiday season by creating your very own mini mansion. The workshop includes festive fun, a pre assembled Gingerbread house, royal icing and sweet treats galore. Hot cocoa and cookies will be served. Sign up today. All ages. $35. Sunday, Dec. 13, from 12:30 to 2 p.m.

Piano Instruction – Instant Piano for Hopelessly Busy People-one night only-Monday, Oct. 19, 6:30 to 10 p.m. People can learn enough in this one workshop to play almost any song on the piano with two hands. Then go on to perfect your technique at home using a home-study CD and workbook provided by the instructor. Fee is$64. Takes place at Cohasset Town Hall.

How to Play Piano By Ear – One night only-Monday, Oct. 26, 6:30 to 10 p.m. Students will learn how to play songs off the radio, and learn how to transpose and improve overall musicianship. Open to musicians, not just piano players, who have a basic understanding of chord theory. Beginners should take Instant Piano For Hopelessly Busy People as a prerequisite. Guided by the course workbook and included CD, developed by the founder of this workshop, people can continue to perfect technique at their own pace. Fee is $64. Takes place at Cohasset Town Hall.

Babysitter Training Course – This one-day, three-hour course is designed to assist fifth through eighth graders to be better babysitters and to learn the do's and don'ts of being home alone. The course will cover information on child development, playing with younger children, basic first aid, fire safety and prevention and the overall responsibilities of babysitting. Instructor: Kim Cleary, nurse and mom. Each class is limited to 18 pre-registered students. Takes place at Paul Pratt Library, Saturday, Oct. 24, or Saturday, Nov. 2, from 9 a.m. to noon. Fee is $18.

Good Manners for Beginners class offers beginner - level instructions in all of the dog obedience commands including heel work, and offers problem solving demos on issues like mouthing and jumping and helps you become "leader of the pack." Obedience and Distractions is for dogs who understand very basic concepts such as "sit, stay, come, and down" but who have trouble being consistent. The class teaches dogs to listen with greater distractions each week, less and less leash control, with the owner further and further away. Events listed below have no requirements other than a good temperament and up to date vaccinations. Every Wednesday for five weeks, Nov. 18 through Dec. 16. 6:30 p.m. Obedience with Distractions Class; 7:30 p.m. Good Manners for Beginners Class. Fee is $120.

Vacation Xtreme and December Stay-cation – Just because the kids have the time off from school doesn't mean you've got the time off work, so Cohasset Recreation is picking up the slack with vacation week programs for children of all ages.

Vacation Xtreme – For children in grades six, seven and eight, expanding upon the popular Summer Xtreme program, the Xtreme Team will be offering vacation week trips to all new destinations. More information to come. Call or check the Web site for details.

Nicholas Belezos of Hingham will be taking part in a walk-a-thon sponsored by NephCure on Sunday at Wompatuck State Park.

Sunday's walk to help Nicholas, others

Raises awareness about kidney disease

By Liz Fuller
CORRESPONDENT

Fall marks the beginning of school for most kids, but Nicholas Belezos of Hingham isn't sure how much time he will spend in a classroom this year. Nicholas, who suffers from Nephrotic Syndrome, a kidney disease, says he has missed a lot of school over the years.

"I go to the hospital a lot to get rid of the water that is in my tissues," Nicholas says. The 18-year-old explains that the filters in his kidneys do not hold the protein necessary to clean his blood. The protein then leaks into his urine and there is not enough left to absorb water from tissues. "My body swells up," Nicholas says. "I am also on steroids to suppress my immune system, but that causes me to gain weight, along with the water weight from the swelling."

Nicholas says that due to his condition he isn't able to attend school regularly, participate in many activities, or play sports. "The steroids weaken my bones," he says. "So I can't play any sports." Nicholas says that the disease has significantly impacted his body. "My body swells, I get nauseous, I gain a lot of weight because of the swelling and the steroids, and my growth has been stunted."

He explains that his kidney disease also affects his family. "My parents have to take me to the hospital a lot and when I'm sick my mother has to stop doing whatever she is doing to help me. If she is working on a fundraiser, she loses a week or two because she is helping me. I can't go to family parties if I am sick, so my mother can't go either."

Nicholas's mother Katina says that her son has suffered with Nephrotic Syndrome since he was diagnosed at age three-and-a-half. She also says he has had two strokes, the first at age five. "You don't expect a child to have a stroke," Katina says. She says it was discovered that he had a blood clot at the base of two veins. "He recovered within a month, but he has been on Coumadin [an anticoagulant that helps reduce clots from forming in the blood] ever since."

"When he has to stay at the hospital, it's as if he lives there," Katina says. She stays at the hospital with her son and pays close attention to the administering of treatments. "Sometimes mistakes are made," she says. "You have to watch like a hawk." Katina admits that she is very vocal about her son and his care, but that she has to be since she is his only advocate. "There have been mistakes with his medication, the order in which it's supposed to be given. I've had to speak up and say that it's not right." Katina says that Nicholas also takes growth hormones and has grown 3 inches since beginning treatment.

Katina has been involved in fundraising for many years because of Nicholas's condition. She has worked with the National Kidney Foundation and is currently involved with the NephCure Foundation, an organization that exclusively supports research for the cause and cure of both Nephrotic Syndrome and another serious kidney disease, Focal Segmental Glomerulosclerosis (FSGS).

"They're so close to finding a cure," Katina says of the grant that is funding research for a potential biological cure out of Massachusetts General Hospital.

The Belezos family is participating in a Walk-a-thon sponsored by NephCure on Sunday at Wompatuck State Park. The NephCure Walk is NephCure's walking fundraiser designed to raise vital dollars to further the organization's mission of saving kidneys and saving lives. More than a fundraiser, The Nephcure Walk provides support for those lives that have been touched by Nephrotic Syndrome and FSGS while raising awareness in communities.

Cohasset's Kathleen Broderick, who runs the Northeast chapter of NephCure and is the chair of the Walk-a-thon, is thrilled to have Nicholas's story featured. "Nicholas has been through a lot," Broderick says. "He is such a special person." Broderick says that as of now, the foundation has received approximately $20,000 in donations.

Katina says that many local retailers have donated snacks, gift certificates, and other items for the event. "Whole Foods has donated fruit, Trader Joe's has donated water, Stop & Shop and Shaw's have donated gift certificates, and 3A Marine has donated tents," she says. "There will be two bands, face painting and games for the kids. And it's only a two-mile walk, so anyone can do it."

Katina admits that Nicholas's condition has been difficult. "He's been teased by, not only kids, but adults, too," she says sadly. "It's been a struggle, but he's alive, and that is what's important."

The NephCure Walk will allow community members to give back locally and support South Shore families by participating in the fight to discover the cure. Registration for the walk will begin at noon and the walk will start at 1 p.m. There is no registration fee but fundraising is encouraged. Any walker who collects over $100 will receive a free T-shirt. For more information, contact Kathleen Broderick at kbroderick@idealworld.net or 781-249-9598.

North Carolinian to log miles for Miracles in Boston Marathon

To commemorate the memory of Dr. Tucker Collins of Cohasset, who died in June 2007, Vickie Leff of Cary, N.C., a friend of Collins, will run the 114th Boston Marathon on April 19, 2010, to benefit Children's Hospital Boston. As a member of Children's Miles for Miracles Team, runners have an extra incentive to push them across the finish line: helping children and families who receive care at Children's.

Miles for Miracles team members commit to raising funds to benefit Children's Hospital Boston's areas of greatest need: patient care; medical research; recruitment and training; and community health initiatives.

Golden Living Center of Cohasset is partnering with Jacobs Elementary School to collect school supplies for the 2009 school year.

Golden Living Center helps stock school

Golden Living Center of Cohasset partnered with Jacobs Elementary School in Hull to collect school supplies for the 2009 school year. Golden Living Center of Cohasset made this program a team project and enlisted the help of staff, residents and resident's family members.

"Like nursing homes, our public schools continue to face budget cuts and shortages," said Robert Rego, executive director of Golden Living Center of Cohasset. "School administration, teachers and parents alike work hard to make sure students on the South Shore have the needed supplies, and we'd like to help too."

School supply collection began Aug. 3, and supplies were delivered to the school the week of Sept. 21.

"I'm really pleased with the support we've received from the staff, residents and resident's families," said Rego. "Their feedback has been very positive and they were excited to be involved in such a worthwhile project."

Golden Living Center of Cohasset provides healthcare for up to 72 residents, including those needing skilled nursing and rehabilitation care. The nursing home has been part of the Cohasset community since 1974, and is at 1 Chief Justice Cushing Highway. For more information, call 781-383-9060.

Fitness Together to host open house

The public is invited to meet Fitness Together's director Michael Cardoza and his trainers for refreshments and a studio tour from 5:30 to 7:30 p.m., on Wednesday, Oct. 21, at 790 Chief Justice Cushing Hwy. Come see how Fitness Together's holistic approach to health without the crowds or competition of a gym environment may be the right choice.

Fitness Together Cohasset provides one-on-one, private, individualized personal training programs that include nutritional and exercise coaching. Their fitness program incorporates cardiovascular training, strength training, Pilates and yoga-style movements to achieve results.

The public opening will be on Friday, Nov. 6, with a reception from 6 to 9 p.m. The gallery is located at located at 450 Harrison Ave, No. 63, Boston.

Gallery Benoit in Boston will present Cohasset-based artist Robert Merton in a group show of contemporary art Nov. 6 though 30. The public opening will be on Friday, Nov. 6, with a reception from 6 to 9 p.m. The gallery is located at located at 450 Harrison Ave, No. 63, Boston.

A member of the South Shore Art Center, Merton has painted for 15 years, including at the Boston Visual School and the Accademia di Belle Atri Lorenzo da Viterbo in Italy. This year, Merton held two solo shows: Temperatures in Miami and at Galerie Lareuse in Washington, D.C. However, he may be proudest of a show closer to home, when his four-year-old son won second prize for an abstract painting at the South Shore Arts Festival in June.

Cohasset-based Paul Ognibene, developer of high-end condominium residences at Dana Park Place in Cambridge, commissioned Merton to create original artwork for the building's lobby. "The quality and beauty of Robert's paintings helped elevate Dana Park Place's overall design. We wanted to provide a distinctive experience for discerning residents, and Robert's art reflects this aesthetic."

Expressionistic paintings that actively engage the viewer and evoke intense emotional responses – this best describes Merton's recent works. His mood-shifting exhibition is a collection of abstract and gestural paintings that evolve in stages, based on Merton's responses to the canvas's progress. His overall oeuvre has an abstract and tactile appearance, but the outcome of each work is twofold. Merton's darker works are luminous and textured, creating a sense of anticipation, almost entrapment, which forces the viewer to embark on an intellectual and psychological journey to a safe retreat. His cooler paintings, with their chalky, organic hues and thick impastos are impressionistic and calming in appearance but contain underlying undercurrents of melancholic introspection.

Gallery Benoit's exhibition will feature recent works by artists based in Boston and Europe. Hours are Wednesday through Sunday from 11 a.m. to 6 p.m. For more information visit www.robertfmerton.com or www.gallery-benoit.com

CHS Class of '99 reunion

The Cohasset High School Class of 1999 10 year reunion will take place from 7:30 p.m. to 12:30 a.m., on Friday Nov. 27, at the Red Lion Inn Cave. This is an opportunity for everyone to share memories from their years at CHS. Admission to the reunion is free. Music and appetizers will be provided and there will be a cash bar so bring money to purchase drinks.

For more information, e-mail Jill Magner at cohasset99@gmail.com or Alyssa McNamara Reed at pumkinpumper@gmail.com.

Oktoberfest tonight at Depot Court building!

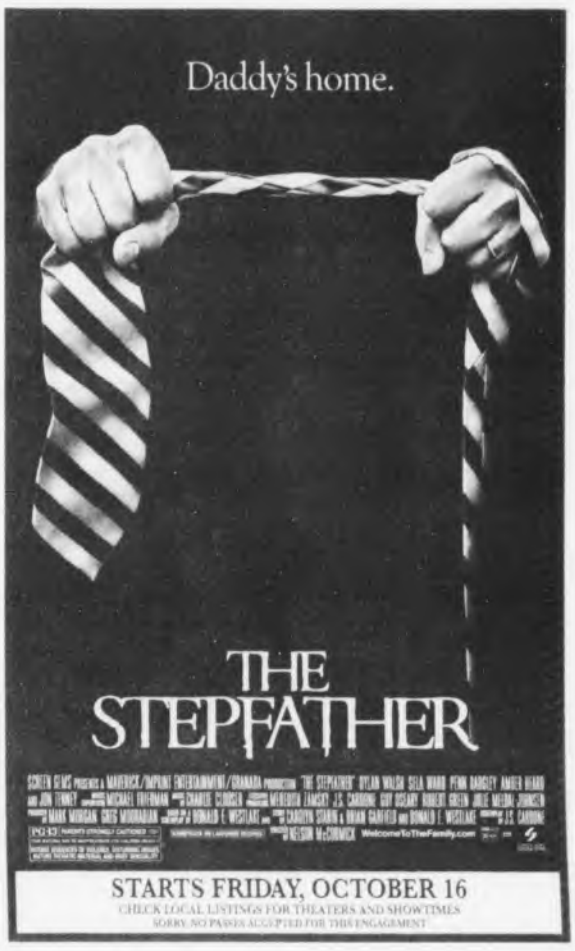
Come Celebrate Depot Court's First Anniversary with Oktoberfest! The businesses at 15 Depot Court are hosting an anniversary party on Friday, Oct. 16th from 6:30 to 9 pm. Pink Tulip, The Focus Gallery, Mariposa Massage, Balance Studio, and Sullivan Garrity and Donnelly Insurance will open their doors late on Friday. Come join them for refreshments, music and German fare.

The attractions include: Bratwurst by the "Sausage Guy" from Fenway Park, beer tasting provided by Cohasset resident Rhonda Kallman (Edison Beer), German wine tasting at Pink Tulip, Desserts provided by new neighbor, Scooter Scoops, and music, gift basket drawing, and discount certificates.

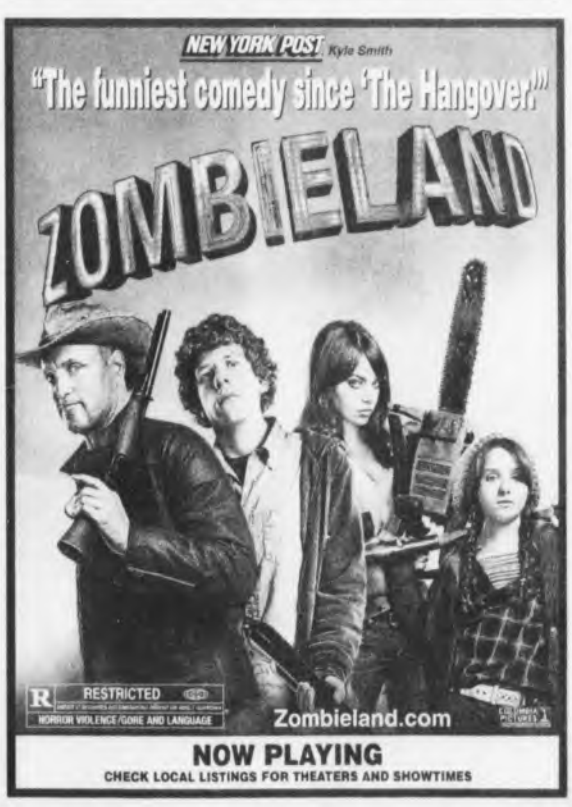
Pink Tulip Clothes & Accessories for women, launched a year ago by Christine Nagle, has become a destination for the best variety of women's sportswear, special occasion dresses, shoes, jewelry and accessories — as well as for the most attentive service.

The Focus Gallery expanded their venue with the move to Depot Court, and has been recognized as one of the premier galleries of the region, and one of the only ones specializing in fine art photography. The breadth of subjects and styles represented make for intriguing, dynamic viewing.

On the service side the building saw the creation of Balance Studio by owner Kelly Lynch, an integrated classical Pilates and Yoga studio boasting the most highly trained and energetic Pilates and yoga teachers on the South Shore.



Mariposa Body, opened by owner Cindy Doody, occupies a calming second floor space consisting of two treatment rooms with organic flannel linens and sustainable environmentally conscience products.



Sullivan, Garrity and Donnelly Insurance Agencies, founded in 1922, expanded their third location at Depot Court as a full service agency. They represent over 25 insurance companies, with capacity for all lines of personal and business insurance. They have four brokers in Cohasset (Sean Cunning, Christine Cunning, Kerry O'Keefe and Kurt DeVries) and one in Norwell.

Each of the businesses express their great appreciation to the town and to their customers for their devotion and loyalty during an obviously tenuous year to launch their businesses. From them all, "Prost!"

Depot Court is located across from the South Shore Art Center and adjacent to the town parking lot.

Horoscope

SALOME'S STARS
FOR RELEASE WEEK OF
OCT. 26, 2009

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) Caution dominates the Sheep's monetary aspect this week. Rams and Ewes might want to shear their big spending plans until a more favorable financial picture begins to emerge by week's end.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) Thrift counts both at home and at work. So you might want to rethink major purchases or investments. Also, be wary of a so-called revelation about a previous decision.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) Both household budgets and workplace accounts might benefit from some judicious trimming of unnecessary expenses. A partnership could lead to an unexpected challenge.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) A previously overlooked opportunity could re-emerge with a new travel-related matter. Check this out carefully to see if it's what you really want before you decide one way or another.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) This could be the start of a new career-changing phase, so start marking down your many accomplishments for those who need to know how much you have to offer. Good luck.

VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) It's not too early for the sometimes procrastinating Virgo to start making those long-distance travel plans. The sooner you decide where to go, when to go and how to go, the better.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) Financial matters once again figure in any major action you might take regarding career, travel or other endeavors. You'll want a ready reserve to help you back up those moves.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) Trying to resolve a problem in a personal relationship could be more difficult than you'd expected. Look into the possibility that someone might be interfering for his or her own reasons.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) A project you once rejected might be more attractive because of changes that you feel you can now work with. The weekend is especially favorable to family matters.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) This is a good week for the gregarious Goat to enjoy being with people you care for. You might even want to show off those creative kitchen skills you're so adept at.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) A colleague might think your attitude is patronizing or even outright insulting. True. That might be his or her problem. But you might want to take some reassuring steps anyway.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) It's a good time to jettison those old concepts about a family matter you might have been holding on to. This will help make room for a new and more enlightened way of dealing with it.

(c) 2009 King Features Synd., Inc.

BORN THIS WEEK:
You like to analyze a puzzling situation before you try to resolve it. This makes you excel at getting things done the right way.

Fun By The Numbers

Like puzzles? Then you'll love sudoku. This mind-bending puzzle will have you hooked from the moment you square off, so sharpen your pencil and put your sudoku savvy to the test!

Here's How It Works:

Sudoku puzzles are formatted as a 9x9 grid, broken down into nine 3x3 boxes. To solve a sudoku, the numbers 1 through 9 must fill each row, column and box. Each number can appear only once in each row, column and box. You can figure out the order in which the numbers will appear by using the numeric clues already provided in the boxes. The more numbers you name, the easier it gets to solve the puzzle!

Rivers keeps rolling

Comedian performs Oct. 16 in Boston

By R. Scott Reedy
CORRESPONDENT

Joan Rivers will perform at the Wilbur Theatre, 246 Tremont St., Boston, on Oct. 16.

When your first off-off-Broadway role is a lesbian with a crush on a character being played by Barbra Streisand, it doesn't matter if the play closes quickly. You're bound to make a lasting impression. That's what happened to a young Joan Rivers, who like her even younger co-star, has become a fixture in show business, 50 years after the final curtain fell on the little-known "Seawood."

It hasn't hurt that Rivers is a tireless worker whose talents as a tell-it-like-it-is comedian, Tony-nominated actress, author and playwright, Emmy Award-winning television talk show host, jewelry designer, and businesswoman have contributed to her impressive staying power.

Rivers has been busier than ever this year, winning NBC-TV's "The Celebrity Apprentice," earning a Daytime Emmy nomination as "Bubbe" on the animated PBS-TV children's series "Arthur," based on characters by author and longtime Hingham resident Marc Brown, and releasing not one, but two new books, "Men Are Stupid and They Like Big Boobs: A Woman's Guide to Beauty Through Plastic Surgery" and "Murder at the Academy Awards: A Red Carpet Murder Mystery," both from Simon & Schuster. If that weren't enough, Rivers' latest television series, "How'd You Get So Rich?" just finished its first season on TV Land. While many 76-year-olds might be booking a Bermuda cruise, Rivers has instead hit the road with her comedy act, which will bring her to Boston's Wilbur Theatre on Friday. The always outspoken performer was at home in New York recently, between meetings about her QVC product lines, when she took time out to chat with Town Commons.

Town Commons: You've done everything from guest spots on sitcoms and soap operas to your own daytime and late-night talk shows. What do you really think about reality TV?

Joan Rivers: When it is real, reality TV is fabulous, because you can't make it up. I like a little more structure than a lot of the shows seem to have, but when you throw in a train wreck just to manufacture tension, then it isn't genuine. If it is not going to be real, then I'd rather watch Larry David's show (HBO's "Curb Your Enthusiasm") anytime.

TC: You generated controversy, not to mention high ratings, with your on-air squabbling with Annie Duke, the professional poker player whom you beat to win "The Celebrity Apprentice." Was the anger real or the result of artful editing?

JR: I feel absolutely right about what I did on that show. I have no regrets at all, because it was for charity, which is what really matters. I went over to Annie Duke right after the show, because it was a show, and I said it was really a win-win for both of us because she had actually made more money for her charity. She wouldn't even speak. She just gave me the finger. That says an awful lot about who she really is as a person.

TC: You beat not only Duke, but many others to win that show. What was the secret to your success?

JR: Design and quality are the focus of my jewelry business and "The Celebrity Apprentice" is more about creativity and marketing than business so my skills were a natural match for the competition.

TC: You've sold a lot of Joan Rivers jewelry over the years. Do you wear it?

JR: I have some real jewelry that my late husband, Edgar Rosenberg, gave me that I wear for very special occasions. Otherwise, I wear only pieces from the Joan Rivers Collection. And I happen to know that Mrs. Obama has been wearing my flower pin, too. A great many well-known women wear my stuff, even if some of them won't admit it. I adore the jewelry business and I love wearing my own designs.

TC: What do you have your sights set on next?

JR: I'd love to go back to Broadway or do another late-night television show. I also just signed a 10-year deal to headline at The Venetian Las Vegas. My life is that I go to dinner with the same eight people, or I'm in a New York theater seeing a show, or I'm working. I love to work so I'll always find time to do my act. Besides, I think Joan Rivers is the funniest woman alive today.

Joan Rivers will be at the Wilbur Theatre, 246 Tremont St., Boston, on Oct. 16. For tickets and information, visit the box office, call 800-745-3000 or go online at thewilburtheatre.com.

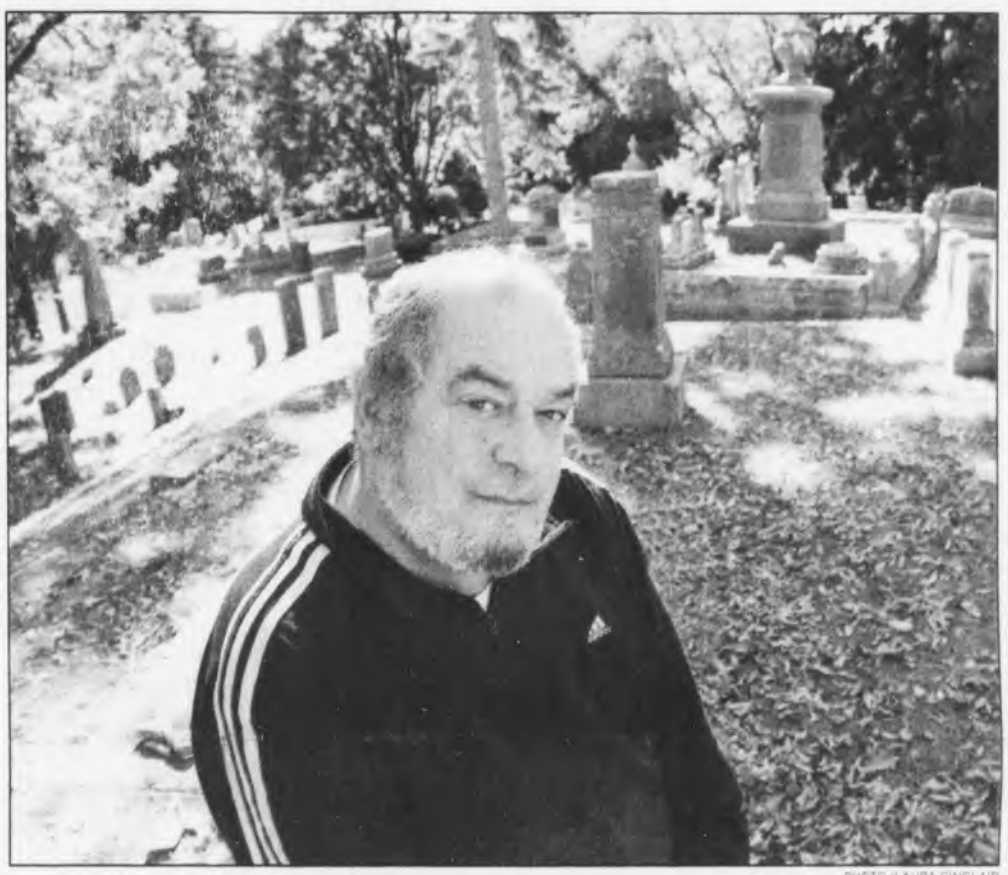
St. John tragedy detailed

Paul Fiori pens book about shipwreck

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

Paul Fiori, a lifelong Cohasset resident, loves history. Get him talking about his hometown's history and you might have to clear your schedule for the next hour, at least.

Passionate, curious and motivated, Fiori became a first-time author last year when he self-published a book detailing one the most famous and tragic events to happen off Cohasset's coast: the wreck of the Brig St. John.



The story of the shipwrecked tall ship carrying more than 100 Irish immigrants to a new life in America before it got caught in a northeast storm has captured many hearts and minds. On the morning of Oct. 7, 1848, the town of Cohasset awoke to a terrible disaster. The St. John hit the infamous Grampus Ledge and practically disintegrated into the ocean.

"It didn't take any time at all before the ship was broken up," Fiori said. "Once they hit the ledge they were up a creek without a paddle."

The waves rushed in, crashed over the boat and each receding wave took more lives.

"In terms of loss of life, there's no comparison. There no other shipwreck (off Cohasset's coast) like this one," Fiori said. Forty-five bodies were 'Meeting House Pond' makeover?

Engineering study on table

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

At the 2008 Special Town Meeting, voters approved a $15,000 allocation to do preliminary engineering work to overhaul Meeting House Pond (the pond on the common). Now, the plans are ready and the town could move forward with a renovation of the iconic pond.

John Cavanaro of Cavanaro Consulting in Norwell developed two options — clay bottom and concrete bottom — with two price points.

Two years ago, Merle Brown and the Boy Scouts cleaned out the pond. The job hasn't been done in at least five years and there were four or five feet of leaves and muck, he said.

The last time the pond was renovated was in the late 1980s. "The Witches of Eastwick" movie producers gave the town money to rebuild the pond. However, they chose "gray clay," which turns the water cloudy. As a result, sand was placed on top of the clay to keep the water from clouding up, but at the same time, makes it difficult to clean.

The renovation plans include creating a system where water can be recirculated through the fountain. Right now, the pond is fed almost continuously with domestic water. More controls would be incorporated to limit the waste of water.

Minutes confusion

Obama speech direction 'fuzzy'

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

Most of the time the approval of meeting minutes is more of an administrative task with little more than a quick vote of approval.

At Wednesday night's School Committee meeting a review of the Sept. 16 meeting minutes — the night of the first discussion on President Obama's back to school speech — that was not the case. The review led to a debate, several amendments to the minutes, and an understanding the committee needs to be very clear they are all on the same page in their decisions.

The confusion in the minutes — and at the meeting they represented — centered on how the School Committee directed the Superintendent on the issue of showing the President's back-to-school speech in classrooms going forward.

Some members of the committee felt there was a consensus that teachers should be encouraged to show the speech and a notification letter is sent to parents before it is shown with no opt-out option. Other members felt they directed the superintendent to follow the guidelines set forth by the Department of Elementary and Secondary Education (which recommended schools respect parents requests for their child not to participate) and/or a superintendent's organi-

POLICE BEAT

Be on the lookout for deer

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

After a cruiser hit a deer last year, police cruisers are equipped with deer whistles attached near the front bumper.

Police warn that deer are now in rut meaning amorous males are out looking for females. During the "mating season" deer are more active and are more likely to dart across the road.

Last week a 54-year-old Scituate man in a rented 2009 Chrysler PT Cruiser hit a deer after it ran in front of him on Route 3A near Cohasset Imports. The accident occurred at about 7 a.m. on Thursday (Oct. 15). The motorist reported a broken windshield.

The deer was still alive but severely injured and had to be put down, police said. MassHighway was contacted to dispose of the animal.

Police said certain areas to be extra vigilant for deer crossing are Route 3A between Stop & Shop and Pond Street; along Route 3A between the Hingham line and the train station; and along North Main Street by Wheelwright Park.

After a cruiser hit a deer last year, police cruisers are equipped with deer whistles attached near the front bumper. Deer can hear the whistle but people cannot. The plastic whistles are inexpensive and available at auto-parts stores, police said.

Search warrant

On Saturday, Oct. 17, with the assistance of Norwell and Hull police, Cohasset police detectives executed a search warrant at a residence in Hull where evidence related to several recent purse thefts that occurred in Cohasset was seized. The investigation is continuing and Cohasset Police expect to file felony charges against several suspects in the near future.

The search warrant follows on the heels of recent incidents including a couple over the past two weeks.

One of the incidents at 11:07 a.m. on Wednesday (Oct. 14) involved a customer's wallet that was stolen out of her pocketbook while she was at the fish counter at Shaw's, police said. Detectives reviewed the surveillance video.

Another incident related to the search warrant involved a woman attempting to cash a stolen check at Stop & Shop on Thursday (Oct. 15) and again on Friday (Oct. 16).

Window broken

Police believe a broken bathroom window in a Jerusalem Road home reported last week was an incidence of vandalism. The homeowners, who had been away for the weekend, arrived home on Columbus Day (Oct. 12) to discover the broken window and a tennis ball inside. Police did not find any evidence of a break-in and it remains a vandalism investigation.

Yellow blanket

A cell phone caller reported a naked couple under a yellow blanket on Sandy Beach at about 4 p.m. on Tuesday (Oct. 13) and thought they were having sex on the beach.

As it turned out, the couple under the blanket were clothed. They were from Westwood and were sent on their way, police said.

Hitchhiking

Police responded to a concerned caller who spotted a 12-or13-year-old boy in a gray Polo shirt and with a blue backpack thumbing in the vicinity of King and Beechwood streets at about 5p.m. on Tuesday (Oct. 13).

Police were unable to locate the boy.

Police said while it is not illegal to hitchhike they would check on a boy that age to make sure that he was OK.

Hit and run

A 55-year-old Scituate man who had been having lunch with a friend at Victoria's in Tedeschi Plaza at 3 p.m. on Sunday (Oct. 18) reported that someone hit the front of his 2006 Jaguar that was parked in the lot at the shopping center. The other vehicle took off. There was damage to the front of the car, police said. Officers are reviewing parking lot surveillance video.

Barking dog

A resident of Summer Street has been given a final warning about her barking dog, police said. The barking has been an ongoing problem and subject of neighborhood complaints.

Bow season

The bow season for hunters is under way. However, someone put a hunting stand in a tree complete with bait and a camera off South Main Street – but the tree is on private property that is clearly marked "no hunting and no trespassing." Police turned the matter over to the Environmental Police who are specialists in these matters.

Stolen car

At 2:14 a.m. on Sunday (Oct. 18) Marion police reported recovering a 2003 Ford F250 pickup owned by a 26-year-old Cohasset man that had been apparently stolen out of his King Street driveway. The vehicle owner reported his pickup was stolen at 8:10 a.m. Sunday.

Be careful when using Craigslist

A police item in last week's Mariner about a resident advertising a swing set on Craigslist warrants some further detail.

The resident wants to let others know to be cautious when using Craigslist. Craigslist is an online, free classified Web site.

The Cohasset man advertised the $700 swing set with the fact it was for sale in bold letters, making it unlikely that someone would think it was free. An interested party wrote an email about the swing set being perfect for her niece. There was some communication back and forth about when to arrive.

Three people (two men and a woman) arrived at the Cohasset man's home at about 7 p.m. mid-week with a box truck and pickup truck.

The woman liked the swing set and asked if it was OK to take it apart. The trio had all the tools needed.

A few minutes later, the resident asked how they planned to pay – cash or check. The woman replied that she thought it was free. They were about one-quarter of the way through taking the structure apart and "knew their way around a swing set," he said.

The resident reported that the group starting acting very uncomfortable. They were told if they did not want to buy the swing set, to put it back together. They did so and quickly drove away.

"The incident left us very uneasy," the resident said. "It did not sit well with us."

He said he and his wife had the feeling the group might have premeditated this potential scam. They had the sense the trio figured that once the swing set was taken apart and loaded up, the Cohasset residents might have just said OK and let them take it.

He offered these tips if selling something on Craig's List: make sure to schedule a daytime appointment; have someone with you; discuss terms of the deal upfront; and only take cash.

Blackstone Tavern seeks Keno license

The town received notification that the Blackstone Tavern, located on Route 3A/King Street, is seeking a Keno license from the state. The town has the right to object, but must hold a public hearing first. The hearing will be scheduled for Monday, Nov. 9.

The initial comments from the board were in favor, or indifference, to the Keno license. Because of the restaurant's location in a commercial area, the Selectmen did not see a detriment. However, the board wanted to offer the public the opportunity to comment.

"You never know what you are going to hear (unless we have the hearing)," said Selectmen Chairman Paul Carlson.

In May a majority of the Board of Selectmen voted to appeal the decision of the state Lottery Commission that granted DiNero's Restaurant a Keno license. The Selectmen felt a Keno license would not enhance DiNero's already successful, established business and adding gambling to the predominately residential neighborhood would not be in the public interest. They also cited parking and noise concerns.

Selectman Fred Koed said the Blackstone Tavern's application should not be "as sensitive" as the DiNero's application.

Call the Selectmen's office at 781-383-4105 for more information and exact time of the hearing.

Snow and ice deficit

Last winter Cohasset and the Northeast were pummeled with snow and ice storms — and that means the bills to clean it all up and keep the roads safe added up. Because of that Special Town Meeting will be asked to authorize a transfer of $203,111.78 from Free Cash to fund the remaining fiscal 2009 snow and ice deficit. The snow and ice line item is one of the few legal deficits municipalities can have.

Selectman Ralph Dormitzer said given it was already snowing in Foxboro over the weekend the town could be in for another snowy year, "what can we do to lower this cost?)"

Town Manager Bill Griffin said the town had budgeted $25,000 more to the line item, "the level of service give is a public safety issue so there's not much we can do."

Griffin said the one possible savings could be to not to conduct snow removal in the village, which is done at night.

However, the Selectmen said that could affect businesses and merchants.

The Selectmen approved the placement of the article on the warrant and recommended its approval.

"We should look into how much it would cost to have the sidewalks heated," jokes Karen Quigley, Selectmen vice chair.

The Cohasset Director of Veterans' Services and community veterans service organizations will host a forum for veterans, dependents and surviving spouses at St. Anthony Parish hall, 10 Summer St., from 10 a.m. to noon, on Saturday, Oct. 24.

The forum will help assure that all who are entitled to assistance are aware of the local, state and federal programs designed to assist those in need. Emphasis will be placed on giving attendees the opportunity to participate.

The forum will highlight information sometimes unknown to surviving spouses, answer questions and help if needed and possible.

School board acknowledges violation

The School Committee acknowledged its violation of the Open Meeting Law at their meeting Wednesday night.

The Norfolk County District Attorney's Office determined the School Committee violated the Open Meeting Law with e-mail and phone conversations during the development and eventual decision to submit a Mariner commentary signed by four of the five School Committee members.

The opinion-piece, "Cohasset Schools respect all views" about President Obama's back-to-school speech appeared in the Sept. 25 edition.

"No one intended or was ever intending to break any laws."

— School Committee vice chair Alfred Slanetz

School Committee chairman Adrienne MacCarthy reported at the Oct. 7 meeting that they had self-reported the possibility of the violation of the state's Open Meeting Law.

"No one intended or was ever intending to break any laws," School Committee vice chair Alfred Slanetz said, adding it was always the intention for the letter to be published in the newspaper, "which is pretty public disclosure."

Slanetz said the school committee members were "laymen and volunteers" and they "learned their lesson the hard way."

School Committee unclear about opt-out option

zation (which recommended the opt-out option).

Before the discussion of the minutes was up on the agenda, a resident spoke to the confusion resulting from the meeting. Ron Goodwin, who watched the Sept. 19 meeting on television, said he was under the impression at the close of the discussion that there would be no "opt-out" option given to parents.

"I feel that it is a policy not founded on common sense," Goodwin said. "I don't want to belabor it, but I think it speaks to the core of what public education is about…free and open access and a learning environment."

Goodwin asked the School Committee to reconsider its decision and establish a clear policy that does not include an opt out.

At the Oct. 8 meeting, the School Committee directed the Superintendent to inform teachers to use the language currently found on the Cohasset Schools' Web site to let parents know via written letter that they plan to show President Obama's "Back to School" speech. Therefore, teachers must notify parents if they plan to show the speech but no permission slip with an opt-out clause is required.

School Committee chair Adrienne MacCarthy said they would take Goodwin's comments under advisement and review the school's policies in an upcoming policy and standards sub-committee meeting. However, she said the situation surrounding Obama's back-to-school speech was not a policy it was a decision.

"We may need to strengthen a policy so we have a clear direction to move forward," said MacCarthy.

After some back and forth the committee moved on, but shortly came back to the issue when discussing the minutes of the Sept. 16 meeting.

Again the discussion centered on how the committee directed the superintendent to handle the back-to-school speech going forward at the Sept. 16 meeting.

School Committee member Helene Lieb said it was clear to her that the committee was not supporting the opt out and superintendent was to encourage teachers to show the speech to students.

"I was there, I don't think I was comatose," Lieb said. School Committee member Lucia Flibotte seconded Lieb's assertions and said she left that meeting feeling there would be no opt out, "I don't remember ever ever making the decision for an opt out."

The other school committee members, MacCarthy, Alfred Slanetz and Paul Schubert, felt there was an "aha moment" where sentiment changed. According to MacCarthy, that moment came at the very end of the hour-long discussion when Superintendent Denise Walsh told the committee about the recommendation from DESE where it was advised that schools' "respect the requests of any parents who ask that their child not participate."

"We never said we supported that, I remember (Walsh) made that comment but that didn't negate what we had said," Lieb said. Walsh was not at the meeting on Wednesday to explain her understanding and impression following the Sept. 16 meeting.

The committee voted to amend the minutes so all members felt comfortable they were accurate representation of what happened at the meeting.

"What we have to do as a School Committee is take this as a lesson to be learned, we need to be very careful we make sure we're all on the same page," said Lieb. "(Our direction) was incredibly fuzzy and we did not do a good job. We were not in a consensus."

The Sept. 16 meeting minutes and all the minutes of School Committee meetings are public documents and are available through a request to the Superintendent's Office. A policy and standards sub-committee meeting was tentatively scheduled for Tuesday, Nov. 10 at 7p.m.

Commonwealth Atrius Cancer Center

"Whenever I visited my doctors at Commonwealth Atrius Cancer Center for my head and neck cancer, I received their undivided attention. That goes for my radiation oncologist, medical oncologist, their staffs, and the imaging professionals, all in the same location. I've never experienced this combination of medical excellence and compassion before. What a convenience to have all this under one roof! And what a bonus that this center is so close to where I live and work! Best of all, I'm now cancer-free."

Preliminary construction estimates are $230,000 for the clay bottom and $310,000 for the concrete bottom, but the project would have to go out to public bid.

Preliminary construction estimates are $230,000 for the clay bottom and $310,000 for the concrete bottom, but the project would have to go out to public bid.

Cavanaro said from a maintenance standpoint, it was easier to clean the concrete bottom. He said the clay bottom might have a longer life.

The Selectmen voted 5-0 to recommend the clay bottom option for the renovation. Brown said he is trying to get in touch with Community Preservation chairman Stuart Ivimey to go before that board and seek an allocation for construction at the upcoming Special Town Meeting (Monday, Nov. 16).

Crosswalk sought at Community Center

The Council on Elder Affairs has requested a painted crosswalk be placed from the front stairway of the South Shore Community Center to the corner of the common at Robert Long Road.

Anna Abbruzzese, vice chair of the CEA, wrote to the Selectmen to request the crosswalk for the safety of seniors, many of whom park on the common side of North Main Street. Lieutenant Bill Quigley, the town's safety officer, recommended the crosswalk in a memo to the Town Manager Bill Griffin.

However, Selectmen wanted more information before making a decision.

"There was endless discussion on this (during village revitalization)," said Selectman Ralph Dormitzer. "If we do it there will be three crosswalks within 50-feet of each other…I'm not sure if that's the right thing to do."

Dormitzer said the concrete steps down to the street were a safety concern for the seniors back a few years ago and it was determined it would be better to have the seniors go down the sidewalk to the crosswalk at the corner of Depot Court and North Main Street.

Selectman Fred Koed said he'd like to see a diagram of the area to better visualize the situation. The issue will be discussed at the Nov. 9 Selectmen's meeting.

BRIEFLY

Green Community

Cohasset is poised to take the next step toward becoming a "green community," at least by state standards. A consulting firm, BlueWave Strategies, will be working with the town early next year to help the town comply with Green Communities Act criteria.

The consultant's assignment, according to a letter sent to Town Manager Bill Griffin, is to work closely with the town to develop a plan for complying with the five legislatively mandated criteria for becoming a Green Community. There are 26 communities in Massachusetts slated to work with BlueWave.

The cost of the consultant is $25,000 and is being paid by the state.

Selectman Ralph Domitzer, who was against the town getting involved in the Green Communities program, said the town should go forward "very carefully."

We'll make you smile.

AROUND TOWN

JENNIFER PIEPENBRINK

ENJOY!

Hello Cohasset! It has been a beautiful week with nice weather and so many colors to admire as we continue into the Fall season. Take the time to enjoy it because as we all know, the weather can change way too quick!

TOP EQUESTRIENNE

Happy Birthday Wishes are being sent out to Kendall Fiori on her 15th birthday, which was on Oct. 19th. Everyone hopes that you had a nice celebration and enjoyed your special day.

In addition to a special birthday, Kendall competed in the Hanson Riding Club Supreme Invitational Championship at Balmy Acres Stables in Middleboro on Oct. 10. Kendall finished first in her division (ages 13-17) after competing in 4 Hanson Riding Shows over this past summer. To qualify and be invited to the Supreme Invitational event, you must finish first in one of the events during the summer show. Kendall ended up placing at the top of her division at each show and ended up Champion or Reserve Champion at the end of each show day. After placing 1st in her division, this got Kendall a spot to the Supreme Championship. Once in Middleboro (10/10) Kendall placed 2nd for Equitation class and 1st for Pleasure class. She went on to the Supreme Class where she came in 1st and won the HRC Supreme Championship for her division.

This was Kendall's first show season with Sassy and what a year they have had! Kendall also belongs to the Hanover Hunt and Riding Club, United States Pony Club and is a member of the North River Pony Club in Hanover, Mass. Kendall has received her D2 rating with the USPC. Kendall rides and trains with Alex Peak at Peak Performance Equestrian Center in Marshfield. Congratulations Kendall and Sassy on a great show season.

HONOR SOCIETY

On Thursday, Oct. 15th, Notre Dame Academy in Hingham inducted new members into the National Honor Society and three national language honor societies. Kathryn Hillman, a senior at NDA, was inducted into both the National Honor Society and the NJCL Latin Honor Society. Kathryn is the daughter of proud parents, Rob and Margie Hillman. Congratulations, Kathryn! Everyone is thrilled with this news.

NEW ARRIVAL

Congratulations are being sent to Cosmo Cambi and his wife Allison, who are proud new parents of a baby girl, Isabella Grace. She arrived on Sept. 22nd weighing 8 pounds, 2 ounces in New London, Conn., where her Daddy is presently stationed at the US Coast Guard Academy as Admissions Officer.

Joined by lots of family here in the Cohasset area and Virginia, are delighted grandparents, Michele and Michael Hubley, and extremely delighted great-grandparents are Anna and Mike Abbruzzese.

Thank Heaven for Little Girls!!!

OUR WORLD

The new November/December schedule of programs, classes and programs at the Our World Children's Museum are offered online at www.ourworldcgdm.org and include Monday Mr. Dykas Classes for ages 4-6 and 6-9 at 3:30 and 4:30 pm, a variety of classes for ages 15 months-age 6 Tue-Fris and our new hours beginning on November 3 are Tue-Fri from 10-5 and Sat from 10-3.

FINE ART

Be sure to stop in and visit Home Center Sotheby's International Real Estate office in the Village to see Cohasset artist Jan McElhinny's beautiful oil paintings, which include colorful scenes of the sea, boats, the Common Duck Pond, still life paintings of fruit and flowers, and figures. Jan has studied with South Shore artists Sue Charles and Margaret McWethy.

The artist will host a reception on Saturday, Oct. 24, from 6 to 8 p.m.; ALL are invited! The exhibit will hang until the end of November. A percentage of proceeds from all sales will go to the Oncology Department at Massachusetts General Hospital.

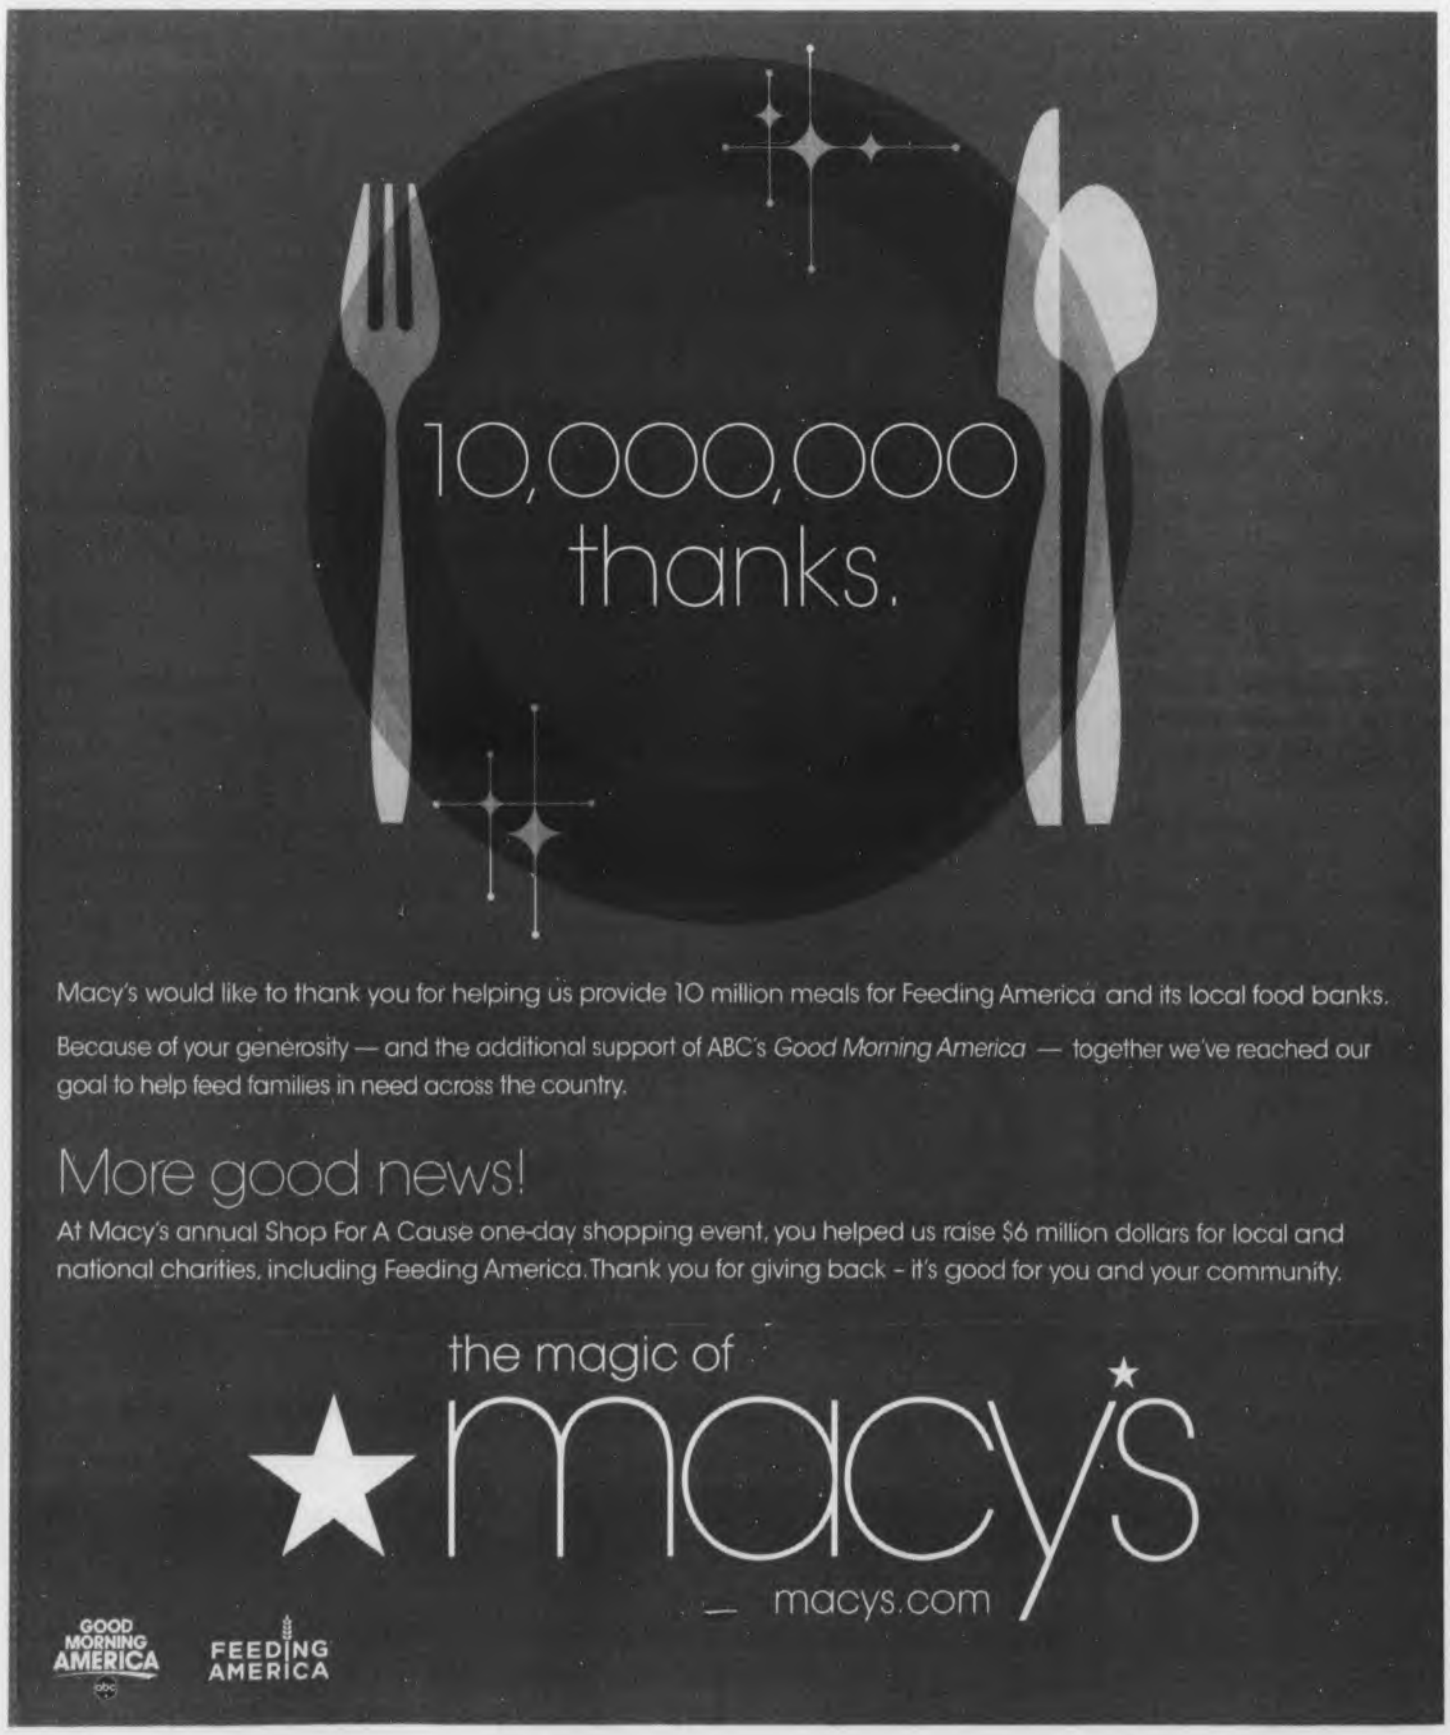
FAREWELL, HUGH

Here is a piece about a man who has done so much for our town. Hugh Morgan, known to scores of schoolchildren from their rides on his bus and from eating his "roosters" at the Little League field, is heeding Horace Greeley's advice to go west, young man, go west. He leaves for California on Nov. 1st.

There will be an opportunity to say goodbye to Hugh on Sunday afternoon, Oct. 25th from 12:30 to 4:30 p.m. at St. Anthony Parish Center. All, young and old are invited to attend. Please try to stop in and give Hugh your best wishes on this next phase of his life. Cohasset wishes you all the best Hugh and everyone wants to extend a huge thank you!

AUTHOR EVENT

Buttonwood Books & Toys is hosting "Coffee with the Authors" on Tue. Nov. 10, from 9:45 – 11:30 a.m. at the Atlantica. Buttonwood offers this event twice a year and everyone is always pleased that they attended. Invite a few friends and treat yourself to a literary morning. Enjoy a continental breakfast and listen to Brunonia Barry, "The Lace Reader" and Hallie Ephron, "The Bibliophile's Devotional" discuss their work. Reservations and tickets ($16 per person) are required. Please call Buttonwood at 1-781-383-2665 to reserve seats or order a signed copy if unable to attend.



WELLSPRING ROCKS!

Friday night, Nov. 13th, the C-Note on Nantasket Beach will be rockin' for Wellspring Multi-Service Center! Once again, The Gratefuls will have the crowds on their feet and dancing! Great music and the chance to party for a cause – Wellspring's educational programs and services. Last year this event was sold out…don't be unlucky this Friday the 13th. Buy your tickets in advance! IT'S HAPPENING

Halloween Fair at Community Center

South Shore Community Center Nursery School will host its annual Halloween Fair on Sunday, Oct. 25. The fair will start at 1:30 p.m. with a costume parade around the duck pond on Cohasset Town Common.

This year the fun will include a family hayride, a giant slide, games, face painting, an obstacle course and a special Touch A Truck. The fair will also feature a bake sale table.

All proceeds will benefit the Nardo Scholarship fund.

Breeze Inn Halloween Story Hour

Breeze Inn LLC, 59 Water St., Hingham, is a drop-off children's activity center with a small store front with books, games, toys and more. It is an affordable babysitting alternative for busy Moms and Dads. Breeze Inn is hosting a Halloween Story Hour for caregivers and children of all ages from 10 to 11 a.m., on Wednesday, Oct. 28.

There will stories, crafts, music and more. There is no charge for admission although with the holidays coming, a canned good donation for the Hingham Food Pantry would be welcomed.

For more information on Breeze Inn, visit the Web site at breezeinn.net or call 781-740-4430.

HEALTH NOTES

Keeping Halloween safe and fun for all

By Steve Bobo
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

Warn children not to eat any treats before an adult has carefully examined them for evidence of tampering.

Once again Halloween is here. The Pumpkin Patch is in full swing on North Main Street at Wheelwright Park, for the benefit of the Appalachia Service Project, which each summer, sends over a hundred volunteers to make repairs to houses in rural Appalachia. House decorations are up and children are preparing their Halloween costumes. This year, we have to contend with torn up roads, exposing special hazards and particularly unsafe crossing situations. Be extra careful, looking both ways as cars may be anywhere on the street, including sidewalks, etc.

Treats: Warn children not to eat any treats before an adult has carefully examined them for evidence of tampering.

Flame Resistant Costumes: When purchasing a costume, masks, beards, and wigs, look for the label Flame Resistant. Although the label does not mean items won't catch fire, it indicates thy will resist burning and should extinguish quickly once removed from the ignition source. To minimize risk of contact with candles or other sources of ignition, avoid costumes made with flimsy materials and outfits with big, baggy sleeves or billowing skirts.

Costume Designs: Purchase or make costumes that are light and bright enough to be clearly visible to motorists.

• For greater visibility during dusk and darkness, decorate or trim costumes with reflective tape that will glow in the beam of a car's headlights. Bags or sacks should also be light colored or decorated with reflective tape. Reflective tape is usually available in hardware, bicycle and sporting goods stores.

• To easily see and be seen, children should also carry flashlights.

• Costumes should be short enough to prevent children from tripping and falling.

• Children should wear well-fitting, sturdy shoes. Mother's high heels are not a good idea for safe walking.

• Hats and scarves should be tied securely to prevent them from slipping over children's eyes.

•Apply a natural mask of cosmetics rather than have a child wear a loose-fitting mask that might restrict breathing or obscure vision. If a mask is used, make sure it fits securely and has eyeholes large enough to allow full vision.

• Swords, knives, and similar costume accessories should be of soft and flexible material.

Pedestrian Safety: Young children should always be accompanied by an adult or an older, responsible child. All children should WALK, not run from house to house and use the sidewalk if available, rather than walk in the street. Children should be cautioned against running out from between parked cars or across lawns and yards where ornaments, furniture or clotheslines present dangers.

Choosing Safe Houses: Children should go only to homes where the residents are known and have outside lights on as a sign of welcome.

• Children should not enter homes or apartments unless they are accompanied by an adult.

• People expecting trick-or-treaters should remove anything that could be an obstacle from lawns, steps and porches. Candlelit jack-o'-lanterns should be kept away from landings and doorsteps where costumes could brush against the flame. Indoor jack-o'-lanterns should be kept away from curtains, decorations, and other ignitable furnishings.

Flu Vaccine: Our supply in Cohasset for the seasonal flu has been exhausted and we have ordered more, which we are expecting momentarily. Meanwhile, doctors and pharmacies have a supply. H1N1 vaccine is still a month away with deliveries of the first doses expected sometime in November. In a few weeks, you can look for our notice about local Flu clinics later in November, and probably on into January, which will still give protection necessary to avoid the flu.

Federal policy now recommends regular flu immunization for children 6 months to almost 5 years — as well as for parents and older siblings, children and adults with chronic illnesses, health-care workers, pregnant women and everyone older than 50.

Cohasset Cabaret will be back for the third time. Show dates will be at 8 p.m., Friday and Saturday, Nov. 6 and 7.

Don't miss the opportunity to see this local cast featuring Doug Trudeau, from Showstopper's fame, as master of ceremonies. A sample of what to expect from local Cohasset talent: Lily Sestito will be back along, with her brother, Tony, and John Carbone with a version of a Roy Orbison song. Barbara Baumgarten will be back with her vocal talent. For the first time ever on the Cohasset stage, Janeen Culhane will sing a Barbara Streisand tune. The baritone voice of Joel Buford, the musical director from 2nd Congregational Church, will sing two show tunes. John Campbell and his daughter, Catie, will sing a duet. There will also be the Dunleavy Shaffer Irish Step Dancers. There will be more comedy acts, singers and other dancers from the South Shore.

On both evenings a social hour, with appetizers provided, will take place from 7 to 8 p.m. People can try their luck at the raffle and silent auction table, which will have some great items from local artists and merchants. Audience members are encouraged to bring their own snacks "cabaret style." There will be a cash bar serving wine, beer and soft drinks.

Cohasset Cabaret is sponsored by the Friends of Cohasset Elder Affairs and will benefit the Friends and St. Anthony's Youth Ministry. People who cannot attend and would like to donate to the cause can purchase a "virtual ticket" for $25 and their name will be entered in the door prize drawing.

Tickets are on sale now and cost $25. Tickets can be purchased at St. Anthony Parish Hall office and the CEA office at South Shore Community Center. For more information, call 781-383-0752.

recovered and buried from the shipwreck, 103 were never found or heard from again and 22 survived the ordeal, Fiori said.

Sixty-five years later in 1914 the Ancient Order of Hibernians and their Ladies Auxiliary erected a Celtic cross in Central Cemetery in memory of those who perished with the St. John. However, Fiori said the bodies of the 45 who washed ashore are not buried in the Central Cemetery underneath the cross.

At the time Cohasset was a predominantly Protestant town and the Irish immigrants were Catholic. As a result, he believes the Irish were not buried inside the cemetery; rather they were laid to rest in unmarked graves just outside the cemetery grounds.

For his book, "On Grampus Ledge: The Story of the Wreck of the Brig St. John," Fiori uncovered all sorts of different facts about the shipwreck and the reverberations on Cohasset.

"I love the idea of researching, there are all sorts of interrelated things in history and one thing leads to the next," Fiori said.

Growing up in Cohasset, Fiori had heard of the tragedy of the St. John, "but I didn't really understand it." When he picked up Victor Bigelow's "History of Cohasset (Volume 1)" and read the account of the wreck his interest was piqued. He began to do research on the Internet, through the Cohasset Historical Society and contacted the County Clare library in Ireland.

"Cohasset is a fascinating little town if you take the time to learn the history of it."
— Paul Fiori, author

"It took three years to put it together," Fiori said. "It has been fun."

Heartened by the response he has received from "On Grampus Ledge" and the positive experience he had researching and writing the book, Fiori is already working on several other books: a history of Minot Light, a book chronicling the over 250 shipwrecks off Cohasset and a book about the world-famous wrestler Steve "The Crusher" Casey.

"Cohasset is a fascinating little town if you take the time to learn the history of it," Fiori said.

In terms of loss of life, the wreck of the St. John was and is the worst the town had seen. Over the years the rocks off Cohasset's coast have been site of hundreds of shipwrecks.

Grampus Ledge and other dangerous outcroppings to this day are the site of shipwrecks. This past summer a powerboat hit Grampus Ledge and the 39-foot boat went down within minutes; all passengers made it off the boat safely.

Cohasset author Paul Fiori points out the grave of Daniel Lothrop, who was one of the men in the lifeboats that tried to save the victims of the shipwreck.

"That ledge is still taking boats," Fiori said.

Copies of the Fiori's "On Grampus Ledge" are available at French Memories, Front Street Books, and on-line at www.authorhouse.com or other major bookselling websites or send an e-mail to Fiori at the-brigstjohn@yahoo.com.

Fifty-two year old loses 30 pounds and 21 inches in 4 months!

I joined Get in Shape for Women at 159 lbs and in just 4 months, I have lost 30 pounds and 21 inches! I am well on my way to reaching my goal weight of 125 lbs! This has been an amazing journey… the reward of what I see in the mirror and how good I feel is so exciting! My blood pressure is down to 115/60 and I no longer need to take high blood pressure medicine. I've had to shop for all new clothes moving from a size 12 to a size 6! This journey has also given me the confidence to start my own business as a Health and Wellness Coach. I enjoy sharing how I modified my nutrition and fitness to help others reach their health and wellness goals. The owners and trainer are great motivators and very supportive! Get in Shape for Women has been integral in my success! They understand the difficulties we all have with losing weight and work individually with each of their clients to help them achieve their goals!

OCTOBER IS BREAST CANCER AWARENESS MONTH

Learn, Live, Love

Pitching in to help patients

By Benjamin Brown
BBROWN@CNC.COM

"We have no overhead. Ninety-nine percent of the money we raise goes to women in our community."
— Pam Ahl, co-founder of Learn, Live, Love

The American Cancer Society estimates that last year, 40,729 women died of breast cancer in the United States alone. The numbers are devastating. While supporting breast cancer research is important, breast cancer treatments are still expensive for many — and what happens when a patient's paycheck goes to radiation therapy instead of their child's tuition? How can they choose?

To silence that difficult decision, women suffering from breast cancer may seek the help of a local breast cancer outreach organization, Learn, Live, Love.

The organization was first founded in 2005, after co-founder Pam Ahl finished radiation therapy for her own bout with the illness. But it wasn't her story that moved her to help others.

"My friend Rosemary had brought me to the doctors," said Ahl, "and I saw a mom there with her four kids. I said to Rosemary, 'what is that mother going to do?' I thought, here I am being chauffeured and she's doing it all by herself and taking care of children."

Ahl worked with her friends Rosemary Lonborg and Amy Webber to hold a breast cancer expo.

"People gave us money, and we gave it to women that could use it," said Ahl.

The organization has since grown, with contributions coming in from a variety of sources. And while their capacity for helping breast cancer patients has grown, Learn, Live, Love has not.

"We're like three women with full time jobs doing it from home," said Ahl.

There are many benefits to being a small outreach organization, she explained. Most importantly, Learn, Live, Love is based on total volunteerism.

"We have no overhead," said Ahl. "Ninety-nine percent of the money we raise goes to women in our community."

This is what separates Learn, Live, Love from massive organizations like Susan G. Komen for the Cure, which spend a large amount of money on expenses, explained Ahl.

According to Ahl, money raised by Learn, Live, Love can be used to support the cancer patient in any way.

"They can use it for bills, co-pays, wigs — anything," she said. "Women put themselves on the back burner. When they need something, they say, I'll take care of that next month. And next month turns into next month."

"They're usually the first to contact us on behalf of the friend."

To help support cancer patients, Learn, Live, Love has networked with local companies like New England Medical Fitting and Patricia and Company to provide wigs and other cosmetic solutions. In order to qualify, patients need to provide a confirmation of their illness, as well as proof that their insurance doesn't cover the expenses.

According to Ahl, the driving principle behind Learn, Live, Love is this: if your mind is at rest, your body heals. Because of this, Ahl and her co-founders are dedicated to relieving the stress of the illness.

Learn, Live, Love is run independently of any other organization.

"We haven't had the opportunity to reach out to any other organizations," said Ahl. "The ordinary, everyday life of the patient is our concern."

While the organization was created to help breast cancer patients, Ahl said that it has and will help other cancer patients as well. And while it may be rare, Learn, Live, Love is also in a position to help male patients should the opportunity arise, she said.

For more information on Learn, Live, Love, or for questions about how to help, visit www.learnlivelove.org.

Lemon Lime Salon helps local women fighting cancer

"If you take the time to ask, you'll be surprised at the journeys people have been on."
— Adrian Morris, Lemon Lime Salon

No one is unaffected by breast cancer.

That's the single biggest lesson local salon owner Adrian Morris has learned from his involvement in raising money and awareness for the disease.

"If you take the time to ask, you'll be surprised at the journeys people have been on," Morris said this week at the Lemon Lime Salon on Route 3A.

Morris is one of the many men who have taken up the fight against breast cancer because someone they loved was lost to the disease. For Morris, it was his friend Karen Petrillo. She passed away in 2005 at age 46.

"Her strength and power are with me every single day," Morris said. In her honor and the many other friends, clients and loved ones who have struggled with cancer, Morris and his salon have helped to raise about $800,000 for the local non-profit Learn, Live, Love.

The Learn, Live, and Love Cancer Outreach Organization's mission is to provide financial assistance to women and families in South Shore communities who have been touched by the devastation of cancer. The Scituate-based charity helps women and families who have been affected by cancer by providing basic services such as babysitters, wigs and help paying the mortgage — the incidentals insurance doesn't cover. They also provide resources, information, networking options and personal support.

When the opportunity arose to partner with the Learn, Live and Love organization, Morris felt it was a natural partnership.

"As a local salon we are physically touching people everyday that have been diagnosed with cancer, that have survived cancer or are losing someone to cancer. They share with us their fears, their concerns and their triumphs. Since 99.5 percent of our business is women it makes sense for us to be at the forefront of a women's issue," Morris said.

Morris describes the approach as grassroots and on the streets — something he said epitomizes what his friend Karen was about.

"That's the way my friend Karen was, she was always for the underdog," Morris said.

The biggest fundraiser for Learn, Live, Love is the annual "Cut for a Cure" held the second Saturday of every March. Through networking and local generosity the event is put on with almost no overhead, Morris said.

One of the most heartening facts of the event is the involvement by men in the community — Morris said nearly half of the attending guests last year were men.

"Men come out for this event — they dance, they donate money, they laugh, and they share. Everyone has a blast," Morris said, adding the sports memorabilia in the silent auction is a perennial hit with the men in the crowd.

The hallmarks of the event are positive attitude and inspiration, "people know why they are there. It's a celebration of what is."

One hundred percent of the proceeds from the event benefit the Learn, Love, Live organization — "charity starts at home," Morris said.

Through his involvement with the breast cancer cause Morris said he has begun to notice a social shift in the way people talk about breast cancer and cancer in general.

"It's much more at the forefront of our awareness. What used to be a very sensitive conversation is now very comfortable," Morris said. "Some people cry, some people laugh, but at least they are talking about it."

Morris is hopeful the increased awareness will translate to a better future — free of cancer – for the next generation.

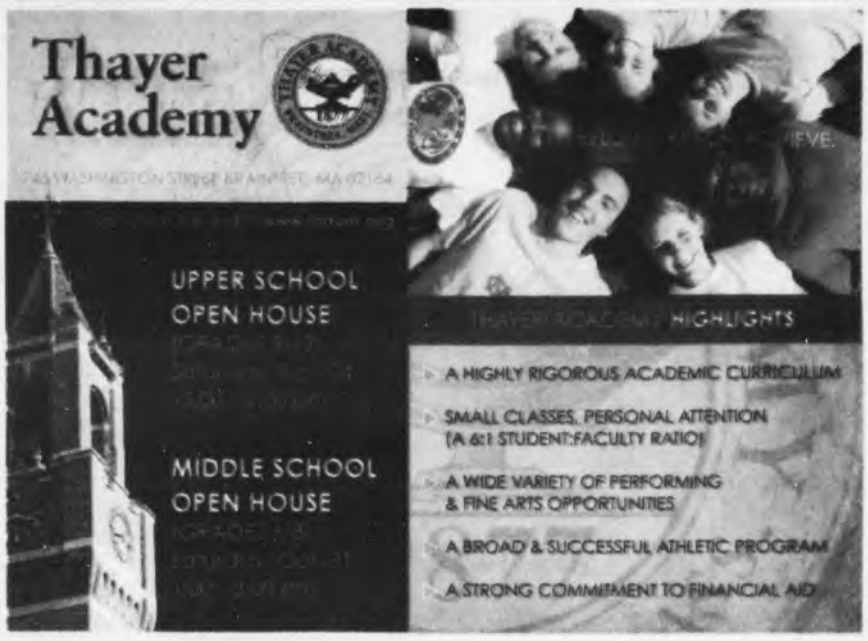
Mr. and Mrs. Christopher Rothwell.

Rothwell — Hettstrom



Edward and Karen Hettstrom of Cohasset announce the marriage of their daughter, Tara Rose, to Christopher Rothwell, son of Bernard and Jane Rothwell of Norfolk, Mass.

The couple exchanged their vows in a traditional ceremony June 7, 2009, at Our Lady of Victories Church in Boston.

The bride is a graduate of Cohasset High School. She earned a bachelor of science degree in finance from Boston College. Her husband is a graduate of Governor's Academy in Byfield, Mass. He earned a bachelor of science degree in finance at Providence College.

After a wedding reception at the Boston Four Seasons Hotel of Boston, they honeymooned for two weeks in the islands of Hawaii and now reside in the historical section of the South End of Boston.

Uncommon Pond

Fountain of Trevi in Rome?

Versailles fountains in Versailles?

Eros Fountain in Piccadilly Circus?

Cohasset's Meeting House Pond and fountain?

OK, it may be a stretch to compare Cohasset's pond with its stone fountain to the most famous fountains in the world. But to us, here in Cohasset – the pond and fountain mean as much, if not more.

How often have you said: "let's meet at the duck pond?" Have you taken your children or grandchildren there in the summer to relax or in the winter to skate?

The Norman Rockwell-like setting has provided the centerpiece for countless paintings and photographs.

It is no secret that the pond and the common attracted two Hollywood films: "The Witches of Eastwick" and "Housesitter." TV commercials have also been filmed on the common as well as a scene in a Walt Disney Movie back in 2001.

Plans are afoot to refurbish the Meeting House Pond (also known as the duck pond).

Some might say in these tough financial times that spending any money that is not critical to town services is simply foolish.

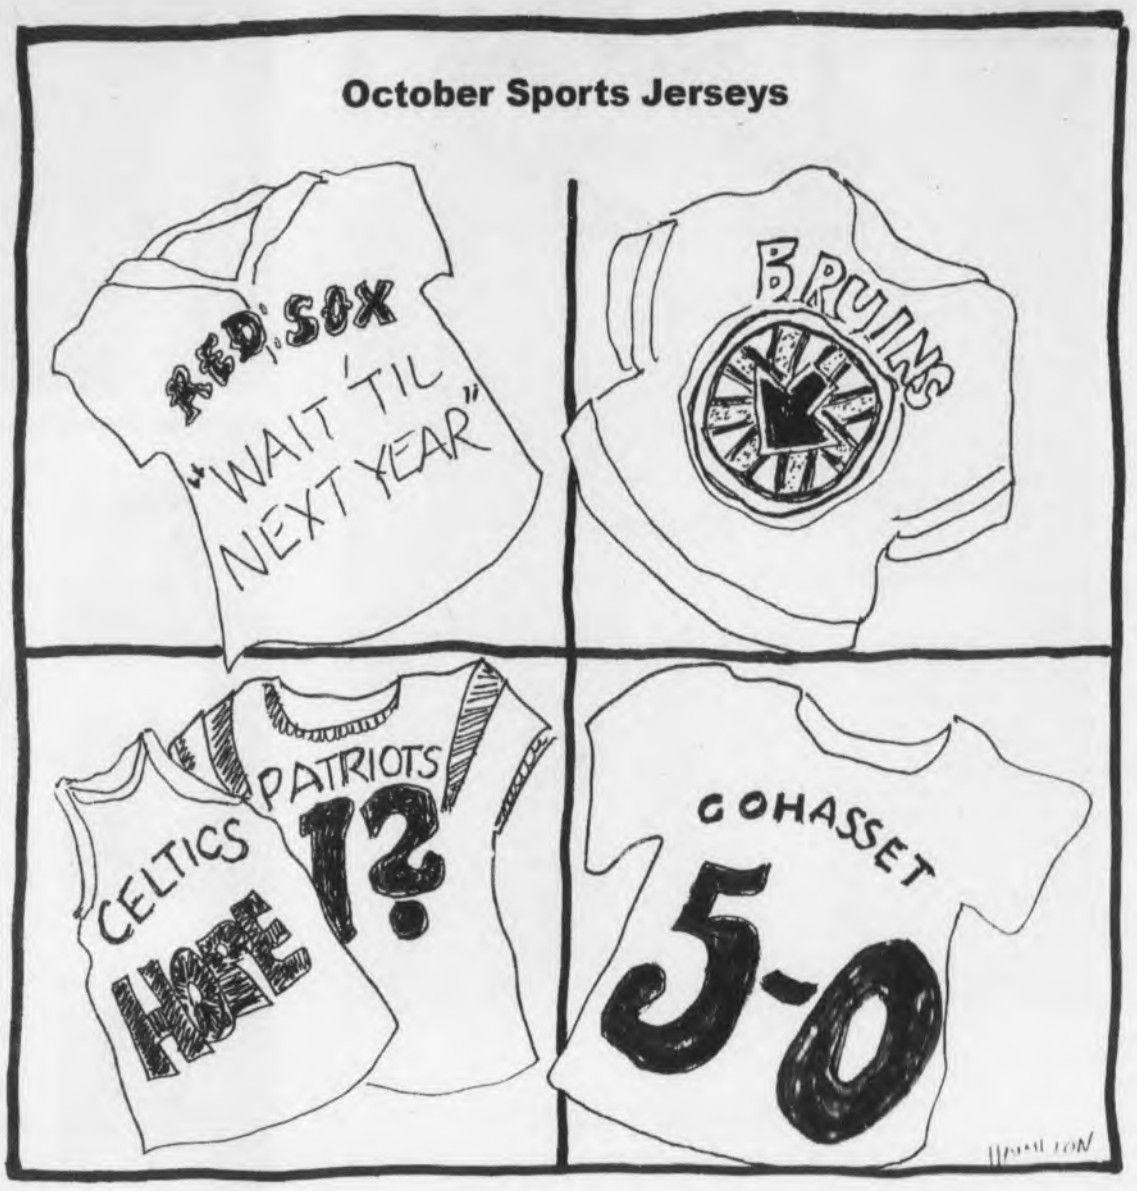
However, it is also important that Cohasset keeps up appearances. We mean that in the best sense.

"Images of America – Cohasset" published by Arcadia Publishing in 2004, and written by David Wadsworth, Paula Morse and Lynn DeGiacomo for the Cohasset Historical Society – states the common dates back to 1670.

The common was the site of the first schoolhouse, the first seat of government and religion, the first municipal flagpole and the town's whipping post and stocks. The common and its surrounding structures form a local historic district that is on the National Register of Historic Places.

No one, who knows Cohasset, could imagine the common without its pond.

We support educating readers about calling the pond by its more traditional name, "Meeting House Pond."



Calling it the "duck pond" might encourage well-meaning folks to feed the ducks.

Feeding the ducks became a major problem in the pond in the mid-1990s. It was not uncommon to see families bringing along full loaves of bread to tear up and toss to the ducks. The ducks enjoyed the attention and arrived in greater numbers, creating a mess with their droppings. Some ducks also decided not to head south for the winter – which put them in danger.

Local environmentalist Jack Hubbard came up with the idea of posting educational signs on the backs of the benches at the pond explaining why feeding the ducks was not a good idea.

The signs solved the problem practically overnight. People did not realize by feeding the ducks they could actually be hurting them.

Now is probably a good time to look at replacing those signs – we believe one is missing. We would not want the Meeting House Pond to live up to its old nickname the "duck pond" once again.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

MCAS scores should not drive decision-making

TO THE EDITOR:

In keeping with the Halloween season, Superintendent of Schools Denise Walsh sent a chill up my spine when she said "They [MCAS scores] drive our decision making, drive our instruction and drive our budget" (Cohasset Mariner, Oct. 16, p. 5). I have long supported educational testing and join all Cohasset residents in celebrating our students' success in the MCAS exams. But the MCAS tests basic skills in English, math, and now science; it does not test how our students use those skills in creative and critical thinking, processes that are central to education. In the final analysis, education, not MCAS scores, should drive of decision-making, instruction, and budget.

What our Superintendent of Schools and School Committee should be thinking about is not just raising MCAS scores but what it will take to prepare our students to live in the increasingly global and technological world of the 21st century. Indeed, it would behoove our school committee to draft a statement of goals of where we want our schools to be in, say, 2019 – and let such a statement of purpose drive our decision-making.

Such a statement might, for instance, consider the role of foreign language teaching. What languages should we teach and when should we teach them? We lost Latin this past year. Should we aim to restore Latin teaching? Should we look at other foreign languages, such as Chinese (Hingham already teaches Chinese)? When should foreign languages be introduced? Does anybody really believe starting foreign languages in the seventh grade – when the mouth has trouble pronouncing foreign sounds and the hormones are directing thoughts in different directions – is really effective? Doesn't it send a signal to students that we do not really expect them to learn to speak a foreign language? Is that adequate for a global world? CHS has done a marvelous job promoting exchange programs and foreign travel. Could such programs be expanded?

What could be done to improve computer literacy? Our students may in fact be outpacing our teachers in their understanding of computers, but their understanding is at best partial. More could be done to introduce computer programming and other skills at lower grades. Can those with professional computer skills be lured to teach on a part-time basis? Should we pool resources with schools in nearby communities?

Can we better combine such subjects as history, English and environmental studies as we introduce and write about the ways human migration and demography interact with the environment? Can we project, cautiously, such trends into the future as we think about the impact of climate change?

In short, the world is an exciting and rapidly changing place, and introducing it to our children should be more exciting than drilling them in preparation for the next MCAS exam (as necessary as that may be). We should be thinking about how to meet the challenge of educating the next generation and giving them the skills they will need in college and beyond. Letting the MCAS exam drive our decision-making is to abdicate our responsibility as educators. We can do better than that.

POLITICAL NOTES

Town Hall meeting for Democratic senate candidates

There will be a Town Hall-style meeting with Democratic senate candidate and U.S Congressman Michael Capuano and candidate Alan Khazei at 2 p.m., on Sunday, Oct. 25. This event is being sponsored by the South Shore Democratic Caucus, which is comprised of the eight Massachusetts Democratic town committees from Weymouth, Duxbury, Hingham, Cohasset, Hull, Scituate, Marshfield and Norwell, as a public service to citizens who want to hear directly from the Democratic candidates running for Sen. Kennedy's seat.

The primary election will be Dec. 8. This may be the best opportunity for all South Shore citizens to hear directly from and interact with Democratic candidates for this U.S. Senate seat. All four declared Democratic Senate candidates have been and remain invited to participate.

Additionally, Steve Grossman, former chairman of the Democratic National Committee, former chairman of the Massachusetts Democratic Party and candidate for Massachusetts State Treasurer, will be in attendance at this event, along with current Norfolk County Treasurer Joe Connolly, also a candidate for State Treasurer.

TOM GRUBER & MARK BRENNAN

Finally, Some Little Harbor Project Paving Action! — After what seemed to us, and probably to you, a very long time with no paving action, the pavers returned to Cohasset on Wednesday of this past week. T L Edwards, our paving contractor, showed up bright and early on Bow Street and started paving at the Nichols Road end, as seen in the photo. The plan was to pave Bow Street and Steep Rocks Way, and then if time permits, the road to the Logan Estate (also known as 54 to 60 Jerusalem Road) and the road that serves 30 to 40 Jerusalem Road. When you read this article you will be able to see if they were able to finish these areas. By the way, we apologize to the residents of these roads for the late notification, but we didn't find out about the schedule until 3:30 p.m. the prior day.

We have included another photo that shows a few of the finer points involved in a paving operation. The photo shows a close-up of the intersection of Bow Street and Jerusalem Road at the opposite end of Bow Street from the first photo. There are several items shown in this photo that are very important to the quality of the final paving job. First, it is a bit hard to see, but there are faint marks over the road, which are especially heavy along the narrow trench cut into the junction line of the two roads. This is a "tack coat" that was sprayed over the base coated road. The tack coat promotes a strong bond or grip between the base coat of asphalt and the topcoat about to be applied.

The narrow trench in the photo allows the new paving to "key" into the old pavement. This strengthens the bond and adds paving thickness at the place where Bow St. and Jerusalem Rd. meet. Also, you may notice a dotted line on the road to the left. This marks the dividing line for the paver when they use two strips of paving to pave the width of the road. It is interesting to note that the specific paving machine used for this job can pave up to 16 feet wide. This portion of Bow Street fans out and is appreciably wider than that so it requires two strips of paving to cover it.

Speaking of paving, we have had a few calls regarding the lack of cosmetic dress-up work along the edge of the roads affected by this project. We realize that this dress up work is an important part of project completion. Our goal is to restore the roads, as closely as practical, to their pre-construction condition, but with new paving. However, from a cost standpoint, it doesn't make any sense to do this restorative work until the final paving is complete. Until then, the final grades are not known and edge of road, berms, etc. have not been established in their final form. Otherwise, we'd be doing the dress up work twice, and the residents who are paying the bill would not be getting a fair shake. So, after Wednesday's paving is complete, we will employ a private contractor to do the final clean-up and dress-up at the edge of these roads. When you see some roads with new loam and grass and not yours, we wanted you to know why.

A Bit More Behind the Scenes of Paving — We have mentioned on other occasions that there is much preparation that must be done prior to paving. As an example, one of the photos shows a local contractor doing prep work on Red Gate Lane. In this instance, the contractor is patching the road with base coat paving prior to topcoat. The reason is, in places where the surface of the road was ground, the grinder sometimes went completely through the trench patching and exposed bare dirt. If we put a topcoat of asphalt over this dirt spot it wouldn't hold up very well. It would be a weak spot in the road that would ultimately fail. So, we have a contractor excavate some of the dirt out of the exposed area and place some base coat asphalt in its place. Then when the topcoat is laid, there will be two layers of asphalt and the road will be much more durable.

In addition to this contractor, two other contractors will be doing paving preparatory work around the Common. One of the contractors will be reworking sections of curbing that will be too low after coat of asphalt is added. Another of the photos shows a small section of missing curb, which will be fixed.

The other contractor will be cutting the edges of various driveways straight so they will match up with the paving. This contractor will also be adjusting roadway structures, embedded in concrete, that are too high or too low for paving. He will also be cutting a smooth interface line for paving at the cross walk at the Community Center and Depot Court, rather than the jagged cut that is there now. You can see there really is a lot of detailed prep work before paving can take place.

Other Important Stuff – Last, but by no means least, we have two great announcements that should please several of our neighborhoods. First, by the time you read this, work should have begun on a sidewalk connecting the Rocky Lane neighborhood to North Main St. and our sidewalk network. We know this is especially important to the Rocky Lane parents who have put up with the lack of an off-the-road pedestrian passage to their school bus stop.

The second piece of good news is that the Town has received notice that it has been granted the Chapter 91 Waterways License needed to construct a new outfall channel at the Legion and tide gate replacement. This was the last permit necessary for us to begin the final design and construction planning. The construction will probably get under way next summer.

4,400 miles sailing Rising Tide from Cohasset

By Ken and Heidi Maitland
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

On Oct. 8, 2008, Rising Tide left Cohasset for Florida and the Bahamas. It returned July 21, bringing us (the crew: Ken and Heidi Maitland) back safely after 8-1/2 months on the sea. Rising Tide is a 37-foot Tayana sailboat, cutter rigged (that's two fore-sails and a mainsail), that we have owned for six years. The trip had been a dream for longer than that but Rising Tide, with it's large fuel and water storage, diesel cabin heater, and rugged design, was the boat to take us there.

We lived with our children Tammy, Justin and Peter on Forest Avenue in Cohasset for 18 years. Three years ago we moved to Duxbury, but Rising Tide is still moored in Cohasset. Throughout our trip the town's name, which is displayed on both sides of the double-ender's stern, brought interest from former South Shore residents who now live further south and current residents who were vacationing or boating along the route of our trip.

The cruise took Rising Tide down to Block Island, then across the wide shipping lanes outside of New York City to Atlantic City. Other stops in the northeast were at Cape May, N.J., Chesapeake City, Md. and Annapolis Md. All of the east coast states were on our route. Starting in Norfolk, Va., the Intracoastal Waterway (ICW) is the boater's "highway" as it brings you through fairly protected waters all the way to Florida. For much of this part of the cruise the sails cannot be used since the ICW is narrow and protected from weather and wind by vegetation.

Rising Tide is economical to run, using only .62 gallon on diesel fuel per hour. In fact, other parts of the cruise were affordable, too. When the engine is running, it charges up the batteries so the refrigeration can run and the electronics can be used. When not running the engine, solar panels keep the batteries topped-up. There was no need for a car for the 8-1/2 months and the dinghy that's used to get back and forth to shore from Rising Tide only used 10 gallons of gasoline or less each month. Canned and boxed food can be bought in bulk and stored for back-up but we enjoyed buying local food, such as fresh fruit, baked local bread, just-caught fish and eating out at small independent restaurants, which usually have reasonable prices.

One of the best parts of the cruise was meeting other boaters who were on a similar route, but who were coming from Canada, Australia, England, Switzerland, Germany and from all over the U.S. On the ICW there are several nice meeting places, for example Oriental, N.C. and Elizabeth City, N.C. leave space at a city dock and allow free docking for two nights. Other times we'd socialize with new boating friends at impromptu cocktail parties on one boat or another in an anchorage area. We did not use marinas very often, but when we did we'd have easy access to the other boats and crews docked there.

It's probably no surprise that Florida became an area for Rising Tide to slow down in and savor. The warmth was welcoming after cold weather all the way through to Georgia, and there was lots of wildlife. Almost every day we'd see another boat from earlier in the trip that we'd want to catch up with. In Florida we also found "boating-friends of friends" that we'd been looking for and on-line contacts from the Tayana Owner's Group that we'd corresponded with but had yet to meet. North Palm Beach, Vero Beach, Fort Lauderdale, Key Biscayne, and Marathon were all places we spent multiple days (or weeks). By the middle of February we'd not yet gotten to the Bahamas, but we were enjoying the convenience of Florida's coastal towns and easy access to supplies, good public transportation, and mechanics/parts stores that allowed us to make needed engine repairs.

Throughout our trip the town's name, which is displayed on both sides of the double-ender's stern, brought interest from former South Shore residents...

Friday, Feb. 13, 2009 was the day that several boats from Marathon in the Florida Keys had decided was the best weather day for a crossing to the Bahamas. Rising Tide was ready for the 65-mile crossing, fueled up and dinghy stowed on the deck. We left as a group in the early morning darkness and soon enough the sun was up and we had met the Gulf Stream that runs south to north in that area, giving us a push north as we headed northeast toward Gun Cay, the first of the Bahamian islands we would pass.

We had an uneventful crossing but soon after getting past Gun Cay and looking for a place to anchor for the night on the Bahamas Bank, we ran aground. To set the scene, Rising Tide was all alone (the other boats either got ahead of us or sailed for Bimini Cay to clear customs) and the Bahamas Bank is huge, beautiful, blue, and shallow! We were no strangers to running aground, as we had also been stuck several times in the ICW, but it seemed to be an insult in this amazing clear water. We did start to float again in about an hour. That night and the next we anchored in 10 feet of water, no land in sight, and in between we had a great sail over the Bahamas Bank, our first full day in the Bahamas.

We raised our quarantine flag as required, then visited the customs office in Andros, a large but sparsely populated island in the Bahamas. During our visit to the Bahamas we did not spend more than a day in any of the cities, choosing instead to see more of the less populated islands and regions.

The Bahamas reminded us of the small towns of Massachusetts back in the 1950s. Typical jobs for the Bahamians are in agriculture, small manufacturing (one company on Andros designs and prints batik cloth), and crafts such as basket weaving. Home-based businesses bake bread, and run laundromats and small grocery stores. In some areas the workers going to a resort or restaurant are transported by boat as there are no bridges between islands and jobs seem to be clustered in just a few of the islands. The children play outside after school and it didn't seem as if they spent much time on TV or video games. We went to a few local-run fundraising dinners, one with several choices of soups and one with fresh whole fish, fried, with a side of banana fritters.

Stormwater Committee needs members

In February, Selectmen voted to create a five-member Stormwater Advisory Committee. They are still seeking members with specific expertise or knowledge to volunteer. A couple of residents have expressed interest, but not enough to form the board. The Town Manager is currently accepting applications from interested residents.

The Stormwater Advisory Committee will take on myriad tasks including conducting public education activities in support of stormwater remediation, providing opportunities for public participation in stormwater and watershed remediation discussions, conducting an annual inventory of flood prone areas in Cohasset, seeking funding sources for stormwater remediation and advising the Board of Selectmen on stormwater-related capital expenditures.

Liaisons from the Board of Selectmen, Board of Health, Conservation Commission, Water Commission, Sewer Commission, Planning Board, School Committee, and Department of Emergency Management will be participating as well.

Appointments to the Stormwater Advisory Committee will first be made from interested members of the liaison boards and committees listed above, then from volunteers from the community, with preference given to people with relevant professional qualifications, including licensed professional engineers in hydrological or environmental specialties, architects and attorneys specializing in environmental law, and public relations professionals.

Interested candidates are requested to submit a letter of interest and resume to Town Manager Bill Griffin, Town Hall, 41 Highland Ave., Cohasset, MA 02025 or by e-mail to: wgriffin@townofcohasset.org

James Lane project still in pipeline

Rainwater harvesting system being worked into plans

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

For nearly four months the Planning Board has received no new information from the developers of the 8 James Lane. Despite the delay — and multiple public hearing postponements — developer Paul Cleary of South Coastal Development Group said this week the project is still very much on the table.

Engineering, especially related to stormwater management, is currently being worked on. Although scheduled for a hearing on Wednesday, Oct. 28, Cleary said it would probably be mid-November before they are back in front of the Planning Board.

"We are converting the project to a very green project," Cleary said. Engineers are revamping the design of the building, which will be a 17-unit condominium project, to include a "rainwater harvesting system." Rainwater will be collected from the roof and repurposed for use in the toilets and lawn care. The rainwater will not be used for drinking water or bath water.

The additional engineering needed for the system has created the need for more time, Cleary said in a phone interview.

"We are converting the project to a very green project."
— Paul Cleary of South Coastal Development Group

Cleary said the public hearing process, review of the Water Department's Norfolk Ram letter and the stormwater bylaw played into the decision to include the rainwater harvesting system.

"Everything is pushing toward being more green," Cleary said. "Part of the reason I like the public hearing process is you learn things…we are evolving the project based on the green trend."

While his company is looking into other energy efficiencies and technology for other projects, the rainwater harvesting system will be the primary green technology incorporated into the 8 James Lane proposal, Cleary said.

If the project receives conditional approval from the Planning Board, it will continue the approval process by seeking a stormwater permit from the Conservation Commission.

Stoughton-based South Coastal Development Group has put forth for an application for a special permit under the relatively new village zoning regulations passed at the November 2008 Town Meeting. The property is somewhat of an "orphan" for the district as it is located on the other side of the MBTA tracks and does not currently have retail or commercial space.

The 26,000 square foot building will have three floors, an elevator and an underground parking garage in the basement.

The property at 8 James Lane is located behind the seasonal hot dog and ice cream stand JJ's Junction. The property abuts the MBTA commuter rail tracks and fronts on James Lane.

Cohasset vs. Abington up for High School Friday

The undefeated Cohasset Skippers Football Team has received an invitation from Fox 25 Sports to participate in an upcoming "High School Friday" game of the week.

On Friday Nov. 6, the Skippers will host another undefeated league rival Abington Green Wave in a game that could decide the South Shore League Title and a trip to the MIAA Super Bowl Tournament.

Beginning this Friday, the team needs your help in order for them win this opportunity to be featured as the High School Friday game of the week.

Go to www.myfoxboston.com and go to the High School Friday page beginning today (Friday, Oct. 23.)

Vote for the Abington at Cohasset game as many times as you can throughout the week. Vote early, vote often, just vote, vote, vote.

Books in Bloom at library

Community Garden Club of Cohasset will present Books in Bloom at Paul Pratt Library, 35 Ripley Road, Cohasset, on Oct. 28, 29 and 30. The show will have an autumn theme.

Club members will interpret a number of book titles that have a fall connotation through fresh flower arrangements. This is not a standard flower show. It is meant to be interpretive and creative. Arrangements can be viewed 10 a.m. to 5 p.m., on Wednesday, Oct. 28 and Friday, Oct. 30; and 10 a.m. to 8 p.m., on Thursday, Oct. 29. The event is open to the public and admission is free.

Beacon Hill Roll Call
Volume 36-Report No. 41
October 12-16, 2009
Copyright (c) 2009 Beacon Hill Roll Call. All Rights Reserved.
By Bob Katzen

THE HOUSE AND SENATE. Beacon Hill Roll Call records local senators' votes on two roll calls from the week of October 12-16. There were no roll calls in the House last week.

The current practice of establishing the cost to register a dog in Massachusetts is divided into two systems.

The first system is a county one under which cities and towns in the state's remaining seven counties are limited to charging $3 to register a spayed or neutered dog and $6 for an intact dog. These counties are Barnstable, Dukes, Nantucket, Suffolk, Norfolk, Bristol and Plymouth.

The cities and towns under the county system also have the option of moving from that system to an individual one under which they are allowed to charge any amount of money to register a dog. There is no cap on the fee for municipalities in the individual system.

Many county system communities over the years have opted to move into the individual system with no cap. Some communities have remained in the $3/$6 maximum county system. There is no accurate information currently available that shows how many cities and towns have stayed in the county system.

Manny Maciel, president of the Animal Control Officers Association of Massachusetts, estimates that 280 communities have opted out of the county system. That would leave 81 that remain in it. Others involved in the debate contend that a majority (at least 181) of the state's 361 communities are still in the county system.

The Senate last week debated a bill that makes several changes in the state's animal control laws.

The proposed legislation includes a section that would effectively shut down the county system of dog registration and move the communities that were in that system into the individual one.

The bill would also establish a new $35 cap to register a spayed or neutered dog and $50 for an intact dog in all 361 communities in the individual system.

Supporters of the $35/$50 cap argued that it is fiscally responsible because currently there is no cap on communities in the individual system.

Opponents of the $35/$50 cap said that it is misleading and is in fact a fee hike because it will also apply to the communities that were previously in the county system with the $3/$6 cap but under the bill are moved into the individual system.

Supporters of the $35/$50 cap counter that for years those communities in the county system could have moved to the uncapped individual system at any time. They argued that the bill in fact puts all 361 communities under a $35/$50 cap bill instead of the present system that has some communities with a $3/$6 cap and others with no cap at all.

Opponents of the $35/$50 cap said that supporters are using smoke and mirrors to hide a fee increase. They noted that moving some communities from a system with a $3/$6 cap into a system with a $35/$50 cap is clearly a fee hike.

These opponents proposed an amendment that they said would eliminate the new $35/$50 fee and go back to the system under which some communities have the $3/$6 cap and others have no cap.

They argued that the outrageous hike to $35/$60 is unfair and unaffordable by pet owners who are fighting for their economic lives during the recession. They noted that many of these people have lost their jobs and their homes and all of them are paying the recent hike in the sales tax from five to 6.25 percent.

Supporters of the $35/$50 cap argued that the amendment is poorly drafted and in fact actually reduces the registration fee cap for all 361 cities and towns to $3/$6. They said that this would result in a substantial and unaffordable loss of revenue for dozens of cities and towns.

Beacon Hill Roll Call's reading of the amendment supports the idea that it reduces all 361 communities' cap to $3/$6.

Here is the roll call on that amendment:

DOG LICENSING FEES (S 2172)

Senate 6-27, rejected the amendment that proponents of it said would eliminate the new single system $35/$50 fee and go back to the dual system under which some communities are under the $3/$6 cap and others are under no cap.

Supporters of the $35/$60 cap for all communities said that the amendment is poorly drafted and in fact establishes an inadequate $3/$6 cap for all 361 communities.

RULES FOR KAYAKING (S 974)

Senate 29-4, gave near final approval to and sent to the House a bill that would require any person aboard a kayak to wear a Coast Guard-approved personal flotation device (PFD). The measure also gives the state's Department of Fisheries and Wildlife the power to mandate that other safety equipment be aboard. Other provisions require that kayak instructors receive certification as an instructor from the American Canoe Association or American Red Cross and also take first aid and cardiopulmonary resuscitation (CPR) training.

Supporters said that present law is too loose and does not sufficiently regulate kayaks. They noted that currently Massachusetts requires that PFD be worn on kayaks only from September 15 to May 15. Some cited the recent case of two kayakers who were lost because they had insufficient safety equipment on board.

Opponents said that the bill goes too far and gives excesive power to the Department of Fisheries and Wildlife to set all kinds of rules about kayaking. They argued that the Legislature itself should study the situation and then establish any new safety rules.

(A "Yes" vote is for the bill. A "No" vote is against the bill).

THE GREAT HALLOWEEN CANDY BUY BACK!

Money for You - Candy for the Troops!

One area dentist is redefining the phrase "put your money where your mouth is." This Halloween, trick-or-treaters can bring their excess candy to Abington Family Dental Care in Abington and receive $1 per pound. Dr. Mike Thomas is leading this anti-decay movement by giving away dollars and toothbrushes in exchange for cavity-provoking candy.

"Ditch the candy, that's what we're saying. Visiting your dentist twice a year and brushing and flossing daily are great preventative measures, but doing away with excess sweets altogether would really give your teeth a healthy boost," says Dr. Mike Thomas from Abington Family Dental Care. "Kids can still have all of the fun of trick-or-treating, and now their piggy banks will benefit as well."

HOW TO PARTICIPATE:

Candy will be collected at Abington Family Dental Care at 469 Washington St. in Abington, Sunday, November 1, 2009, the day after Halloween only from 11:00 am to 3:00 pm. The candy must be unopened. Please no bites. It will then be shipped to our troops overseas.

Dr. Mike Thomas is one of three dentists at Abington Family Dental Care in Abington, which emphasizes general family dental care as well as cosmetic procedures. Dr. Thomas and staff are available to provide more information at 781-878-2190, or visit Abington Family Dental Care on-line at www.abingtonfamilydental.com.

George Town in the Exumas, one of the southernmost chains of Bahamian islands, is a larger town with a big grocery store and a large number of cruising boats. We were there for the week-long Cruiser's Regatta, a festival run by the boaters that included volleyball tournaments, a coconut gathering contest, talent shows, sailboat races, a challenge softball game between the locals and the boaters, and much more. George Town also was the site of a wonderful two-day Music Festival that was run by the Bahamian Tourist Board, where we watched Bahamian favorites singing and performing special dances. A surprise appearance of one of the award-winning Junkanoo bands, and fireworks at the end (at 2 a.m.!), made it memorable for us.

Of course traveling in a boat means we planned on fishing and swimming. Although our Bahamian fishing luck was mostly down, one barracuda and one Spanish mackerel, the swimming and snorkeling were positively great, and we almost got to be experts at identifying the multicolored fish of the reefs. We also saw turtles, rays and sharks while snorkeling.

By mid-April we were looking ahead to getting back to the U.S. and to planning our return to New England so as to not get here too early (too cold) or too late (hurricane season). We started back in company with a New Hampshire family of five, including three young girls, on a catamaran. They opted out at the last minute to hit one last "great snorkeling reef" in the Abacos in the northern Bahamas. We continued on to cross the Gulf Stream from the Abacos and this time the northern current pushed us up to Fort Pierce, Florida.

Heading north on Rising Tide, passing back through familiar towns and in perfect weather, we had more chances to see manatees, dolphins, eagles and pelicans in the southern states. We also had a few very close encounters with alligators, and were told that the breeding season was making them bolder.

In Charleston, S.C., we visited former Cohasset residents Julie and Bob Motley. They run a restaurant, Harbor Grille, located near the aquarium there. We also now could visit new friends who were ahead of us and already home as we traveled north. One couple treated us to dinner and a night on their dock in a beautiful creek in Virginia, in Chesapeake Bay.

Some of our last stops were at interesting towns in Eastern Maryland, blue crab country. Oxford and St. Michaels, Maryland had a lot of crabbing/fishing boats, a long heritage of fishing for a living, and well maintained older homes and businesses. South Shore residents would feel comfortable there. We saw Atlantic City, New York City, and Newport close-up from the water as we got nearer to home.

As we were winding down on our trip we reflected that Rising Tide had taken us through some good adventures, some setbacks, all kinds of weather, and 4,400 miles by the end. On our trip we managed to avoid most of the daily reports of recession, and to meet interesting new people at every stop on our trip. We got tired of the R/O (reverse osmosis) drinking water in the Bahamas, but not the fresh baked bread. We loved going barefoot just about all the time, but we did lose enthusiasm for setting our anchor five to seven times each week. We now know that there are very few phones, banks, shopping malls, and "modern" conveniences in the Bahamas as well as in some of the remote areas the ICW travels through in the U.S. But boaters are self-reliant and carry supplies and spares, and cell phones, with them and this independence from civilization and a return to simpler times is one benefit of traveling by sailboat that we will incorporate into our lives now that we have returned.

LIBRARY CORNER

Book group meets Wednesday

The following events will take place at Paul Pratt Memorial Library, 35 Ripley Road. For more information, call 781-383-1348 or visit cohassetlibrary.org

Library Book Group – Join others for coffee and discussion of "The Guernsey Literary and Potato Peel Pie Society" by Mary Ann Shaffer at 10 a.m., on Wednesday, Oct. 28. Free. All are welcome.

Art Exhibit – South Shore Art Center is hosting an exhibit of oil paintings titled "Shimmering Color" by artist Patricia M. Gray at Paul Pratt Memorial Library through Oct. 30. Gallery hours are 10 a.m. to 8 p.m., Mondays, Tuesdays and Thursdays; 10 a.m. to 5 p.m., Wednesdays and Fridays; and 9 a.m. to 5 p.m., Saturdays.

Meet Tracy Kidder, author of "Strength in What Remains" and "Mountains Beyond Mountains" in the auditorium at Cohasset High School at 7 p.m., on Monday, Nov. 2. Tickets are $10 each and are available at the circulation desk of the library. This event is the first South Shore Music Circus Lecture in recognition of SSMC's $100,000 donation to the Cohasset Library Trust.

Knitting Group – The Library Knitting Group meets from 10 a.m. to noon, every Wednesday, in either the Meeting Room or Historical Room. Edna Finnegan from the Senior Center Knitting Group will be available to help. All are welcome, including people who want to learn to knit or those who have a knitting project they need help with. Free.

FOR CHILDREN

Eyes on Owls – Naturalist Marcia Wilson will demonstrate a variety of live owls at 1 p.m., on Saturday, Nov. 14. Don't miss this opportunity to see owls up close. Free tickets will be available at the Circulation Desk beginning Monday, Nov. 2, at 10:30 a.m. Sponsored by the Friends of the Cohasset Library.

MamaSteph – Music, movement and more for young children in the Meeting Room at 10:30 a.m., on Mondays, Oct. 26, Nov. 2, 9, 16, 23 and 30.

Story Time – In the Children's Story Room on Tuesdays, Oct. 20 and 27, Nov. 3, 10, 17, 24. All ages and communities welcome.

Register to vote for Special Town Meeting

Friday, Nov. 6, will be the last day to register to vote for the Special Town Meeting on Nov. 16. Registration will take place in the Town Clerk's office from 8:30 a.m. to 8 p.m.

Any citizen of the United States who is a Massachusetts resident and who will be 18 years old on or before a town meeting or Election Day may register to vote. There is no waiting period to be eligible to register to vote. If people move, they may register to vote as soon as they move into their new home.

There is no waiting period to be eligible to register to vote.

Registration is closed for a brief period before each town meeting and election to allow election officials time to prepare the voting lists. If people register during a "closed" period, they will be eligible to vote only in later town meetings or elections.

Forty-Eight Year Old Reduces Body Fat and Loses 7 1/2 Inches!

I began at Get In Shape for Women when I saw an advertisement stating "Results Start When You Do" that was my calling. I don't have a weight problem; however I did have a body fat problem. My goal was to tone my body by creating definition on my arms, abs and making my legs stronger. I had to learn how to run properly on the treadmill and learn how to do the exercises correctly. My eating habits also had to change. No more ice cream and Oreos for a while. Most importantly I had to learn to accept encouragement to keep going even when I was tired. The support from the staff and friends I've made at Get In Shape for Women have helped me achieve my goal of reducing my overall body fat and loosing 7.5 inches. Thank you Get In Shape for Women.

Boating Safety Instruction

Boating Skills & Seamanship (BS&S) – Participants will receive their Mass boating license upon completion of The US Coast Guard Auxiliary's Boating Skills and Seamanship course, which is a comprehensive course designed for both the experienced and the novice boater. This course consists of core-required two-hour lessons plus elective lessons, providing up-to-date knowledge for handling boats in all conditions. 12-hour course- must attend all three dates. Fee is $50.

GPS For Mariners – This course is a modern learning experience that focuses on GPS equipment typically owned by the recreational boater. This course is the result of an exciting synergy between textbook's publisher, the book's author, and the Auxiliary. Fee is $35.

Both courses take place at Cohasset Town Hall on Saturdays from 9 a.m. to 1 p.m. BS&S: Nov. 7, 14, 21. GPS: Jan. 9

Computer Explorers – Meets Tuesdays at Cohasset Recreation Center

Engineering: Those who like building with Legos will enjoy this class. Students use LEGO materials to build simple and complex machines as they learn about structures, forces, gear math, simple machines and motorized projects. Using teamwork and a series of challenges, groups will work together to create motorized systems and advanced challenges.

Engineering 2: Nov. 3 through Dec. 8, 3:45 to 4:30 p.m. For ages 9 through 12. Cost for the six-week class is $90.

Junior Engineering: Nov. 17 through Dec. 22, 4:45 to 5:30 p.m. For ages 7 through 9. Cost of the six-week class is $90.

Kids Just Love Crafts – Join others for a jam filled program of ooey, gooey arts and crafts, stories and songs. Watch your 2 to 4 year-old child make a mess and have some fun as they create crafts that can be treasured for a lifetime. Space is limited to 10 children with a parent. Session 2: Nov. 5 through Dec. 17; Session 3: Jan. 7 through Feb. 11; Session 4: March 4 through April 8; Session 5: April 29 through June 3. Takes place at the Cohasset Recreation Center on Thursdays, from 10 to 10:45 a.m. Fee is $60.

Kitchen Kids

Creative Cupcakes – Join Kitchen Kids and create amazing cupcakes from the book "Hello Cupcake." Each student will bring home a plate full of creative cupcakes. This class brings art and food together in a fun new way. Grades one through five Sundays 12:30 to 2 p.m. Nov. 8 to Nov. 22. Fee: $75.

The Gingerbread Man – Get into the holiday season by creating your very own Gingerbread friends. Each child will decorate gingerbread cookies with royal icing and sweet treats galore. We will read the story "The Gingerbread Man." Care giver must attend. Ages 2-6. Fee is $15 per child. Sunday, Dec. 6 from 12:30 to 1:30 p.m.

Gingerbread House – Get into the Holiday season by creating your very own mini mansion. The workshop includes festive fun, a pre assembled Gingerbread house, royal icing and sweet treats galore. Hot cocoa and cookies will be served. Sign up today. All ages. $35. Sunday, Dec. 13, from 12:30 to 2 p.m.

Babysitter Training Course – This one-day, three-hour course is designed to assist fifth through eighth graders to be better babysitters and to learn the do's and don'ts of being home alone. The course will cover information on child development, playing with younger children, basic first aid, fire safety and prevention and the overall responsibilities of babysitting. Instructor: Kim Cleary, nurse and mom. Each class is limited to 18 preregistered students. Takes place at Paul Pratt Library, Saturday, Oct. 24, or Saturday, Nov. 2, from 9 a.m. to noon. Fee is $18.

Good Manners for Beginners class offers beginner - level instructions in all of the dog obedience commands including heel work, and offers problem solving demos on issues like mouthing and jumping and helps you become "leader of the pack." Obedience and Distractions is for dogs who understand very basic concepts such as "sit, stay, come, and down" but who have trouble being consistent. The class teaches dogs to listen with greater distractions each week, less and less leash control, with the owner further and further away. Events listed below have no requirements other than a good temperament and up to date vaccinations. Every Wednesday for five weeks, Nov. 18 through Dec. 16. 6:30 p.m. Obedience with Distractions Class; 7:30 p.m. Good Manners for Beginners Class. Fee is $120.

Vacation Xtreme and December Stay-cation – Just because the kids have the time off from school doesn't mean you've got the time off work, so Cohasset Recreation is picking up the slack with vacation week programs for children of all ages.

Vacation Xtreme – For children in grades six, seven and eight, expanding upon the popular Summer Xtreme program, the Xtreme Team will be offering vacation week trips to all new destinations. More information to come. Call or check the Web site for details.

December Stay-cation: For children ages 6 through 10. A variety of arts, crafts, stories, and games will be enjoyed. Facilitated by recreation staff. It's the best way to spend your December vacation, right here in Cohasset. Dec. 28 through 31, from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. Fee: $80.

Play-Well TEKnologies LEGO Engineering – Pre-Engineering Ages: 5 to 7. Create, play, and learn. Build a town, city, or star base with houses, buildings, pyramids, bridges, tunnels, towers, and more. Build motorized cars, trains, buses, and trucks; race them; crash them; repair them. Explore the many possibilities of LEGO building systems while learning useful construction techniques. Four day program. Monday-Thursday

Engineering FUNdamentals – Ages: 8 to 12. Design and build motorized machines, catapults, pyramids, demolition derby cars, truss and suspension bridges, buildings, and other constructions. Explore concepts in physics, mechanical engineering, structural engineering, and architecture while playing with your favorite creations. This is a hands-on and minds-on class suitable for LEGO building system novices to "maniacs." Returning students will work on new projects and challenges. Four day program. Monday-Thursday at Cohasset Recreation Center. Session I: Dec. 28 through Dec. 31. Pre-Engineering: 9 a.m. to noon and FUNdamentals: 1 to 4 p.m. Session II: Jan. 4 through Jan. 8. An interview with Tracy Kidder

Pulitzer Prize winning author

By Linda Fechter
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

I'm a little suspicious of the great, overarching view. It always leaves something out. What interests me is trying to catch the reflection of the human being on the page. I'm interested in how ordinary people live their lives.

—Tracy Kidder

In this time of sweeping budget cuts to libraries, the question truly becomes, how important is the town library? How important are books to people's lives?

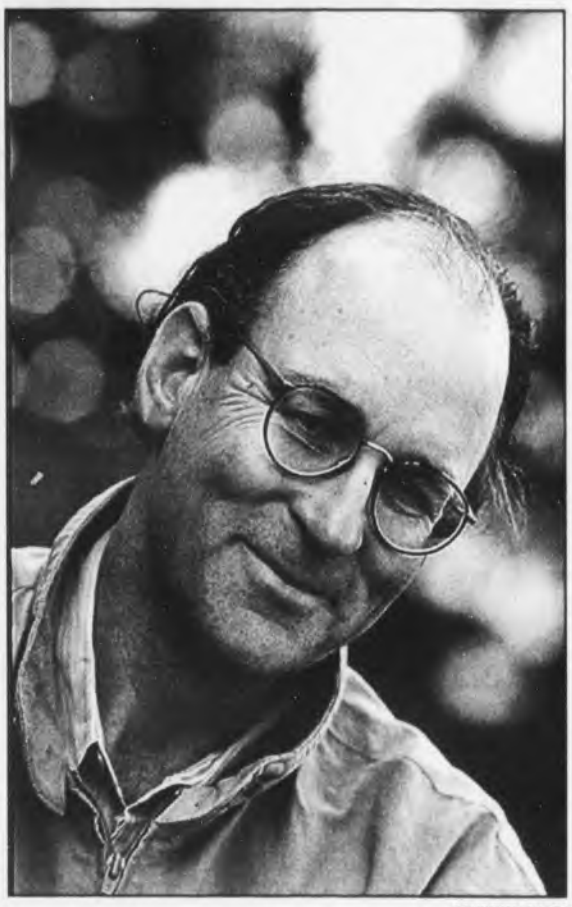
Tracy Kidder, Pulitzer Prize winning author gave us his take on what libraries mean to him and to the subject of his latest release, "Strength in What Remains."

Kidder is coming to Cohasset High School Auditorium on Monday evening, Nov. 2. In his new book, Kidder delivers the humbling story of Deo, a young man whose will to survive and love of knowledge take him from the horrors of genocide in Burundi to Columbia University and then on to medical school — a brilliant testament to the power of second chances and an inspiring account of one immigrant's remarkable American journey. Dr. Paul Farmer and Partners in Health also play a pivotal role in Deo's story, as they inspire him to transform the nightmares of his deeply impoverished and war torn country into the dream of establishing his own clinic in Burundi.

What role does a library play in your life...what do they mean to you?

Any writer with any brains has to be a supporter of the library. I once met Dr. Johnetta Cole and she told me a story about getting her doctorate: Her son said, you're not a doctor. What can you cure? And she told him, "ignorance." I think of that quote when I think of libraries, they are a great tool for curing ignorance." Personally, libraries are incredibly important, and professionally, as an author, I've relied on libraries for research and as a place to work. The Forbes Library in Northampton, Mass. was my office when I was writing, "House."

What do you think about the idea that libraries are less important than they used to be and those who say that libraries could one day be virtual?



The notion of a completely on line library horrifies me and maybe that's because I'm old. I can't imagine how one could do research on line. You'd miss out on "events" that happen during the process, like the times when I go to an area of a library and suddenly see a book that I hadn't even imagined was there, like a piece to a puzzle. I couldn't possibly sleep except for when surrounded by physical books. There might one day be a certain point when we're all living entirely on line...but I can't imagine it. Where would we be without books? That atmosphere of physical books is so important.

In Massachusetts, and across the country, libraries are losing their funding. In your view, what libraries and even bookstores bring to a town?

Many towns have lost their independent bookstores. I think libraries give a town a moral center. I don't know how we would all get along without them. It's discouraging to me that for the price of an army tank we could keep the libraries open. Resources that serve the public, like libraries get short shrift because they don't have a lot of money behind them. The cause of the public library doesn't seem to have a strong enough constituency to get the funding, but libraries bring more to a community than some realize. I remember going to a rundown little city in Massachusetts one time and visiting their library. It was not just a place of learning, but it was a safe place for people to go...a haven.

What importance do you feel that books and the library have in Deo's life, the subject of your new book "Strength in What Remains"?

Books are extremely important to Deo. He carried bundles of them in his suitcase from Burundi to that States. Once here, Libraries and bookstores were part of Deo's salvation in New York. He couldn't read any English, yet he would often go to bookstores at night after work so he could sit among the shelves. In fact, Deo didn't sleep very much except for when surrounded by physical books, among the shelves of a bookstore or library until a staff member would wake him.

COURTESY PHOTO

Libraries were one of his great refuges. New York City has some pretty wonderful books and bookstores. Those were great places for him to be. Places where he began to learn English. As for books, he was given a gift of an anatomy book written in English, even before he understood how to read the language. Het he studied it when he could, with the help of a French/English dictionary and by reviewing the photographs. He kept that book stashed safely away in an abandoned tenement apartment, where he felt it would be safe, while he was homeless in Central Park. I think he still has that book...he's so thrifty, he couldn't get rid of it.

Now let's hear about what it's like to write a book like "Strength in What Remains"? Do you get completely immersed in the story, in the life of the subject?

For me it's all consuming. All I think about, but I am aware of what I'm up against when I take on a project like this. "Strength in What Remains" took three years or research and writing. I do get completely immersed with the person I'm writing about, but I am a guest in their life, and as a rule I believe I behave better when I'm doing my job. I've found from a pretty early age that self-consciousness is utterly debilitating for a writer. I believe as a rule that I behave better when I'm doing my job.

How does writing a book differ from something like writing articles or the OpEd page for The New York Times?

OpEd in the Times is a very special sort of thing for me. It's theoretical kind of writing. As for articles, it's easy to forget how profoundly different they are from books. I wrote an article about Paul Farmer before writing Mountains Beyond Mountains and I was trying to reuse parts of it in the book. My editor said that I had to stop trying to make it work. I just had to stop and realize they were different from one another. It simply wasn't going to work, they are different animals.

The topics of your books are varied do you find it hard to write about such different subject matters?

It is always different and can be a little daunting. The thing that's difficult is finding the next thing to do, I have to search for it and I get lucky. Sometimes I'm looking for one thing and I find another, like meeting Deo through Paul Farmer.

Are you looking forward to coming to Cohasset?

Of course, I've been through Cohasset, my mother had a house in Woods Hole. That whole part of Massachusetts is very familiar to me. I'm looking forward to it.

Tracy Kidder's writing has appeared in The New Yorker, The Atlantic Monthly, Granta, The New York Times Book Review and The New York Times OpEd page and he has also written several short works of fiction. Kidder lives with his wife in western Massachusetts and in Maine.

Over his long career, Kidder's writing has been prolific and outstanding. The Soul of a New Machine—a book celebrated for its insight into the world of high-tech corporate America—earned him a Pulitzer Prize and a National Book Award in 1982. Other bestselling works include House (1985), Among Schoolchildren (1989), Old Friends (1993) and Home Town (1999).

Born in New York City in 1945, Kidder spent his childhood in Oyster Bay, Long Island, where his father was a lawyer and his mother a teacher. He attended Harvard where he earned a BA in 1967. From June 1968 until June 1969, he served as a lieutenant in Vietnam for which he was awarded a Bronze Star.

Tickets for the Nov. 2 event, "An Evening with Tracy Kidder," are $10.00 each and are available at Buttonwood Books & Toys and the Paul Pratt Memorial Library. Book signing is at 6:30 p.m. Talk begins promptly at 7 p.m. Proceeds to benefit the Cohasset Library Trust. All are encouraged to attend this very special author presentation. Visit www.cohassetlibrary.org for more information.

HAPPENINGS

Community Garden Club of Cohasset will present Books in Bloom at Paul Pratt Library, 35 Ripley Road, Cohasset, on Oct. 28, 29 and 30. The show will have an autumn theme.

Club members will interpret a number of book titles that have a fall connotation through fresh flower arrangements. This is not a standard flower show. It is meant to be interpretive and creative. Arrangements can be viewed 10 a.m. to 5 p.m., on Wednesday, Oct. 28 and Friday, Oct. 30; and 10 a.m. to 8 p.m., on Thursday, Oct. 29. The event is open to the public and admission is free.

Broadway smash is coming soon!

The Cohasset Dramatic Club (CDC) will present Ken Ludwig's smash Broadway hit "Lend Me a Tenor," from Nov. 6 to 15 at the historic Town Hall Theater on the Cohasset Common. An outstanding cast of well-known South Shore actors will present this laugh-a-minute comedy, winner of three Tony Awards, and enjoyed by audiences here and abroad.

The show takes place in 1934, as cast and staff of the Cleveland Grand Opera Company prepare for the big opening night of Verdi's 'Otello' with famed (fictional) opera star Tito Merelli. Mistaken identity, slamming doors, high-strung characters and an uproarious series of mishaps combine to ensure non-stop laughter for the audience.

To highlight the show within the play aspect of "Lend Me a Tenor," CDC will present the incoming audience members with faux programs and posters from "Otello" and will recreate an opening night at the Opera experience for the first Saturday evening performance, complete with red carpet and formally dressed opera patrons.

Lend Me a Tenor plays Friday and Saturdays, Nov. 6, 7, 13 and 14, at 7:30 p.m. and matinees on Sunday, Nov. 8 and 15 at 2 p.m. at the Cohasset Town Hall Theater, 41 Highland Avenue. Tickets are priced at $16 for general admission and $14 for seniors, students and groups. They can be purchased at Paperscapes Cohasset Village, Buttonwood Books CJC Hwy, Cohasset or via reservation at 617-697-2115. Tickets may also be purchased the day of the show, one hour prior to the show at the box office. For more information, go to www.cohassetdramaticclub.org.

SOFT SELL

Software allows users to interact with a computer. It enables the computer to perform particular tasks. A computer would be useless without any sort of software. Included in the many sorts of software available are operating systems, audio software, games, programs, utilities, and video editing. Software is one of the leading causes of computer-related issues. These problems can generally be handled by either not running two or more programs at the same time or reinstalling the software. Many issues with software, or bugs, are resolved by patches or software updates. Generally, before launching software, it is tested for use by either an individual or a group. Many tests on functionality appearance, and performance are conducted to assure its integrity.

Software is a general term used to describe the role that computer programs, documentation, and procedures play in a computer system. At RGB COMPUTER SOLUTIONS, we are technology junkies and truly enjoy the benefits of technology. Located at 94 Station St., 2nd Floor, Hingham, we are the local computer and technology experts, and are here to help you with all your computer needs. We offer services to both businesses and home users. Call 781.749.1130 if you need help. Get control of your computer.

Here comes the dreaded trap game

POPPIN' OFF

WILLIAM WASSERSUG

Remember Sunday's Patriots game against the Titans.

Yes, that 59-0 glorified practice in the snow.

That is what the Cohasset football team is facing when they travel to East Bridgewater tonight to face a 1-5 Vikings team.

Coming into that game, Patriots coaches and players preached not looking past the 0-6 Titans.

They preached a hard week of practice and focus.

They preached looking beyond the record.

Tournament invite within reach

By William Wassersug
WWASSERS@CNC.COM

The Cohasset boys soccer team inched a bit closer to an MIAA Tournament invitation on Wednesday with a 0-0 tie at Mashpee.

The Skippers' have 15 points and need 18 to get in.

"We need a win and a tie in the last four," Cohasset coach Jim Willis said. "But we'd prefer to do better than that. There are so many really good teams like Spellman, Harwich and Westport at the top of the D-3 draw that we'd rather get in better than .500, get a good seed and have to play them in the first round."

Four ties would actually punch the ticket as well, but again, Willis would prefer to go in on a roll.

Boys' Soccer

Cohasset has beaten or tied all but Scituate.

The loss to Scituate was a 2-1 loss on opening night.

The rematch will be next Friday under the lights at home.

The Skippers have come a long way from the beginning of the season, especially when it comes to defense.

Cohasset, behind goalie Will Wise, has only allowed three goals in the past 11 games.

He's had eight shutouts in that span.

"Will gave up seven goals in the first three games," Willis said. "Then we put a new defense in that has helped as well. Once we figured out how it worked, it clicked."

Anders Goetz scored the game-winner in that one, which Willis was extremely pleased about because three starters were out with illness or injury.

Willis said Goetz, along with Drew Cobin have been huge.

"Anders Goetz and Drew Cobin have been outstanding," he said. "They're not scoring all the time, but they do a great job pushing the ball up the field and helping the defense. That's a big part of our game."

Looking for a strong finish

WWASSERS@CNC.COM

The Cohasset golf team was hoping for a big run to the end of the season.

Wednesday, the Skippers beat Scituate 28.5-25.5 at Widow's Walk to improve to 11-2 for the season and end Scituate's playoff hopes.

The Sailors had come into the match with a four-match win streak and needed a win to get to .500 to qualify for the State Tournament.

Meanwhile, Cohasset has been qualified for a while and was set to play yesterday against East Bridgewater for a South Shore League title.

Golf

A loss and they'd tie with Norwell and Mashpee.

Still, the win over Scituate was a good one.

David Hill was a 5-4 winner with a 45 and Sebastian Braga shot a 46 while winning 5-4.

Next week will be busy for the Skippers with the MIAA Sectionals on Tuesday at Pocasset Golf Club in Pocasset, MA (right near Bourne).

Wednesday the team will play at the South Shore League meet at Cranberry Valley in Harwich.

Cohasset vs. Abington up for High School Friday

The undefeated Cohasset Skippers Football Team has received an invitation from Fox 25 Sports to participate in an upcoming "High School Friday" game of the week (see below). On Friday November 6, the Skippers will host another undefeated league rival Abington Green Wave in a game that could decide the South Shore League Title and a trip to the MIAA Super Bowl Tournament.

Beginning this Friday, we need your help in order for us win this opportunity to be featured as the High School Friday game of the week. Go to www.myfoxboston.com and go to the High School Friday page beginning this Friday, October 23. Vote for the Abington at Cohasset game as many times as you can throughout the week. Vote early, vote often, just vote, vote, vote.

It worked, and for Cohasset coach Pete Afanasiw, that has been the goal this week – to get the Skippers to look beyond the record to focus on a team that has been very competitive despite the 1-5 disguise.

"I expect a very difficult game," Afanasiw said Wednesday night. "As a team they have been very competitive. I'm expecting them to be as competitive as Mashpee."

For comparison sake, East Bridgewater lost 26-21 at Mashpee and 24-21 in double overtime to Hanover.

They also battled Hull in a 14-7 loss and hung tough in an 18-6 loss to a very good Plymouth South team.

They beat Cardinal Spellman 32-14 last week.

Afanasiw knows it.

"All the recipes are there for an upset," he said. "The kids see 1-5 and it can be difficult to get by."

Considering undefeated Abington is next on the schedule (Nov. 6) and Fox 25 is touting it as a potential Game of the Week (vote a lot), that can make for the trap.

"They have an outstanding running back," Afanasiw said. "He's got three or five punt and kick returns for touchdowns. He had 149 yards against Mashpee. Dana was at 97."

While Cohasset has the win over Mashpee to savor, the Skippers had to battle too much, or so the films showed.

That could be motivation for this week.

"Offensively we had five possessions inside the 35, and three inside the 10 in the first half," Afanasiw said. "And we only came out with six points. If we punch in two or three of them, they tuck their tails and we win easily. Every now and then you have to win ugly."

The missed opportunities are things Cohasset has worked to fix in practice.

Of those possessions there were two fumbles, an interception and a turnover on downs.

"We had some missed assignments," Afanasiw said. "That led to the turnovers. One of them, when Dana fumbled, the Mashpee kid made a nice play in penetration and disrupted the handoff. The others were just missed assignments. Those are things we can fix."

Fot Cohasset, the keys to a win are simple.

Stick with their basics, don't underestimate the opponent or look ahead, and remember this is a South Shore League game.

"Week in and week out we need to find a sense of pride in what we're doing," Afanasiw said. "We want to get better every week and play our best football at all times. We're trying to emphasize that."

With all that said, Afanasiw said a little karma from the Patriots game on Sunday wouldn't be a bad thing.

"I wouldn't mind a blowout," he said.

You never know.

That's why they play the games.

Skippers knock off Mashpee

Win improves Cohasset to 6-0

By William Wassersug
WWASSERS@CNC.COM

The Cohasset football team improved their chances in the South Shore League, potentially dashed those of a major rival for the title and improved their overall record to 6-0 (2-0 South Shore League) with a 14-6 win over previously undefeated Mashpee on Homecoming night at Cohasset last Friday.

Big plays and great defense turned out to be the difference for the Skippers as quarterback Jeff Cavanaro hit Brendan Doonan with a 28-yard sideline pass that set up a four-yard touchdown by Dana Valentine with 3:08 left to play.

With the game tied 6-6, Doonan hauled in Cavanaro's pass, keeping his feet just inbounds as he came down with the ball on a third-and-11 play.

Valentine followed with the second of his two touchdowns of the day, a Superman-style dive into the end zone for a 12-6 lead.

He finished with 72 yards for the night, bringing him over the 1,000 yard rushing mark for the season.

Cavanaro then found Dean Driscoll in the left corner for a two-point conversion.

"I knew I had to step up big," Doonan said about his big catch. "I dropped a few balls I should have caught. I knew I had to come up with it."

Doonan said the pass was right there, and he had no doubt that he'd be able to make the play.

"I counted the numbers (on the field)," he said. "I thought if I took too many steps I'd be out. Jeff threw a nice one."

Earlier in the game, Doonan had missed a couple of passes, including one in the end zone.

"I was so amped up," he said. "I might have been a little nervous. I stuck with it. It paid off."

The Skippers got on the board first with an eight-play drive that covered 55 yards, capped by Valentine's four-yard jaunt for a 6-0 lead near the end of the first quarter.

Cohasset had a couple of chances to take control when Mashpee fumbled the kickoff at their own 19, but three plays later, Cavanaro was intercepted in the end zone.

Cohasset forced a punt on Mashpee's possession, and followed by moving the ball to the one, but a fumble gave the ball back again.

Mashpee came out fighting in the second half, driving 75 yards in 12 plays, capped by a one-yard run through the middle on fourth-and-one by Zach Martin with 3:58 left in the third quarter.

The kick was wide left and the game held 6-6.

The Skippers almost had the big play one possession earlier than their touchdown, when Doonan just missed converting a fourth-and-eight play on a fake punt that came up about a foot short of a first down at the Mashpee 26.

The defense held though, pushing Mashpee backward to the 20 when they punted the last time.

"This is a great win," Doonan said. "We knew we had to win. If we lost we'd need help in the league."

Mashpee had entered the game 5-0, coming off a 21-0 win over a 4-0 Norwell squad last week.

Cohasset coach Pete Afanasiw said the team's early schedule that included Hingham and Scituate helped, especially for the South Shore League schedule that leaves no room for setbacks. Cohasset is 2-0 in the South Shore League, while Mashpee fell to 1-1.

"We play playoff games in the regular season," he said. "I have to give the kids a lot of credit. They showed a tremendous amount of backbone. This is a great group of kids. They work hard, they practice hard. They're all good kids. They want to win. They play hard."

Inside the 6 – Soccer Power Rankings

By Ryan Wood
RWOOD@#CNC.COM

This is week three of Inside the 6, and as the season is winding down, the action is heating up. The boys top six almost remained the same as all teams continue to impress, but there is a new entry and one team drops out completely. There was some major reshuffling in the girls' rankings. One team dropped out and another is making its first appearance of the season. There was also a huge shakeup in the girls' top six, which may turn some heads, but it shouldn't surprise everyone. Two teams dropped a spot, while one made a huge jump to number one for the first time this year. These rankings reflect performances and outcomes through Sunday, Oct. 18, 2009.

The Inside the Six Power Rankings are decided based on a number of criteria: record, goals scored, goals conceded, and strength of schedule. The schools in our coverage area include: Abington, Braintree, Carver, Cohasset, Duxbury, Hanover, Hingham, Holbrook, Marshfield, Norwell, Pembroke, Plymouth North, Plymouth South, Rockland, Scituate, Silver Lake, and Weymouth.

Boys

1. Duxbury – Hey, this one's a shocker … right. This is about as shocking as Manchester United winning the Premiership, which is as far from shocking as possible. The Green Dragons continue to dominate, and last week was no different. The boys still hold down first place in the Patriot League Keenan Division and have qualified for the postseason.

2. Hanover – The other side of the Patriot League Division (Fisher) has one team that's starting to run away from the pack, and that's the Hanover boys. They're in the tournament and look to be a lock for that Fisher title.

3. Hingham – The Harbormen are proving to be a thorn in Duxbury's side. The pesky club still has an outside chance (if it gets the help of others) to gain at least a tie of the Keenan Division crown.

4. Norwell – People may think this is the surprise team of the season. Granted, the Clippers record far exceeds last year's record at this stage of the game, but these boys have shown up each game, and they came into this week in second place in the South Shore League, one spot behind Harwich.

5. Weymouth – I've said it a hundred times, so let's make it 101. The Bay State Carey league is by far one of the top 3 conferences in eastern Mass., right up there with the Patriot League and the Atlantic Coast League. The Weymouth boys are a tough team to beat, and come tournament time, these Wildcats have a tendency to roll right over their opponents.

6. Rockland – Scratch your heads no more. And stop looking at the Bulldogs' overall record. The 'Dogs have put themselves into position to lock a postseason berth just by finishing in second place in the Patriot League Fisher Division. Not only that, but they possess the league's top scorer in Bruno DaSilva (18 goals, 14 assists, 32 points).

Girls

1. Norwell – With a pair of wins last week, the Lady Clippers improved to 13-0 overall and have all but clinched the South Shore League title (on paper, they have, but the game's still need to be played, right?). The girls now have nine shutouts, a margin of victory of five goals per game, and have scored 72 goals, while conceding only five.

2. Plymouth North – The Lady Eagles needed one more win to wrap up the Atlantic Coast League title. They have the top goalie in the league in Liz Lincoln, who has a 0.42 goals against average in 12 games. This team has become tougher as the season has gone on and are always very dangerous down the stretch.

3. Duxbury – Three wins in a row, including a hard-fought, 2-1 over Pembroke to end last week, have put the Lady Dragons into the tournament. They had a strong showing against Pembroke, but should've been able to score at least a three-goal victory over the struggling Titans.

4. Scituate – This team came out of nowhere. After starting out slow, losing their first three games of the season, the Lady Sailors have won 10 in a row. Now that they're into the postseason, the girls look to challenge Hanover and Rockland for the Patriot League Fisher Division title.

5. Hanover – The Lady Indians have hit a couple rough patches, but remain one of the top two teams in the Patriot League Fisher Division. Expect the girls to step up their play as the regular season comes to an end.

6. Plymouth South – The Lady Panthers dropped one spot, but still remain one of the teams to beat in the Atlantic Coast League. The girls have qualified for the postseason for the second year in a row, the first time in the program's 20-year history that it has reached the tournament in consecutive years.

South Coastal Men's Hockey roundup

By Mark Ducharme
CORRESPONDENT

There are still two teams that are undefeated in the South Coastal Men's Hockey League after the sixth week of the season.

The Rangers in the Classics Div. and the defending champion Toros in the Legends Div. both came up with wins in their respective games to stay undefeated.

Marshfield's Tom Smith scored two goals, Dan Ryan of Hanover had a goal and an assist and Mike Crisp added a goal in the Rangers' 4-2 win over the Red Wings.

Steve Figioli scored both of the Red Wings goals.

A former Red Wing, Art Murphy of Pembroke scored a goal as did Bob Conley, John Thoms, James Ward of Norwell and Mark Hurley in the Toros 5-3 win over the Stingers.

Mike Simon gave the Crusaders the early lead, but Bill McMahon of Scituate scored with 9:57 left in the game to give the Whalers a 1-1 tie in a Legends Div. matchup Jay Faherty scored two goals and assisted on another as the Sharks pulled out a 7-5 Legends Div. game victory over the Saints. Tim Cruz Jay Sloan and Mike Valenti all of Marshfield, Dana Dolabany of Norwell and Art Riccio added a goal each for the Sharks.

Paul Lyons of Pembroke scored two goals as the Blackhawks held off the Bruins by a 2-1 score in a Classics Div. game. Pembroke's Jim Mulhern scored the Bruins goal.

In the Masters Div. the first-place Thunder got single goals from Tom Maguire, Mike Maguire of Hanover, Fred Viola of Pembroke and Ken Oliveri as they held on for a 4-3 win over the Roadrunners.

Tim Routhier, Bob Ward and Brian Kennedy of Marshfield scored the goals for the Roadrunners.

Joe MacLeod of Pembroke scored two goals that were set up by John McDonough as the Aeros pulled out a 2-1 win over the Grizzlies in a Masters Div. game.

Two more players who have been huge are John McGoldrick and Jack Murphy.

"John has stepped in to play center defense with no varsity experience at that position," Willis said. "He had to move in when we lost Travers Craven with a broken arm. In our system, that position is crucial. The defense revolves around him."

Murphy has also been a defensive force.

"Jack Murphy is one of the most feared players in the league," Willis said. "He does everything. He makes plays, pushes the ball up. He's been huge."

When it comes to the South Shore League, third place is still up for grabs, and Willis is hoping the Skippers can take it.

"We've beaten or tied everyone but Harwich (a pair of 1-0 losses)," he said. "That's tough to do. This is a very strong league, very competitive. We could send five teams to the tournament. I'd like to see that."

Milestone victory for Cohasset Skipper

Cohasset coach Deb Beal picked up career win No. 100 with last Thursday's 2-0 victory over Carver, then quickly followed with victories 101 and 102, wins over Hull on Monday and Mashpee on Wednesday.

The Mashpee win improved Cohasset to 9-4 and qualified them for the Div. 3 South Sectional tournament.

Last year, Cohasset won the South Sectional title.

Christine Coner scored twice for Cohasset in Wednesday's 4-0 victory and Danielle Sookiasian and Carli Haggerty also scored.

In the Hull victory, Caroline Fein and Rachel Fredey both scored.

See what South Shore Voke has in store

Charles Homer, superintendent of the South Shore Regional Vocational Technical High School, has announced the annual open house of South Shore Regional, located at 476 Webster St. (Route 123 in Hanover) will take place Thursday, Dec. 10 from 6–8:30 p.m. Snow date is Monday, Dec. 14, also from 6 – 8:30 p.m.

Homer reports that 14 technical programs will be staffed to explain their programs to future students and their parents. Homer said he hopes that not only eighth graders and their parents will attend but also sixth and seventh graders will come out to see what the four-year regional technical high school has to offer.

South Shore Vo-Tech offers programs in auto body, automotive, carpentry, cosmetology, culinary arts, drafting, electrical, graphic arts, health careers, heating, ventilation and air conditioning, electronics, precision machine technology and welding metal fabrication.

The annual open house will also have technical and academic displays along with baking and pastry displays. For more information on the open house, call 781-871-4153.

Homecoming Week was wild and fun

LIFE AT CHS

SEAN MACCARTHY

This incredibly spectacular week could not have been possible without the hard work of both the school administration and the Student Council.

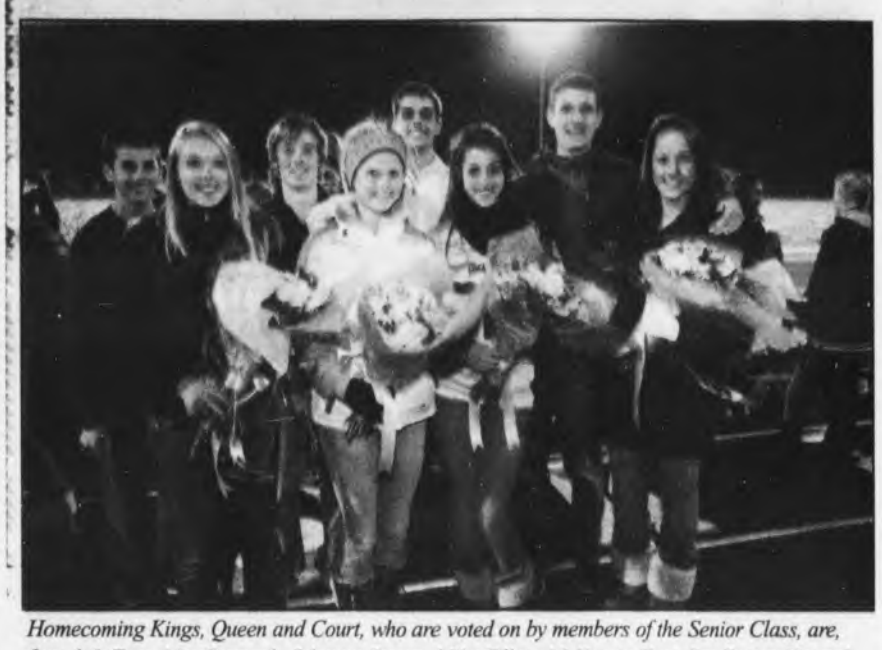
You may have noticed an absence of this column in last week's paper. No it's not because I got too lazy and didn't do the column and it's not because I forgot about it again. There was no article last week because it would have only covered a small portion of all the great fun that went on last week. Therefore, let me begin the most awesome week known to Cohasset High School attendees, Homecoming week! Sure some people hate the notion of spirit week but hey, that's just their decision to be ignorant without caring about what the kids want in their lives. Want to guess what it is? I know! FUN!

Monday was Columbus Day meaning we all celebrated this completely random but cool (cool because it gets us out of school) holiday. Tuesday was a bit different. Tuesday was Farmers Day for Cohasset High School…well…at least for most of it. And by most of it, I mean freshmen, sophomores, and juniors. Seniors on the other hand had their own day and that day was Jungle Day. The seniors arrived at the school, much to the dismay of the administration, dressed as jungle warriors, safari men, and jungle animals at about 7 in the morning ready to LOUDLY welcome the underclassmen to school. Some (seniors) call this fun and some (underclassmen) call this harassment. Whatever side you are on, you can't deny the gratuitous amount of spirit involved, which is very healthy.

Then came Wednesday, which was Formal Day for the freshmen, sophomores, and juniors. The seniors, on the other hand, had Classic Greek and Roman Day. Once again, the spirit filled seniors gathered at the CHS entrance around 7 o'clock with their shields steadied, swords sharpened, and their togas on nice and tight. There the seniors held their ground striking down and pushing back all those who tried to enter the school. Kids were being knocking over as the seniors rallied to the calls of their leader who asked "Seniors! What is your profession???" to which the seniors replied "HAROO! HAROO! HAROO!" Okay so that only happened in the movie 300…in reality, the seniors once again welcomed all those who entered the school cheering for everyone that walked through the door. We seriously did do the "HAROO!" thing though. That was definitely a highlight of the week.

As I stated before, the administration had some problems with the seniors dressing up differently than the rest of the school because it "created class conflict". After a grueling 35 minutes negotiation process between the administration and the senior Student Council members, an agreement was reached that had everyone in the school dress up the same for Thursday and Friday. This wasn't the most popular decision made by the Student Council but this didn't stop the spirit from growing. So on Thursday, EVERYONE in the school dressed up like movie characters. There were Disney characters, action movie characters, some Risky Business look-a-likes, and some guys dressed up as some Mean Girls. All in all, Thursday was a day where everyone in the school could enjoy the same day. Whether or not this brought about more spirit remains to be seen.

And then there was Friday, the last day of spirit week. Everyone in the school put on the colors of Cohasset, blue and white as it was Blue and White Day. Everyone was sharing blue and white beads, blue and white face paint, and blue and white spirit. Teams were sporting their uniforms while others wore whatever they could find that had blue and white on it. This may not have been the most entertaining day to dress up for, but it was great to see everyone wear the school colors with pride.



Also on Friday was the pep rally. In past years, it has been a lackluster event that no one really had fun with. It has sort of been listen to the chorus, listen to the band, watch the cheerleaders, listen to the team captains…a wash, rinse, repeat kind of thing. This year's Student Council wasn't exactly down with that. What better way to spark up the students of CHS? Renting sumo suits!!! (which is totally not controversial at all, some people are just overly sensitive). Since students weren't allowed to compete in them because of that whole "creating class conflict" thing, we got teachers to participate in some match ups. The Master of English Literature and Mayhem, Mr. McCabe faced off against King Neptune's Illegitimate Child, Mr. Fish. Mr. McCabe won that bout after some hilarious antics that got the crowd going. The next match was between the Renegade Russian, Cruel Coach Afanasiw and Mr. Better than Bruce Willis. Coach A found himself in the winner's circle after a nice little skit that the Soccer and Football coaches performed. The champion and winner of the coveted Skipper Teacher Showdown blow-up trophy was Mr. McCabe in the end. A huge thanks to all teachers involved because it took a lot of guts for them to do that in front of all their students.

Finally, right after an amazing 14-6 win for the football team over the Mashpee Falcons, the Cohasset High School students flowed into the cafeteria for the Homecoming Dance. I'm sorry, did I say Homecoming Dance? I meant GLO JAM! Black lights + white clothes + glow paint + glow tape + glow rope = the best dance in Cohasset High School history, GLO JAM! You think I am joking about it being the best dance in school history? Well ask the record breaking 246 people that showed up and had the time of their lives. It truly was an amazing and well planned event thanks almost everyone showing up and everyone looking to have fun. Can you say GLO JAM 2?!?

This incredibly spectacular week could not have been possible without the hard work of both the school administration and the Student Council. Thanks to all who helped plan these events to make this one of the most fun weeks in school history. It really was a great week.

Wow that was a long article. Hope you enjoyed that as much as everyone enjoyed spirit week. With all that being said, I am ready to write again next week. Ciao.

Sean MacCarthy had a blast all last week.

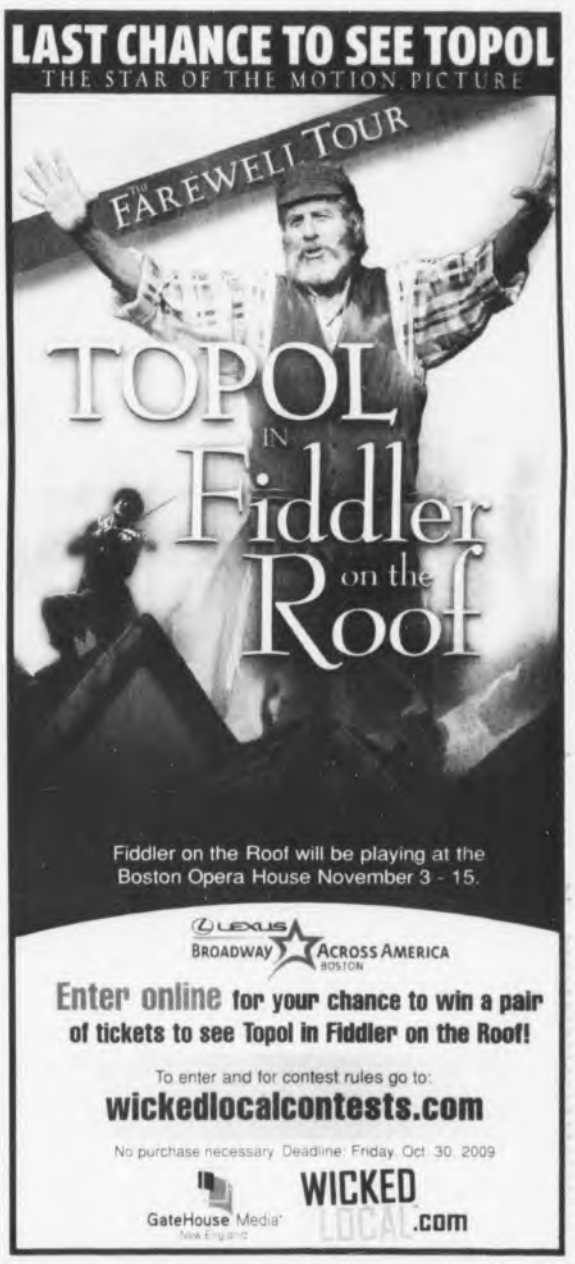
Cyclists encouraged to use helmets



Cohasset Police Department encourages all bicyclists, skateboarders and scooter riders to use helmets while riding. Helmets are mandated for all children 16 and younger. According to the National Transportation Safety Board, bicycle helmet use can reduce the risk of head injury by 85 percent and brain injury by 88 percent. Children and adolescents between 11-14 are least likely to use a helmet, and are five times more likely to sustain injuries in a bicycle related crash than any other age group – an 11 percent compliance rate.

Cohasset Police have bike helmets that are available at no charge to residents and their families. For information, ask at the front window of police headquarters.

No child under 1 year of age may be carried on a bicycle

Children between 1 and 4 years old are required to be in a baby seat that protects the child's feet and hands.

Horoscope

SALOME'S STARS
FOR RELEASE WEEK OF
NOV. 2, 2009

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) Lots of choices could make it difficult to select what is best for your needs. Avoid snap judgments. Take the time to check them all out to find the one that really meets your goals.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) You could once again experience pressure from others who would like to see you move in another direction. But heed your Bovine instincts to stay on your own path.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) Taking charge of a project that seems to be about to stall or collapse altogether could be a challenge. But once everyone knows what you expect of him or her, things should go smoothly.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) Avoid the pressures of the upcoming holiday period by setting a time right now to discuss how to divide up the responsibility of helping a loved one come through a difficult period.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) It's not too early for all you Leonas and Leos to start making long-distance travel plans. The sooner you stop procrastinating and start deciding where, when and how you're going, the better.

VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) Someone you've known for years might disappoint you, or even make you feel you've been betrayed. But check the facts carefully before you make charges that could backfire on you.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) A holiday plan might need to be revised to accommodate an unexpected complication. Come up with an alternative arrangement as soon as possible to avoid more problems down the line.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) Don't accept halfway explanations for a situation that requires full disclosure. The more you know now, the better able you will be to handle any complications that might arise.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) The cooperation you relied upon might not be easy to get. Maybe there's an information gap. See if everyone understands the situation. If not, be sure to offer a full explanation.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) Problems caused by that recent workplace distraction should soon be easing, allowing you to resume working at a less frantic pace. That personal matter also begins to ease up.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) Changing your mind about a job decision isn't easy for the usually committed Aquarian. But once you check it out, you'll find facts you didn't know before. And facts don't lie.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) Your unique way of sizing up a situation gives you an edge in resolving that upsetting workplace problem. Stay on your current course regardless of any attempts to distract you.

Fun By The Numbers

Like puzzles? Then you'll love sudoku. This mind-bending puzzle will have you hooked from the moment you square off, so sharpen your pencil and put your sudoku savvy to the test!

Here's How It Works:

Sudoku puzzles are formatted as a 9x9 grid, broken down into nine 3x3 boxes. To solve a sudoku, the numbers 1 through 9 must fill each row, column and box. Each number can appear only once in each row, column and box. You can figure out the order in which the numbers will appear by using the numeric clues already provided in the boxes. The more numbers you name, the easier it gets to solve the puzzle!

This Mortimer is no Cary Grant

By R. Scott Reedy
CORRESPONDENT

When most people think of Mortimer Brewster – the theater-despising drama critic at the center of "Arsenic and Old Lace" – Cary Grant comes to mind. The movie idol starred in the 1944 film version of the play, of course, but there have also been many other Mortimers.

And Grant himself was almost not among them. Legend has it that Bob Hope was director Frank Capra's first choice. Paramount wouldn't loan Hope to Warner Bros., however, so Capra made other offers, first to Jack Benny and then to Ronald Reagan, before finally going with Grant. Veteran stage actor Allan Joslyn originated the role on Broadway in 1941, with Tony Roberts stepping in for the 1987 revival.

Boston audiences may recall Gary Sandy ('WKRP in Cincinnati") as Mortimer in a 1987 national tour that spent a month at Boston's Shubert Theatre. In that version, Sandy was joined by a cavalcade of fellow television actors including Jean Stapleton ("All in the Family"), Marion Ross ("Happy Days"), Larry Storch ("F Troop") and Jonathan Frid ("Dark Shadows.")

Norwell's Company Theatre is staging its own production of the black comedy this month with the role of Mortimer being played by Brockton's Steve Shannon, who is quick to differentiate himself from the most famous of his predecessors.

"I'm not going to compare myself to Cary Grant, because the play and the movie are quite different. Mortimer is much less of a playboy in the stage version," explained Shannon last week by telephone.

Written by American playwright Joseph Kesselring, the plot involves Mortimer's dealings with his humorously homicidal Brooklyn family as he decides whether to end his bachelorhood and finally marry the woman he loves. Mortimer's relatives include two unmarried aunts who have the curious habit of murdering lonely old men by poisoning them with a glass of home-made wine laced with arsenic, strychnine and cyanide; one brother, who believes he is President Theodore Roosevelt; and another murderous brother whose identity-concealing plastic surgery has left him looking a lot like horror film star Boris Karloff, who actually originated this role in New York.

"Mortimer is definitely the sanest one in the family. He is a little crazy, too, but nothing like his aunts and his brothers. The thing about him, however, is that he really cares deeply about his family. When he hears about the 12 bodies that have been buried in his aunts' cellar, he tries very hard to protect them," says the Illinois-born Shannon. A music teacher in the Abington Public Schools since 1989, and a performer whose credits include the South Shore premiere of "The Producers" at Foxboro's Orpheum Theatre, as well as "The Music Man," "Company," "Dirty Blonde," "To Kill a Mockingbird," and "Jesus Christ Superstar" at the Company Theatre.

Mindful that his current vehicle is already very familiar to many theatergoers, Shannon credits director Peter Carey of Randolph with helping keep it fresh.

"This is a very well-written, time-tested show," explains Shannon, who will direct his own separate productions of "Seussical The Musical" this fall for the Academy of the Company Theatre and next spring at Abington High School. "At our first rehearsal, Peter told us that 'Arsenic and Old Lace' is like a machine and we just have to make sure it works well by keeping a very brisk pace. Thanks to Peter's advice and excellent direction, we're not only keeping the energy up, we're also hitting each of the funny spots dead-on."

"Arsenic and Old Lace" will be at the Company Theatre, 30 Accord Park Drive, Norwell, through Oct. 25. For tickets and information, visit the box office, call 781- 871-2787 or go online at companytheatre.com.

'Who's Afraid of Virginia Woolf' opens despite author's objections

By R. Scott Reedy
CORRESPONDENT

Edward Albee's "Who's Afraid of Virginia Woolf?" has been creating riveting drama on-stage and off since its Broadway premiere 47 years ago this month.

It won the 1963 Tony Award for Best Play, but had its Pulitzer Prize revoked for its liberal use of profanity and sexual themes. Boston's Publick Theatre stirred up some controversy of its own with the play last month when Albee pulled the rights just days before the current Publick production was set to open. The playwright finally relented only with the proviso that a slip sheet be included in the program stating that, "This production is not approved by its author, Edward Albee. Nevertheless, the production has been allowed to open."

It's not clear what led to Albee's disapproval and it is hard to see anything he could strongly object to in director Diego Arciniegas' thoroughly engrossing production which stars the well-matched Nigel Gore and Tina Packer as George and Martha, the mind-game playing, middle-aged college professor and his wife who ensnare a young couple in their torturous interplay one very late, long evening.

Martha (Tina Packer) and George (Nigel Gore) in Publick Theatre Boston's production of Edward Albee's "Who's Afraid Of Virginia Woolf?" Directed by Diego Arciniegas, the penetrating and harrowing exploration of marital strife and truth versus illusion runs through Oct. 24, 2009 at the Plaza Theatre at the Boston Center for the Arts.

If the 1950s were all about Dwight and Mamie, wholesome values, and happy families, then the 1960s turned that notion on its ear. And in 1962, Albee presented a very different American story with his fascinating look at domestic warfare on the campus of a staid New England college.

George and Martha practice their cruel gamesmanship in full view of Nick and Honey, played here by the sturdily handsome Kevin Kaine and the youthfully flighty Angie Jepson. The younger couple has come for a night cap, but stays for a booze-fueled evening of verbal and physical jousting.

Packer, founder of Shakespeare & Company in Lenox, leaves in more of her natural British accent than seems right for her character, but she still uses all her considerable powers to create a Martha who is equal parts a haranguing harridan and a heartbreaking lost soul. Gore's George is both conspirator and opponent in not his relationship with Martha, but also with his fellow faculty member Nick. It is hard to take your eyes off Packer, but Gore's multi-layered portrayal is commanding, too, especially as the balance shifts to George.

Publick producing director Susanne Nitter does double duty handling the period-perfect costumes for this production. Set designer Dahlia Al-Habieli fares less well on the Plaza Theatre's thrust stage, where the furniture has been placed awkwardly facing George and Martha's front door instead of the audience – and would someone please get some tongs for the ice bucket? Edward Albee would never use his hands and neither should his characters.

Atlantic Symphony mixes art, caring and music

Conductor of the Atlantic Symphony Orchestra, Jin Kim.

Atlantic Symphony Orchestra has planned a grand celebration of art and music for its Opening Night Masterworks concert on Saturday, Oct. 24, at the Duxbury Performing Arts Center. Plus, a portion of the proceeds benefit Norwell Visiting Nurse Association and Hospice and Campus of Caring, two non-profit agencies partnering to bring hospice care, education and support to the South Shore.

The orchestra, led by conductor Jin Kim, performs three colorful musical portraits to launch the season: Haydn's Symphony No. 6 Le Matin, Copland's Three Latin American Sketches, and Mussorgsky's Pictures at an Exhibition. In a major collaboration with several South Shore arts organizations, two schools and a library, 45 artists have created artwork inspired by the movements of Pictures at an Exhibition.

"As soon as Jin decided to program Pictures at an Exhibition, we knew we wanted to get creative," says the orchestra's managing director, Nina Wellford. "Mussorgsky was inspired in 1874 by an art exhibit of works by his deceased good friend, Victor Hartmann. Each movement of the piece has an unusual theme, like Ballet of the Unhatched Chicks, Market at Limoges, Catacombs and Cattle. But Hartmann's work has been largely lost, so artists are free to interpret the music in their own way."

Participating artists include children at the Inly School, high school students at Thayer, and professionals from North River, Scituate, South Shore, Hull and Quincy Art associations. Each organization chose one movement to illustrate; the results will be displayed in the lobby gallery, and select pieces will be projected beside the orchestra during the concert.

Doors to the Art Exhibition open at 6:30 pm; conductor Jin Kim gives a pre-concert talk at 7 p.m., the concert begins at 7:30 p.m., and artists, musicians and the audience mingle during the post-concert dessert reception in the gallery.

Tickets at $35 Adults, $25 Seniors, $10 youth through age 18 are available in advance at www.atlanticsymphony.org, or 781-740-5694, and at Front Street Gallery, Scituate and Westwinds Book Store, Duxbury.

In addition, NVNA and Hospice along with Campus of Caring will host "Artful Caring," using the concert to raise funds to support their agencies. Benefit tickets for the art exhibition and concert are $50. A limited number of tickets are available for a pre-symphony wine tasting sponsored by the Boston Winery at North Hill Country Club, 47 Merry St., in Duxbury starting at 5 p.m. Tickets for both the wine tasting and symphony are $75. For tickets and more information, call 781-659-2342 or visit www.nvna.org.

Women aviators help keep Earhart's legacy alive

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

At the very heart of it, they are women who love to fly.

Along with 5,500 women pilots all across the world, Cohasset resident Margot Cheel and Scituate resident Trish Sauve are part of a organization keeping alive and continuing the long history of women in aviation.

The Ninety-Nines International Organization of Women Pilots, whose first president was Amelia Earhart, was established to provide mutual support and advancement of aviation.

There is a resurgent interest in Amelia Earhart and all she accomplished for women's aviation because of the Hollywood biopic "Amelia" detailing her life premiered last weekend.

But, Cheel and Sauve have long known, recognized and been inspired by the first aviatrix to cross the Atlantic Ocean.

While aviation and women have made huge strides separately, women accounted for only about 6 percent of all certified pilots (both private and commercial) in the U.S. as of 2006. The Ninety-Nines can serve as ambassadors, encouraging women of all ages to try their hand at flying.

"It's an adventurous thing, there's definitely a risk factor to it. But, it is certainly available and people should know they could try it. Trish and I are perfect examples of it's never too late to try," Cheel said. Both women took up flying later in life. Cheel piloted her first plane at age 50; Sauve started flying at age 40.

"After an hour flight you come back elated," Sauve said, adding the act of piloting a small single engine plane requires a focus and awareness that can

Looking for a little respect

Paraprofessionals seek audience with School Committee

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

"We don't want to lose our jobs over this, but we do want to be treated fairly and with respect."
— Collette McElhinney, paraprofessional at Deer Hill

Imagine being a long-time employee and getting a memo telling you your pay has been slashed.

Then imagine being a school employee and receiving that notification just two days before the school year.

While tough economic times have resulted pay cuts and layoffs with both public and private employers — Cohasset paraprofessionals still want answers.

In an effort to get that answer, a paraprofessional has requested to be placed on an upcoming School Committee agenda to discuss the issue. As of Wednesday evening, School Committee Chairman Adrienne MacCarthy said the School Committee did not have the issue as an agenda item on its scheduled meeting next Wednesday, Nov. 4.

In September the paraprofessionals, a small group of employees that provides support to teachers and students during the school day, were shifted from salaried to hourly employees in September. The payroll adjustment resulted in a significant loss of pay and a change to benefits.

Earlier this month, in a shift from what was originally presented, Superintendent of Schools Denise Walsh informed the group of paraprofessionals at a meeting that they would they would now be paid for holidays, a benefit they previously did not receive. In an executive session held on Oct. 7 the School Committee approved the change.

The reason, Walsh said by e-mail last week, was for equity.

"They would have been the only hourly employee in the district without the benefit of holiday pay," Walsh stated.

Yet, Pearl Smith, a paraprofessional at the middle school, said although she was glad to have the additional compensation, it felt like a "concession." The change to paid holidays came after a long meeting where the paraprofessionals explained their role in the schools and in the classroom to school administration.

The Mariner met with five paraprofessionals recently, one from each of the three schools (two from Deer Hill).

The paraprofessionals are still frustrated in the way they were told of the pay change, the reasons for the significant reduction in pay and would like to see the veteran paraprofessionals "grandfathered" under the payroll system they have been accustomed.

The paraprofessionals were notified via memo the day before school started of the pay change. Long-time employees, who were expecting a paycheck the first week back to school, as had been the practice for years, were informed they would not get a paycheck until Sept. 17.

For the next couple of weeks paraprofessionals tried to get answers to the questions regarding the changes, but said they did not receive timely responses or clear answers from the administration. Superintendent Walsh discussed the issue with the School Committee in executive session on Sept. 16 and a full-time teacher spoke to the issue in open session. On Sept. 24 Walsh met with the

Selectmen ponder draft proposal

Wind turbines off Cohasset's coast?

If a state ocean management plan is approved, it could be possible.

Selectmen discussed the draft document and their concerns at their Monday night meeting. The plan, which was created in response to the federal Oceans Act of 2008, addresses how to effectively manage protection and use of Massachusetts waters on behalf of the public. The plan identifies prohibitive areas, renewable energy areas and multi-use areas.

The Executive Office of Energy and Environmental Affairs is currently collecting comments on the draft plan. Comments are due by Nov. 23.

The area covered in the Ocean Management Plan is 1500-feet to 3 miles offshore. Of primary interest for Cohasset is the possibility of offshore siting of wind turbines, said Clark Brewer, member of the planning board. Commercial-scale wind farms (10 or

Cohasset Mariner 'drop box'

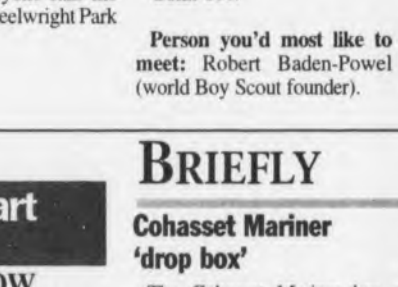
The Cohasset Mariner has a "drop box" and pickup location at Tedeschi's in the village. The drop box is on the counter in the front window around the corner to the left after you enter the front door.

The Mariner picks up at 8 a.m. on Mondays and Tuesdays. The drop box can be used to drop off glossy photographs, letters, flyers or other editorial copy.

Demolition of condemned house

The Board of Selectmen will seek an appropriation to demolish a condemned home on Hull Street at Special Town Meeting. The Board of Health condemned the home.

The home at 137 Hull Street is rapidly deteriorating and is an attractive nuisance especially for children and young people, said Health Inspector Tara Tradd. The house is currently boarded up and locked and unsafe for human habitation.



The cost to demolish the house is still being worked out and will be reported on at the Board of Selectmen meeting on Nov. 9.

Special Town Meeting Nov. 16

The Board of Selectmen approved the Special Town Meeting warrant on Monday night and sent it off to press with nine articles. Town Meeting voters will take up amendments to the fiscal 2010 operating budget (article 1), a balance transfer for the snow and ice deficits (article 2), community preservation projects (article 3), planning board associate member (article 4), adjustment to the tax deferral limits (article 5), inclusion of military service for tax deferrals (article 6), demolition of property at 137 Hull St. (article 7), a proposed easement to Abbott Homes (article 8), and health insurance statute (article 9).

Special Town Meeting is scheduled for Monday, Nov. 16 at 7p.m. at the high school gymnasium.

Crosswalk is no go at the Senior Center

Engineering needed for installation

"If we do it, it has to be done the right way."
— Lt. William Quigley

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

What seemed like a simple request — a painted sidewalk to ease safety concerns for the people exiting the South Shore Community Center — ended up opening a can of worms.

Through a discussion with the Board of Selectmen it was determined a crosswalk connecting the front stairway entrance of the South Shore Community Center and the Common is not feasible at this time.

Anna Abbruzzese, vice chair of the Council on Elder Affairs, wrote to the Selectmen recently to request the crosswalk for the safety of seniors, many of whom park on the common side of North Main Street. The CEA requested a painted crosswalk be placed from the front stairway of the South Shore Community Center to the corner of the common at Robert Long Road.

"The nature of the two groups of people that frequent the Community Center – the two extremes of the population – makes it a safety concern," said Coral Grande, director of Elder Affairs. "With very little effort and with very little cost this crosswalk could be added."

Lieutenant Bill Quigley, the town's safety officer, initially recommended the crosswalk in a memo to the Town Manager Bill Griffin, but withdrew his recommendation after receiving information about the paving and curbing around the town common.

"There are no ramps engineered around the Common, so it's not as easy as putting some paint down," Quigley said. The crosswalk would have to comply with ADA requirements and among those requirements is a ramp at both ends of the crosswalk. "If we do it, it has to be done the right way."

Selectman Ralph Dormitzer said the installation of the crosswalk necessitated more work including grading, and changes in parking.

In order to address the greater concerns of safety in the very busy section of town, Selectmen Chairman Paul Carlson suggested the posted speed limit be lowered to 15 miles per hour in that area. However, that involved a process as well. Quigley said a speed study would need to be conducted by the county and it could end up lowering or increasing the speed limit in the area.

As a compromise, Grande suggested in the morning, especially is the community center/senior center has events, arrangements could be made to have increased cones placed in the area to slow cars down.

"This proposal needs more work apparently," said Carlson.

Selectman Karen Quigley said this was a good opportunity to remind residents to go slow in the village/common area.

"If we all exercised a little more caution in that area is could help in the short run," Selectman Quigley said.

Strict procedures for 9-1-1 calls

"The Enhanced 9-1-1 system is very solid and our strict procedures for handling E-911 calls have been proven to be extremely effective."
— Lt. William Quigley

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

There is a reason why dispatch centers respond to 9-1-1 calls with: "9-1-1 this call is recorded; what is your emergency?" The dispatcher does not say the town because of what are dubbed "rollover" calls.

Scituate and Hull 9-1-1 calls "roll over" to Cohasset dispatch. Cohasset calls roll to Scituate and Hull.

The dispatcher does not name the town so the caller will not be alarmed that he or she has not reached their own town.

It is not uncommon for the Cohasset Dispatch Center to receive upwards of ten 9-1-1 calls for a single accident on Route 3A. Without the rollover system, a single dispatcher could get overwhelmed with multiple calls reporting the same incident, police said. With the house explosion in Scituate last year, Cohasset received approximately 40 rollover 9-1-1 calls from Scituate.

When Cohasset receives a rollover call from Scituate or Hull the dispatcher takes the call and then radios police or fire in Scituate or Hull.

Police also respond to all 9-1-1 calls, including those that are abandoned or accidental. Police responded to an accidental 9-1-1 call at the payphone outside CVS last week.

With enhanced 9-1-1 the address pops up on the screen.

"The Enhanced 9-1-1 system is very solid and our strict procedures for handling E-911 calls have been proven to be extremely effective," Quigley said.

Detour alert

Route 228 at West Corner will be detoured for at least 45 days due to bridge reconstruction. Mass Highway has placed detour signs at key locations. Residents of Forest Avenue, Jerusalem Road (between # 500 and # 815), and North Main Street will see increased traffic due to these detours. Please note that police will be increasing traffic enforcement activity on these roads during the detours.

Dump truck stolen

A business off Route 3A reported a dump truck stolen on Monday (Oct. 19). The 2000 Chevrolet dump-style, six-wheel truck had been parked overnight as usual in Tedeschi Plaza and the next day it was gone, police said. Police entered the VIN and plate numbers into the NCIC (National Criminal Intelligence Center) database that links all law enforcement agencies.

The truck was recovered this week in Quincy near the Fore River Bridge and was towed back to Cohasset Police Department where it is being processed by detectives for fingerprints. The value of the truck is estimated at $15,000.

Minor MVA

Two cars in the Bank of America parking lot off Route 3A backed into each other when backing out of their respective parking spaces, police said. The accident was reported at 12:18 p.m. on Tuesday (Oct. 20).

A 52-year-old Scituate man in a 2005 Kia Sorento and a 45-year-old Scituate woman in a Toyota RAV4 were both backing up when the collision occurred. There were no injuries and no tows.

Loose dog

A yellow Labrador retriever was returned to its owner after several callers reported seeing it wandering around Jerusalem Road by Red Gate Lane on Tuesday (Oct. 20). A detail officer reported that the dog appeared to be injured. The Hingham animal control officer responded because Cohasset's ACO was out of town. The 39-year-old Jerusalem Road owner of the dog was located and the dog, which was not injured, was returned.

Burglar alarm

A Black Rock Road resident called 9-1-1 last Tuesday (Oct. 20) at about 2:45 p.m. when the house alarm went off and she believed someone was breaking into her house. She also reported seeing handprints on the door. Officers responded and found everything in order. It appeared to just be an alarm problem. Police believe the handprints had been there from before.

Hubcaps

An 80-year-old man reported that two of the hubcaps on his 2001 BMW were stolen off his car that had been parked outside his King Street office on Tuesday (Oct. 20).

Two hubcaps are valued at $150, police said. Initially, he thought they had fallen off but his mechanic determined they had been removed. The hubcaps are a popular style, police said. The incident is under investigation.

Fender-bender

The MBTA police are investigating a fender-bender in the Cohasset Greenbush parking lot. The motorist involved let Cohasset police know that she left her information on the other vehicle.

While the MBTA handle incidents on their property, Cohasset police would respond to any crime in progress and to all emergencies.

Wrecker

Police requested a wrecker to remove a 1998 Volvo wagon that had been left in the Town Parking lot for some time.

Police ran a registry check that revealed the vehicle's registration had been revoked due to no insurance. All vehicles parked on public property must be registered and insured, police said. The vehicle in question belongs to a 49-year-old Cohasset man.

Vandalism

The lock on the gate behind the Osgood School off Old Pasture Road was cut off. An officer reported the vandalism at about 2:30 p.m., on Friday (Oct. 23). The incident is being investigated.

Hunters

Duck hunters ventured into the marsh area in Cohasset off South Main Street where no hunting is allowed, police said. A caller reported seeing the hunters at about 7:16 a.m. on Saturday (Oct. 24). The hunters who entered the marsh off Gannett Road in Scituate were apparently not familiar with the town lines. They were fully permitted and were wearing safety vests. The Environmental Police will follow up.

Seniors can get help with pet-care costs

The Social Service League of Cohasset, in partnership with the Scituate Animal Shelter, has launched a new program to ease the burden of pet care expenses for qualified seniors in Cohasset and Scituate.

The program is called the Mary Hooper ELder Pet Care (HELP) Program, and will be presented live to the first group of seniors next Tuesday, Nov. 3 at 11:30 during a luncheon at the Scituate Council on Aging, 27 Brook Street, Scituate.

Food Pantry collection box

Cohasset residents can drop off non-perishable items for the Cohasset Food Pantry 24-hours-a-day at the Cohasset Police Station on Elm Street through the month of November.

There will be a big collection box in the lobby of the police station.

Selectmen head out for Minot Light tour

Two Cohasset selectmen headed out of Scituate Harbor on Thursday morning to participate in the outside inspection of Minot Light. It is one of the steps along the way in determining if the town could be an appropriate owner of the famed lighthouse.

Back in September, the town of Cohasset, the town of Scituate and the Scituate Historical Society submitted letters of intent to the General Services Administration in response the announcement the GSA wants to take Minot Ledge Lighthouse off the federal government books. It was a move that's part of the National Historic Lighthouse Act of 2000, which began the process of taking historic lighthouses off of the national ledger. The federal government put out the call for a not-for-profit, government or local agency and is willing to give up the lighthouse free of charge.

The three groups Cohasset, Scituate and Scituate Historical Society, have met and are willing to work together on the effort, if it makes sense for all parties involved.

If a non-profit agency is not found to take control of the light, the lighthouse will be sold at public auction.

Selectmen Karen Quigley and Ted Carr planned to attend the inspection and report back to the rest of the board.

Paraprofessionals seek audience with School Committee

paraprofessionals to answer questions and clear up concerns.

The group of about 35 paraprofessionals or, as they are sometimes called, instructional aides, performs a variety of jobs within the district. The majority, about 20, of them work side-by-side with teachers in the classroom ensuring a child or children on special education plans, or individual education plans (IEPs), receive the support they need to succeed.

"We all were basically hired to support the kids on IEPs," said Collette McElhinney, a paraprofessional at Deer Hill.

'Adjustment'

Previously, Superintendent Walsh said the paraprofessionals' pay cut was a "payroll adjustment" – at some point before her tenure as superintendent, the paraprofessionals had moved from an hourly-based pay to salary-based in payroll and somehow the salary rate was not matching with the calculations for the hourly rate based on the hours worked. Walsh said the decision to change the payroll was not borne out of budget concerns.

However, for as long as any of the paraprofessionals the Mariner spoke to have been in the district – and one of the paraprofessionals has been working in the district for 31 years – they have understood to be salaried employees. None of them were aware they had an hourly rate.

McElhinney, who is in her fourth year of employment at Deer Hill, said she was given a salary range of somewhere around $15,000 when she was hired and had been paid in equal installments over 21 pay periods throughout the school year. The equal installments made it easier for the paraprofessionals to pay their health insurance premiums and offered a regular paycheck during school vacations, McElhinney said.

According to Pearl Smith, a paraprofessional at the middle school who has worked in the district for 15 years, being a salaried employee allowed the paraprofessionals some flexibility to respond to student and school needs.

When a particular day or student's needs called for an early morning or a later afternoon the paraprofessionals said they responded accordingly. Smith said it was not unusual for the paraprofessionals to be a part of parent conferences, open houses and other activities, such as the annual sixth-grade excursion to Camp Bournedale. They attended the extra events without additional compensation over and above their salary.

"It was just part of the job," Smith said.

Now, the paraprofessionals have been told to work a six-hour workday, which they say is difficult to adhere to because when they arrive and leave students are still in the building, often needing assistance or attention.

"It impacts the kids and people don't realize that," Smith said.

In the eyes of the veteran paraprofessionals, a satisfactory resolution is to "grandfather" in the employees that were hired under the assumption of salaried employment.

Smith said for her as an employee for 15 years the change in payroll resulted in a 13 percent decrease in pay, roughly $2,800. The hourly rate was increased by 2 percent, but the overall effect of the payroll change was a significant decrease in take-home pay (these calculations do not include the 10 paid holidays recently amended to the paraprofessionals compensation).

Beyond the tangible financial effects of the pay cuts has come a change in morale, the paraprofessionals said.

"I feel like this has consumed us, it wears you down and you feel defeated," McElhinney said. "We don't want to lose our jobs over this, but we do want to be treated fairly and with respect."

Paraprofessionals are one of three non-union groups, or employees-at-will, working in the school district and are the largest group. Bus drivers and two central office secretaries are also not protected by a union contract.

Several years ago a small group of paraprofessionals tried to unionize the group, but the several hundred dollar annual dues made it prohibitive for some and the effort fizzled out. Currently, the paraprofessionals said there is no strong movement to unionize.

McElhinney has written a letter to the School Committee to request the paraprofessionals be placed on an upcoming agenda. Her letter details the discrepancies in communication and outstanding questions the group of employees still have.

The last time the paraprofessional pay issue was discussed was during an executive session at the Oct. 7 meeting of the School Committee

"The discussion was around how to make the paraprofessionals compensation appropriate with the job they do do, within reason and financial considerations," said Adrienne MacCarthy, school committee chair in a phone interview.

The result was a consensus agreement to pay the paraprofessionals for 10 holidays throughout the school year (nine paid holidays if school starts after Labor Day). The move to give 10 paid holidays is consistent with surrounding district's policy, MacCarthy said.

"It kind of showed some level of understanding for the financial hit they all took and in fairness to them (brought their compensation in line with surrounding communities)," said MacCarthy.

Previously the paraprofessionals were not entitled to any paid holidays.

"This helps with financial compensation…it becomes money in the pocket," MacCarthy said.

MacCarthy said by phone there were no other plans to alter the paraprofessionals pay.

more turbines) would not be permitted in Cohasset's region, but a total of 10 turbines in the Metropolitan Boston area, which covers the coastal area from Rockport to Duxbury, could be possible.

The town of Hull is already considering four wind turbines off their coast on Harding's Ledge.

Selectman Fred Koed said he felt the state needed to know the importance of local input and ensure it is maintained under this new plan.

"From planning board hearings I know firsthand that siting of wind turbines is controversial here in Cohasset," Brewer said, adding there should be some sort of forum available for residents so it could be determined if the town want offshore turbines at all or how many they thought was reasonable.

For Selectman Ralph Dormitzer, he viewed the oceans in a similar fashion to the wilderness conservation of many decades ago.

"Should we allow a few wind turbines to deface what is currently un-trampled by man?" Dormitzer said. In comparison with Minot Light, which is about a mile offshore at 115-feet high, the wind turbines would "absolutely dominant," he said. "Minot Light would look like nothing in comparison."

Dormitzer said the value in renewable energy was not worth ruining the beauty of the ocean. "I am asking myself, what are we thinking?"

The Selectmen decided to collect several important points they want to relay to the state in regards to the Ocean Management Plan. They requested, through Brewer, to get input from the Planning Board.

"Let's see where we are unanimous and go from there," Koed said. The issue will be discussed at the Nov. 9 meeting of the Board of Selectmen.

A copy of the draft Ocean Management Plan is available at www.mass.gov/eoeea. The public comment period on the Draft Management Plan runs through 5p.m., Nov. 23, 2009.

Medicare program

The Board of Selectmen authorized another warrant article at a special meeting held on Monday morning. It has been the common, long-standing practice in Cohasset and in cities and towns throughout Massachusetts to move retirees out of the town's health insurance and into Medicare program when they turn age 65.

A general law needs to be adopted by the town indicating the statute. Town Manager Bill Griffin said it was unclear if the town through a town meeting vote or ballot question had ever adopted a statute. Both Town Counsel and MIAA (Massachusetts Interlocal Insurance Association) recommended the statute be adopted so it is on the books.

"There will be employees retiring in the next five months so I'd rather not wait until the Annual Town Meeting (in March)," Griffin said.

The quorum of the Selectmen (Vice Chair Karen Quigley, Ted Carr and Ralph Dormitzer) approved the article being placed on the warrant.

Although the Selectmen met on Monday evening Griffin needed an answer so the warrant could be sent to the printer during the day on Monday.

The inclusion of this article on the warrant brings the article count to eight.

Bike event to go through Cohasset

The Board of Selectmen gave the McCourt Foundation, a non-profit dedicated to raising funds for Alzheimer's and MS research, preliminary approval for a bike race to go through the shore drive of Cohasset next October.

The first annual event is scheduled for Oct. 2, 2010 and will begin and end at Wompatuck State Park.

McCourt Foundation director Denise Arrondo said the organization was looking to bring a fundraising event closer to Boston and the South Shore where many of their constituents reside. The race will be roughly 25 miles and is tentatively planned to travel through Hingham, Cohasset, Scituate and back again. They are expecting a field of about 400 bikers.

Police Lt. Bill Quigley has tentatively approved the Cohasset portion of the route: Route 228 northbound into Cohasset (Hull Street), right turn on Jerusalem Road, Jerusalem Road to Atlantic Avenue, pass Sandy Beach, Atlantic Avenue to Margin Street, Margin Street through the Cove, Border Street to Scituate.

Selectman Ralph Dormitzer was concerned with how people along the route could leave their homes during the race. Lt. Quigley said safety details still need to be worked out, but he expects all the roads to be open with at least one lane during the event.

"We will come back with a plan for approval," Quigley said.

Beechwood zoning is topic Nov. 4

The "Downtown Business" District designation also means that residences could be built in this district following the Zoning Bylaw regulations for the Downtown Business District.

In the Beechwood neighborhood there is a zoning anomaly left over from a time gone past. A triangular portion of land bordered by Doane, Beechwood and Church streets is comprised of 13 lots highlighted and labeled as "downtown business," or "DB."

The Planning Board is considering changing the zoning to reflect the residential area that currently exists in Beechwood on Wednesday, Nov. 4 and is inviting Beechwood residents and all interested parties.

The "DB" zoning designation dates back to the pre-1950s when the Beechwood section of Cohasset had its own library, firehouse, gas station and variety store. The "Downtown Business" zoning designation means allowed uses in this district include, among other things: stores for the sale of goods at retail, including dry goods, food, apparel and accessories, furniture, marina products, fishing and boating gear, apparel and boats; miscellaneous trade and repair services and shops; appliance and furniture repair services; medical and dental offices; building supply showrooms; beauty salons and barbershops; banks; and, printing establishments.

The "Downtown Business" District designation also means that residences could be built in this district following the Zoning Bylaw regulations for the Downtown Business District. In other words, a residence can be built on a 5,000 square-foot-lot with a maximum 80 percent coverage as opposed to the minimum 18,000 square-foot-lot with 30 percent maximum coverage required in the Residence A district. The result is a greater allowed density such as can exist in the Downtown Village.

It has been suggested that the Planning Board consider a Zoning Bylaw Amendment which would rezone this triangular "Downtown Business" district portion of land to be consistent with the "Residence A" District surrounding it. The thought is that rezoning would maintain the residential character of this neighborhood, as it exists today.

The Planning Board is holding an informal discussion with abutters and other interested residents to obtain preliminary opinions. The Planning Board office sent out more than 100 notifications to the neighborhood residents alerting them to the meeting.

This discussion will take place at the Nov. 4 Planning Board meeting at 7:15p.m. in the Town Hall Auditorium

Contact the Planning Board Office at 781-383-3517 should you have any questions.

Stormwater Committee needs members

In February, Selectmen voted to create a five-member Stormwater Advisory Committee. They are still seeking members with specific expertise or knowledge to volunteer. A couple of residents have expressed interest, but not enough to form the board. The Town Manager is currently accepting applications from interested residents.

The Stormwater Advisory Committee will take on myriad tasks including conducting public education activities in support of stormwater remediation, providing opportunities for public participation in stormwater and watershed remediation discussions, conducting an annual inventory of flood prone areas in Cohasset, seeking funding sources for stormwater remediation and advising the Board of Selectmen on stormwater-related capital expenditures.

Liaisons from the Board of Selectmen, Board of Health, Conservation Commission, Water Commission, Sewer Commission, Planning Board, School Committee, and Department of Emergency Management will be participating as well.

Appointments to the Stormwater Advisory Committee will first be made from interested members of the liaison boards and committees listed above, then from volunteers from the community, with preference given to people with relevant professional qualifications, including licensed professional engineers in hydrological or environmental specialties, architects and attorneys specializing in environmental law, and public relations professionals.

Interested candidates are requested to submit a letter of interest and resume to Town Manager Bill Griffin, Town Hall, 41 Highland Ave., Cohasset, MA 02025 or by e-mail to: wgriffin@townofcohasset.org

Beechwood speed limit signs

Since the renovation of the Beechwood Ballpark the area is enjoying nearly non-stop action from the neighbors. As a result resident Bob Rankin of Aaron River Road is concerned with the speed of cars going through the area. Rankin came before the Board of Selectmen to discuss the possibility of adding speed limit signs on the approach to the ballpark.

"There is no signage on Church Street or Doane Street and the closest sign on Beechwood Street is at Bound Brook," Rankin said.

Police Lt. Bill Quigley, the town's safety officer, spent some time looking in the area and recommended three additional posted 30 miles-per-hour speed limit signs: one on Doane Street, one on Church Street, and one on Beechwood Street.

Selectman Ralph Dormitzer said the town needed to be careful about the "proliferation of signs."

"How do we (increase safety) and not deface the town?" he said, adding the town needed to be spare about adding signage.

While Lt. Quigley agreed signs should be used sparingly, but the problem was people didn't always pay attention to posted signs. From an enforcement standpoint it was better to have the signs in place.

As a compromise, the Selectmen approved the installation of 30-mph speed limit signs at 66 Church St. and 493 Beechwood St.

push all other troubles away. "We live in such a beautiful part of the country – I pity the people who live in Kansas!"

Both women fly out of local airports, typically Marshfield or Plymouth, and relish in flying high above the coastline.

Sauve, who by day is a manufacturer's representative, tries to get up in the air, weather permitting, at least once every two weeks. Cheel combines her love of flying with her love of photography and works full-time as an aerial photographer and artist.

Sauve was spurred on to pursue her pilot's license by her father who was a B-24 pilot in World War II. She started her flying lessons the same year her father passed away. Cheel was looking for a new direction in her profession and was led to flying and photography.

Sauve joined the Ninety-Nines in 1999. Sauve met Cheel at the Plymouth airport at grounds school training and introduced her to the Ninety-Nines. Both are now part of the Eastern New England Chapter.

The organization has come a long way since its early beginnings with Amelia Earhart and 98 other women pilots, hence the name the Ninety-Nines. Today, according to its website, the organization promotes world fellowship through flight, provides networking and scholarship opportunities for women and aviation education in the community and preserves the unique history of women in aviation. It is a non-profit organization and regularly holds fundraisers to support scholarships and its programs.

Through their involvement in the Ninety-Nines both Sauve and Cheel have gotten the opportunity to meet some amazing and inspiring people.

"I love the history of it and the ability to meet such fabulous women who inspire me," said Sauve. When she first joined she had the opportunity to meet some of the founding members of the 99s, and a women air force service pilot (WASP) from World War II. She's mingled with courageous women pilots, astronauts, and like-minded women who share her passion for flying.

Cheel feels similarly, "I love being a part of history and carrying it forward."

The mission of the organization, which has local chapters in 35 countries, is to promote and encourage women in the field of aviation. The 99s draws from all walks of life from professional airline pilots to recreational fliers, women in their 20s to women in their 80s.

"Personally meeting other women and seeing their dedication to the organization is inspiring," said Sauve, who is the current chair of the Eastern New England Chapter of The Ninety-Nines.

The Ninety-Nines are mentioned in passing in the movie, "Amelia," which opened last weekend and stars Academy Award winner Hilary Swank as Earhart.

Members of the Ninety-Nines all over the country set up booths at local movie theaters to spread the word about the organization Earhart helped get off the ground, so to speak. Cheel and Sauve both attended the opening night of "Amelia" at the Loring Theatre in Hingham this past Friday.

"I think our presence made the movie come more alive for people," Cheel said. Many patrons approached them to ask questions, one shared his own theory on Amelia's disappearance, and one woman expressed interest in learning to fly.

Both Cheel and Sauve said from a flying perspective the movie stays true to the facts.

"If anything it makes you realize how amazing it is they were able to do what they did (in aviation) with what little technology they had," Sauve said.

BEFORE

When you're over 50, and in a stressful job, even if you exercise, you don't always have the results you want. After I retired in 2008, I made a promise to myself to get my life under control. That meant losing at least 50 of the pounds that had crept onto my 5'10" frame. It was kismet when "Get In Shape for Women" opened nearby. I liked their straight forward, no nonsense approach. I signed up and the rest is history. It took me a year, but I have lost 30 of those 50 pounds. I have signed up for another year and know that with the continued support of my trainers, I will get it done. "Get In Shape for Women" is not about quick weight loss. It is a program that teaches about nutrition, about camaraderie, and about how to make the program work for you.

We Auto Know
by Gene Smith and Jay Gorman

FOR SHOW

The hood ornaments that are quickly disappearing from many automobiles once served a useful function. Those chromed winged ladies, leaping animals and circle-enclosed stars can be traced back to the beginning of the 20th century, when they were used to dress up external radiator caps. In later years, as radiator caps moved under the hood, the ornaments were largely retained as sculpted reminders of vehicle identity. However, more recently, as theft has become a rising problem, and new laws sought to protect pedestrians from possibly becoming impaled by the gaudy hood outcroppings, hood ornaments have increasingly become a rarity. We point all this out to show that technology and safety render many things unnecessary. Will the gas cap be next?

Of course, no matter what you do or don't have on the hood, everyone knows that it's what's under the hood that matters with a car. If you give your car the preventive maintenance that it deserves, you can catch small and inexpensive problems before they become big and very expensive problems. NDA's Courtney Culhane in honor societies

COURTESY PHOTO

HONOR SOCIETY

Courtney Culhane, a senior at Notre Dame Academy, was inducted into the National Honor Society as well as the NJCL Latin Honor Society in a ceremony held on Thursday, Oct. 15th. Proud parents Janeen and Ed Culhane were thrilled for Courtney. In addition to taking Global Ethics and Citizenship, a college-level class for college credit at Tufts University this summer, Courtney also traveled with NDA junior Kate French and her family to England and France where they visited many historical sights.

Courtney and Kate traveled with Jim and Donna French to England and France. First, they stayed in a flat in Notting Hill and traveled around visiting the London Zoo, London Bridge, Buckingham Palace, Parliament and many other sites. Second, was the highlight of the trip staying in a little town called Bayeaux in France. They visited Omaha Beach where they toured the American Military Graveyard, the Big Red War Museum and many other historic places. It was especially poignant for Jim French who's father landed and came up on Omaha beach during the invasion and survived to tell about it.

CELEBRITY SIGHTING

Through his years as an entertainment lawyer Cohasset's Howie Altholtz is no stranger to celebrity encounters, but it was a treat to run into Ben Affleck during the recent shooting his new movie "The Town" in Boston's North End.

"Walking to and from work, I ran into him numerous times over the past weeks," Howie reports. "Most recently he was just hanging out by himself so I stopped to chat. We talked briefly about this new film, and the rigors of movie production in general. Since I always have a script or two in reserve that could use attention, we did discuss a new project that I thought would be right for him". That as they say, is already in the mail.

SPECIAL DAY

Happy Birthday to Jean DiGiacamondrea as she celebrates the big 5-0 today (Oct. 30)! Jean is from Scituate but is well known by so many here in Cohasset. Enjoy! "Miss Jean" is known by many children at Our World and she is also familiar to people of all ages as long-time member and past president of the Cohasset Dramatic Club.

TALENTED YOUTH

Derek Benson received an award for high honors from the Johns Hopkins University Center for Talented Youth at a recognition ceremony at Worcester State College.

During his seventh-grade school year, Derek was among the highest scorning participants in Massachusetts taking the SAT exam.

Derek is the son of Bob and Diane Benson and is currently an eighth-grade student at Cohasset Middle School.

RECOGNIZED

Cohasset Historical Society held its 80th annual meeting on Sunday, Oct. 25, at Atlantica. Guest speaker was Patrick Browne, executive director of the Duxbury and Rural Historical Society who spoke about the South Shore in the Civil War profiling Congressional Medal of Honor recipients including General Zealous Bates Tower of Cohasset.

The 2009 Volunteer of the Year Award was given to Arthur Roebuck who has been so supportive and generous, providing time, talent and catering services for many of the society events. Special recognition was given to long time member Admiral Thomas Burke for his support and that of the Boston Marine Society.

SAILING

The 2009 Halloween Howl in Newport, R.I., organized by Sail Newport, was truly a weekend for only hardy New England youth sailors, including Doyle and Riley Calhoun of Cohasset. Saturday's "howling" wind from the south switched to a moderate northerly for Sunday, and slowly diminished as the air temperature rose in the early afternoon.

In the Club 420 Class, Sean Golden of Duxbury, with crew Doyle Calhoun (of Cohasset and a student at Tabor Academy), dominated the day with a remarkable "picket fence" of all first place wins and a low total score of 4. Will Godfrey and Riley Calhoun (of Cohasset and Tabor student) captured third place.

Congratulations!

HELPING ELDERS

You can get out and enjoy the beautiful fall weather with family and friends and Make a Difference at the same time. This year there are 20 elders in the community looking for assistance with cold weather preparation and fall cleanup over the weekend of Nov. 14 & 15.

A two-hour commitment is needed to assist neighbors with general fall cleanup (i.e. leaves, storage of lawn furniture, etc.). Leaf bags are provided. This is a wonderful opportunity to bring generations of the town together and make some new friends.

If you have any questions or are interested in volunteering please contact: Patty Cunningham at 781-383-1378 or Pamela Turpel at 781-923-1199.

UNICEF

Cohasset High seniors, Lauren Blaze and Sophie Bertolami, have formed the Cohasset Teens for UNICEF Club. They are asking residents to donate their loose change on Halloween. For more, read story on page 18.

That is all the news for this week. Send me in some new items for next weeks column to Around Town at:

Tickets going fast for Tracy Kidder

Tracy Kidder is winner of a Pulitzer Prize, the National Book Award and the Robert F. Kennedy Award. He is the author of nine books...

Cohasset residents are in for a literary treat when Pulitzer Prize winning author, Tracy Kidder, speaks about his new book, "Strength in What Remains" on Monday, Nov. 2nd. An Evening with Tracy Kidder includes a book signing at 6:30 pm. and speaking program at 7 p.m. at the Cohasset High School Auditorium. Tickets are $10 and can be purchased at Buttonwood Book Store and Paul Pratt Memorial Library. "Strength in What Remains" will be available for purchase that evening. There are also copies at Buttonwood Books and several copies available to borrow at the Paul Pratt Memorial Library.

As of right now more than 300 tickets have been sold for Monday night's event. As space permits, there will be tickets available at the door; however, all are encouraged to purchase tickets in advance to avoid missing this world-renowned author. Kidder promises to give a powerful talk about the subject of his new book, Deo, a young man whose will to survive and love of knowledge take him from the horrors of genocide in Burundi to Columbia University and then on to medical school. It's an inspiring account of one immigrant's remarkable journey.

Tracy Kidder is winner of a Pulitzer Prize, the National Book Award and the Robert F. Kennedy Award. He is the author of nine books, including "Mountains Beyond Mountains," "House," and "The Soul of a New Machine." He is currently on a book tour promoting his most recent book, "Strength in What Remains," which was published in August 2009 to great acclaim. Kidder graduated from Harvard, received an MFA from the University of Iowa, and lives in Massachusetts and Maine.

An Evening with Tracy Kidder is made possible through the generosity of the South Shore Music Circus. Please join the Directors of the Cohasset Library Trust, the Trustees of the Paul Pratt Memorial Library, the Friends of the Cohasset Library, the Event Committee and the Kidder Event Steering Committee of Patience Garrick Towle, Carolyn Coffey, Sheila Evans, Bernadette Faulkner, Jane Goedecke, and Linda Fechter, as we welcome this noted author to Cohasset. Everyone is welcome and encouraged to attend.

Civil War Women's Auxiliary launched

Sons of Union Veterans of the Civil War Satuit Camp 3188 and the Women's Auxiliary will meet at 7 p.m. Thursday, Nov. 12, at Grand Army Hall, 353 Country Way in Scituate.

The camp welcomes women interested in forming a Women's Auxiliary, whose mission will be to promote education about the Civil War, particularly the contribution of Massachusetts.

The Sons of Unions Veterans of the Civil War (SUVCW) is a patriotic and educational organization.

Membership to the SUVCW is open to males, ages 14 and older, who are direct descendants of a solider, sailor, or Marine who served during the Civil War. Junior and associate memberships are also available.

The camp will help prospective members with the paperwork to determine eligibility. Members do not have to be Scituate residents.

Women's Auxiliary is open to all interested women.

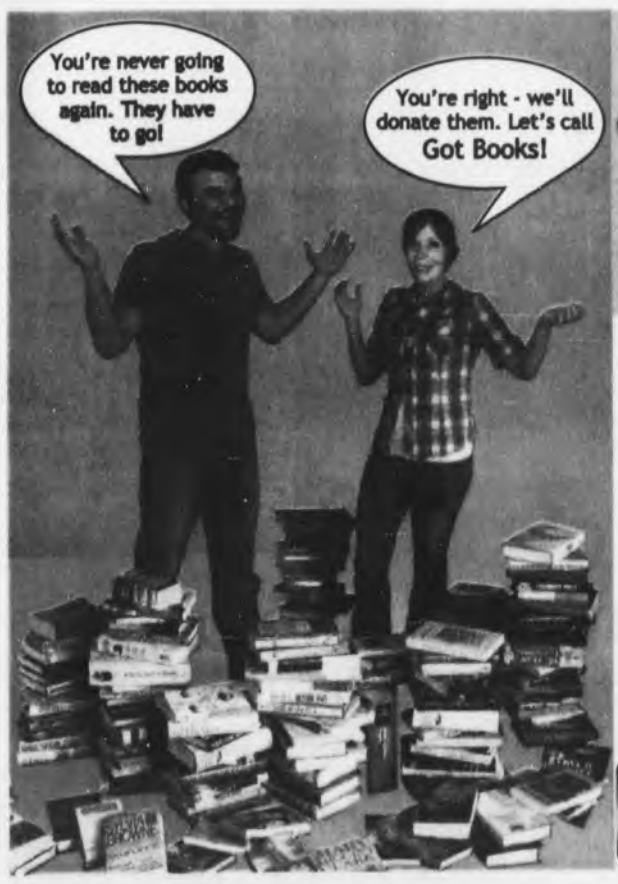
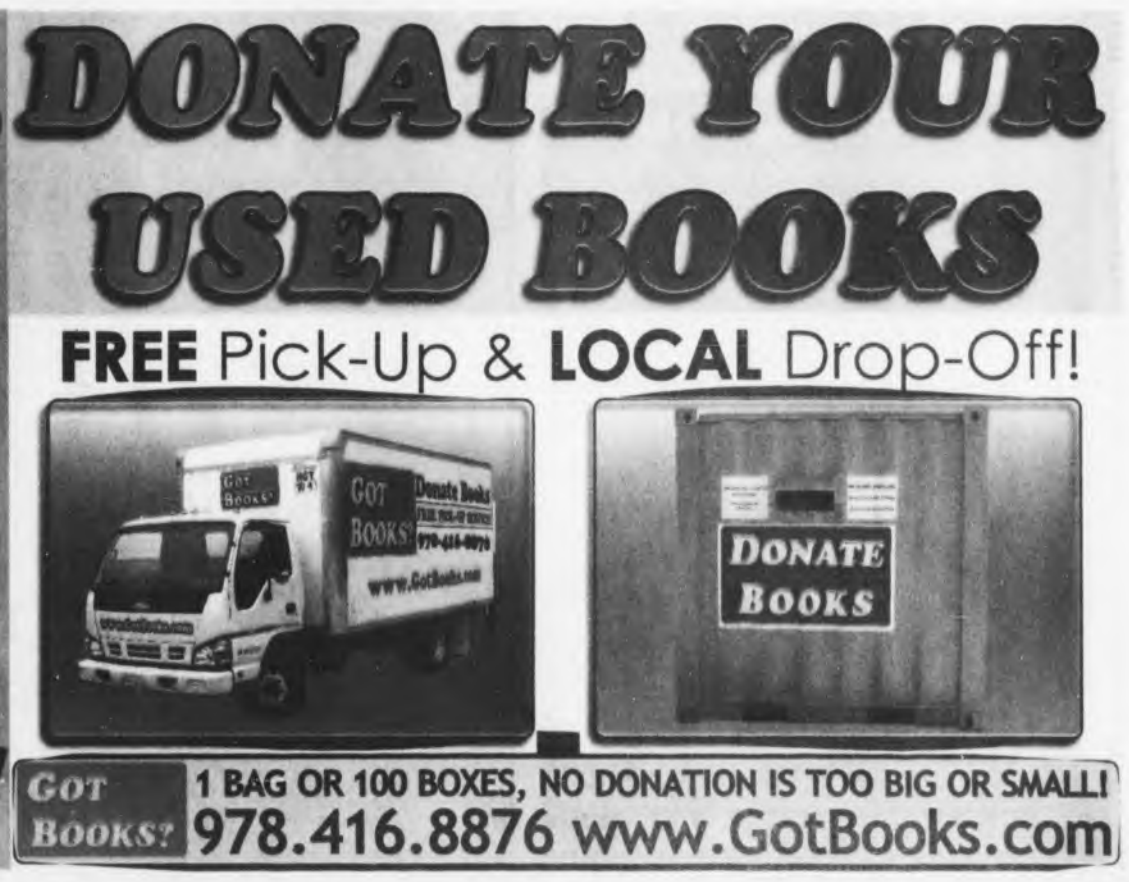
Food Pantry collection box



Cohasset residents can drop off non-perishable items for the Cohasset Food Pantry 24-hours-a-day at the Cohasset Police Station on Elm Street through the month of November.



There will be a big collection box in the lobby of the police station.

Glastonbury Abbey fundraiser

People can sample Chilean wines as well as a selection of d'oeuvres prepared by The Chef's Table in Pembroke from 5:30 to 7:30 p.m., on Saturday, Nov. 14, at Glastonbury Abbey Center, 16 Hull St., Hingham. In addition, there will be a cellist playing throughout the evening. Raffles will include many pieces of art done by local artist and gift packages donated by local merchants.

Tickets are $50 per person. Call Ann McCarthy-Egan at 781-749-9423 or Kay Trask at 781-749-0993 for more information.

HEALTH NOTES

Don't let safety go up in smoke

By Steve Bobo
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

Store wood outdoors, stacked neatly off the ground with the top covered. Burn only dry, well-seasoned wood that has been split properly.

The EPA has a lot to say on wood smoke, about which we should all be advised:

Health effects: Like many products, wood smoke may smell good, but it's not good for you. Smoke is made up of a complex mixture of gases and fine particles that can affect everyone. These microscopic particles can get into your eyes and respiratory system causing burning eyes, runny nose, illnesses such as bronchitis with increased hospital admissions and emergency room visits. Long-term exposure, by people living for many years in areas with high particle levels, have been associated with reduced lung function and the development of chronic bronchitis and premature death. Even short-term exposures to particles (hours or days) can aggravate lung disease, causing asthma attacks, acute bronchitis and may also increase susceptibility to respiratory infections.

Protect yourself: The EPA recommends that your wood-burning appliance be professionally installed by a certified technician to insure its safety and proper performance. The safety of your home and family depends on fully understanding and carrying out the critical manufacturer and building code requirements that include:

• Proper installation: Protection of floors, clearances between the appliance, its venting system and other combustible materials; proper sizing and oversized flues. Heights are often taller than minimum code requirements.

• Location: Stove should be in a central location.

Experienced professionals have a better chance of avoiding mistakes and can properly size and place equipment for best heat distribution. The venting system (or chimney) is the "engine" that drives the whole burning process. The Chimney Safety Institute of America is one source for finding a certified installer. Another source for hearth system planners and installers is the National Fireplace Institute.

Practical tips for building a fire

Once your wood-burning appliance is properly installed, building an effective fire requires good firewood and fire building practices. Use the following tips: Season wood outdoors through the summer for at least six months before burning it. Store wood outdoors, stacked neatly off the ground with the top covered. Burn only dry, well-seasoned wood that has been split properly. Start fires with newspaper and dry kindling. To maintain proper airflow, regularly remove ashes to a metal container with cover and store outdoors.

Never burn: Household garbage, plastics, foam. Colored ink on magazines, boxes and wrappers produce harmful chemicals when burned. Coated, painted or pressure-treated wood releases toxic chemicals when burned. Don't burn plywood, particle board or wood with glue that outgas toxic chemicals. Never burn wet, rotted, diseased, moldy wood or unseasoned logs.

Safe wood-burning practices

• Keep flammable drapes, furniture, newspapers and books, etc. away from the stove.

• Start fires with newspaper and dry kindling; not gasoline, kerosene, charcoal starter or a propane torch.

• Do not use logs made from wax and sawdust in your wood stove or fireplace insert – they are made for open hearth fireplaces. If you use manufactured logs, choose those made from 100 percent compressed sawdust.

• uild hot fires. For most appliances, a smoldering fire is not safe or efficient.

• Keep stove doors closed unless loading or stoking the live fire.

• Regularly remove ashes into a metal container with a cover. Store ash containers outdoors on a cement or brick slab; not on or near wood.

• Keep a fire extinguisher handy.

Money saving tips

Look into getting on a list with local tree cutters who will deliver wood to your home to reduce landfill dumping. Plus, you may end up with discounted firewood.

Also, federal tax credits may be available. For more information, visit the EPA's Energy Star Web site to learn about a possible $1,500 tax credit for the purchase of a wood or pellet stove.

Safety tips

Install a smoke alarm. Each year in the United States, about 3,000 people lose their lives in residential fires – and mostly from inhalation of smoke and toxic gases, not as a result of burns. Properly installed and maintained smoke alarms in the home are one of the best and least expensive means of providing an early warning of a potentially deadly fire. To be effective, smoke alarms must be in the proper location and tested regularly. Batteries should be replaced regularly, too.

Install and maintain a carbon monoxide detector. When wood is not burned completely, the resulting smoke contains a number of chemicals, one of which is carbon monoxide.

According to the U.S. Consumer Product Safety Commission, more than 150 people die on average per year from CO poisoning, related to the use of combustion appliances, including wood stoves, in the home.

Breast care center opens at South Shore Hospital

By Ed Baker
EBAKER@CNC.COM

South Shore Hospital's breast care treatment center is giving women state-of-the-art medical services that were once only available in Boston at the Dana-Farber Breast Cancer Treatment Center and Brigham and Women's Hospital.

"I have a strong belief that patients should not have to come into the city to get these types of medical services," said Dr. Katherina Calvillo, associate director of South Shore Hospital's Breast Care Center. "We are now coming to them."

"For patients to have to undergo treatment is overwhelming to them, but when we can offer them care in a more personalized setting, that can lessen the anxiety."

— Dr. Katherina Calvillo, associate director of South Shore Hospital's Breast Care Center

Dr. Katherina Zabicki Calvillo and Jean Leavitt look over wigs and clothing in the Breast Center boutique.

Breast cancer occurs in nearly 240,000 women each year in the United States. There are approximately 180,000 women who will be diagnosed with invasive breast cancer, which is especially deadly.

The American Cancer Society reports that there are currently 2.5 million breast cancer survivors in the United States.

Calvillo pointed out that early detection of breast cancer symptoms in patients offers them the best chance of surviving the disease, adding that the new breast cancer center is helping to achieve this goal.

"We see patients for non-cancerous issues such as a benign lump or something that a doctor is not sure about," she said. "We may see a patient and rule out cancer in the breast care center."

The breast care center is on the second floor of South Shore Hospital's new $89 million cancer treatment center that opened Oct. 5.

Calvillo explained that the breast care center helps resolve concerns that a doctor might have about a patient who has a lump or a symptom that might be cancerous.

"We are living in a litigious society," she said. "If a primary care doctor is not sure about something, he or she will refer a patient to us."

The breast care center's staff includes three surgeons affiliated with Dana-Farber, two nurse practitioners, a nurse, a medical assistant, an office manager, and four administrative assistants.

"We have our own radiologist and a treatment room with its own breast care ultra sound machine," Calvillo said inside the exam room. "If a woman has a suspicious lump and we are not sure about it, we can order an ultrasound and have a radiologist get a biopsy expedited within a week."

Mammograms are presently done at Stetson Place, but hospital officials expect to relocate this screening to the breast care center in late December or in January.

"Diagnostic imaging will be done here in December or January," Calvillo said.

Patients diagnosed with breast cancer can have surgery performed at South Shore Hospital or Brigham and Women's, and there will be follow-up treatment in the cancer center's chemotherapy infusion area, if needed.

There are 23 stations for patients to receive chemotherapy on the second floor.

Patients have access to a boutique shop that features wigs, prosthetic clothing, and specialized sunblock.

Patients receiving treatment in the breast care center can take advantage of the facility's integrative therapies where they can receive a massage or acupuncture to ease the discomfort of medical treatments.

There is a healing garden nearby for patients to enjoy a quiet setting to reflect while they await treatment.

Calvillo emphasized that the breast care center and cancer treatment facility offers patients a setting that is more personalized than in Boston.

"For patients to have to undergo treatment is overwhelming to them, but when we can offer them care in a more personalized setting, that can lessen the anxiety," she said.

Calvillo made it clear that creating a positive setting for a patient is important because her mental state is just as important as receiving medical care.

"We are trying to change the standard of medical care in the local community," she said.

More information about the breast care center is available at South Shore Hospital's Web site at www.southshorehospital.org.

OPINION

EDITORIAL

Daylight Saving Time ends

On Sunday at 2 a.m. Daylight Saving Time officially ends until the second Sunday in March.

Some will turn their clocks back before they go to bed on Saturday night (Halloween) – others will do so Sunday morning. And some will forget – arriving to church an hour early!

According to National Geographic, not all states observe Daylight Saving Time. Exceptions are Hawaii and most of Arizona.

Here are some other interesting facts from various Web sites:

• Benjamin Franklin, when serving as US minister to France, wrote an article recommending earlier opening and closing of shops to save the cost of lighting. In England, William Willett in 1907 began to urge the adoption of Daylight Saving Time. During World War I the plan was adopted in England, Germany, France and many other countries. In the US, Robert Garland of Pittsburgh was a leading influence in securing the introduction and passage of a law (signed by President Wilson on March 31, 1918) establishing Daylight Saving Time in US.

• In 1883 the U.S. railroad industry established official time zones with a set standard time within each zone. Congress eventually came on board, signing the railroad time zone system into law in 1918. The only federal regulatory agency in existence at that time happened to be the Interstate Commerce Commission, so Congress granted the agency authority over time zones and any future modifications that might be necessary.

• Part of the 1918 law also legislated for the observance of Daylight Saving Time nationwide. That section of the act was repealed the following year, and daylight saving time thereafter became a matter left up to local jurisdictions.

• During World War II, President Franklin Roosevelt instituted year-round Daylight Saving Time, called "War Time," from Feb. 9, 1942 to Sept. 30, 1945.

• Finally, in 1966, Congress passed the Uniform Time Act, which standardized the start and end dates for Daylight Saving Time but allowed individual states to remain on standard time if their legislatures allowed it.

• Beginning in 2007, Daylight Saving Time is extended one month and begins for most of the United States at: 2 a.m. on the second Sunday in March and lasts until 2 a.m. on the first Sunday of November.

Changing our clocks this weekend – while we yearn for those longer days – also serves as a reminder to check the batteries and expiration dates in our smoke detectors and carbon monoxide alarms.

Fire departments everywhere recommend for public safety reasons that we check those batteries twice a year and the best way to remember is to do so when we "fall back or spring forward!"

It is also a good time to make sure you have enough smoke and carbon monoxide detectors and that they are placed in appropriate locations in your home.

For help, contact the Cohasset Fire Department at 781-383-0616.

Register to vote for Special Town Meeting

Friday, Nov. 6, will be the last day to register to vote for the Special Town Meeting on Nov. 16. Registration will take place in the Town Clerk's office from 8:30 a.m. to 8 p.m.

Any citizen of the United States who is a Massachusetts resident and who will be 18 years old on or before a town meeting or Election Day may register to vote. There is no waiting period to be eligible to register to vote. If people move, they may register to vote as soon as they move into their new home. Registration is closed for a brief period before each town meeting and election to allow election officials time to prepare the voting lists. If people register during a "closed" period, they will be eligible to vote only in later town meetings or elections.

Meeting House Pond? It looks like a duck pond, it feels like a duck pond, it smells like a duck pond. It's a duck pond!

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Cohasset Field Hockey Jamboree — huge success!

TO THE EDITOR:

I want to thank everyone for all the help and support with the first Field Hockey Jamboree that was held last Sunday, Oct. 25th. It was a huge success and we are getting emails and calls from coaches already hoping we do this again next year! The girls had a great time and you couldn't have asked for a more perfect day! Many, many thanks to Molly McGowan for her direction, organization and recruitment of volunteers with this event! You were the rock! Thank you so much to the volunteers who manned the T-shirts, food, coffee, pizza, registration: Suzanne Waters, Linda Fechter, Tina Jones, Christine Cunning, Ann Burke, Judy Tedeschi, and Sue Timothy: to the Coaches — Meg Doherty, Sue Paull, Kate Fallon, and Kristin Curran for organizing the schedule, getting the T-shirts, coaching the girls, going to BJ's, providing their expertise on running a jamboree — a huge thank you!

A big hug and thanks to the Varsity and JV field hockey team and Coach Laura Giuliano for their tremendous support refereeing games, escorting girls to the fields, selling food, managing the score board and music and being there to cheer our girls on! A special thanks to Lucy Noble, a Senior Varsity Captain — whose organizational skills and leadership for this event were exceptional and we couldn't have done the games without her! A big thank you to Ron Ford for arranging us to play on the turf field and for all his support this season!

This was a great team effort by all Field Hockey parents and girls throughout the town and a wonderful launching pad for the future! The interest in this sport has grown so much over the last few years and I am sure it will continue! Thank you all again for your help and I hope I remembered everyone and apologize if I have forgotten someone!

Waxman-Markey flawed but can be fixed

TO THE EDITOR:

The Waxman-Markey cap and trade bill now in the Senate is the closest our nation has come to effectively combating global warming. Yet, critics still fight in favor of a carbon tax. However, assuming a carbon tax is possible and effective is both naïve and demonstrates no understanding of environmental economics. A carbon tax will either be rejected by Republicans and "blue-dog" Democrats or accomplish nothing as industries that can pay the price to continue emitting. A cap and trade program lets the market deal with a price and instead controls quantity.

Yes, the Waxman-Markey bill that is now in the Senate is flawed in that it distributes 85 percent of its carbon allowances to coal-related industries. However, this means that the Waxman-Markey Bill simply needs to redistribute allowances, not be replaced with a carbon tax bill that will go nowhere and do nothing to reduce our carbon footprint.

Scary moment

TO THE EDITOR:

Dear Town Manager, Board of Selectmen:

A short note to thank officer Regan Steverman for her quick action stopping a truck that illegally passed the senior van or Ripley Road and Depot Court and was speeding — it was a scary moment — lots of children coming and going. Our driver is very good and avoided any problem.

It was a pleasure to see such quick decisive action by the Cohasset Police car.

Thanking you all.

Gearing up for a difficult year

BUDGET PLANNING

SAM WAKEMAN

In the past year, all of us have had to learn to live with less. Individuals, families, businesses and governments at all levels have experienced unprecedented challenges in making ends meet. The town of Cohasset is no exception.

All indications are that our budget for the fiscal year beginning July 2010 will be extremely difficult. Yet in adversity often comes opportunity. To help the town make more thoughtful and participatory financial choices in the days and years ahead, the selectmen, last spring, created a Budget Planning Group (BPG).

The purpose of this new body is to provide a long-term financial planning capacity for the town. The objective is to look beyond the current year's budget to consider how to balance future budgets and to allow citizens adequate time to understand and consider the trade offs that occur when there is less money available. Do we reduce services, increase taxes, find new sources of revenue, and seek greater efficiencies? The town is required by law to submit a balanced budget, so tough decisions need to be made and citizens have the right and obligation to be involved in those decisions in a timely way.

During the course of this summer and early fall, the BPG began looking at several budget scenarios and they are not pleasant. We have looked at the very real possibility of no State aid and we have looked at the possibility of a selected increase in State aid. We have examined possible changes in our own tax revenue as well as changes in expenditures.

In trying to be realistic for fiscal 2011, we settled on what we refer to as a best guesstimate. This scenario yields a $1 million shortfall for the fiscal year. This shortfall must be covered by a combination of reductions in budgeted expenditures and increases in revenues. If there are further cuts in outside funding the situation will doubtless be worse.

To prepare to town for what lies ahead, the BPG is considering options to deal with the developing fiscal crisis and to widen the universe of people involved in these discussions.

Paving question is the most popular

MAKING TRACKS

TOM GRUBER & MARK BRENNAN

Paving Around the Common – You would never guess that the most oft asked questions is "When are you gonna pave?" Well believe it or not, it is. This week, Capone Construction has been doing work to raise the curb on Jason and Long roads where it would otherwise be below the new paving. They are also adding pedestrian ramps at a number of the corners around the Common to aid in accessibility. The accompanying photo shows the new pedestrian ramp at the Duck Pond on the Common. The ramp is to the right hand edge of the picture. If you walk by at the ramp, before the final paving is done on Robert Jason Road, you will see that there is an edge that is about two inches above the road surface. This is to accommodate the height of the final paving that is yet to be added.

While this activity is going on, local contractors are doing the final preparation in the roadway for paving. Items being tended to are things like cutting out the bad paving at Sohier and North Main streets, cutting smooth edges at driveways, and so on.

Early this week we had a discussion with our paving contractor, T. L. Edwards and they plan to arrive in Cohasset, weather permitting next Tuesday and pave the roads we have ready. We are not sure they will get the whole list accomplished but it consists of the following roads: N. Main Street from the Common to Red Gate Lane, Red Gate Lane, Highland Avenue, Gammons and Joy Place, several driveways off of the Main Street end of Jerusalem Road, including the Logan Estate, and several other small private ways such as Keene Way and Fernway.

Keep your fingers crossed that the weather is good and we can really make up for some lost ground. From what we hear, all pavers around this part of the country are behind due to the rainy weather we all experienced in the early part of the summer. We seem to be no exception.

Rocky Lane Sidewalk – In the wake of the Greenbush project the Town is making good on its promise to the residents of the Rocky Lane neighborhood. The route that the children take to their school bus stop on N. Main Street is entirely different from what was there before the old Rocky Lane roadway was reconfigured. We agree with the residents, that visibility and safety is must less than it used to be. But, the MBTA disagreed and only said they would provide space for the Town to construct its own sidewalk.

Contractors Replace the End of Sohier.

Rocky Lane Side

North Main Street Side.

Capone Construction, who is also doing the curb and sidewalk work at the Common, is now preparing the area for the sidewalk. The dirt on either side of the bridge has been removed. The Main Street side of the bridge has been prepared with compacted gravel and is currently ready for paving. The Rocky Lane side of the bridge has also been prepared for paving, but from the photos you can see that the paving base looks entirely different on each side.

While this activity is going on, local contractors are doing the final preparation in the roadway for paving. Items being tended to are things like cutting out the bad paving at Sohier and North Main streets, cutting smooth edges at driveways, and so on.

The Rocky Lane side, since it is adjacent to wetlands and in keeping with our Conservation Commission's requirements, is to be paved with pervious asphalt. This is a special asphalt mix that has extensive porosity so that water can leach through it into the ground. To prepare for this type of paving, after the soil was excavated, a geotextile fabric was laid and covered with stone. This makes a very porous base that will not inhibit the flow of water into the ground from the pervious asphalt. As far as we know, this is the first use of pervious paving by the Town. We are anxious to see how well it performs, both in durability and in letting water seep into the ground.

The Main Street side will be paved over concrete that is a part of the bridge structure, so there is no need for pervious paving on this side. Thus, the conventional asphalt will be used on this here. According to the contractor, the paving should be complete in the next couple of weeks.

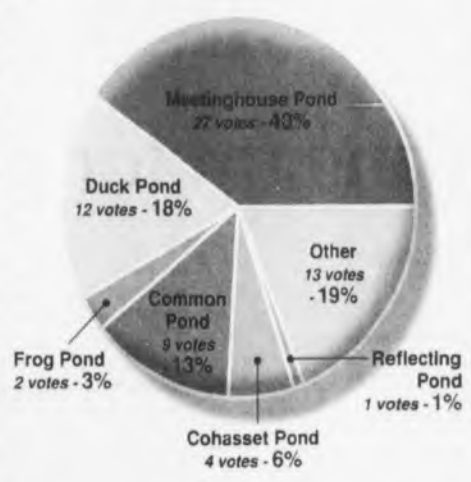
POLL QUESTION

What would you name the pond on the Common?

The small pond on Cohasset Common, one of the town's landmarks, is officially named "Meetinghouse Pond." But in our travels in and about Cohasset we rarely hear it referred to as such. We've heard a variety of different names — Duck Pond, Pond on the Common, even Frog Pond.



With discussion about renovating the pond we thought it would be fun to ask readers what they would name the pond, if given the chance. We offered readers some names to choose from (see pie chart), but we also left an "other" option for open-ended answers.

Readers came up with some interesting ideas for a new name for the pond: Muskrat Pond, Liberty Pond, Towle House Pond, Cohasset Common Pond, Skippers Pond, Kettle Pond, T-POCC (The Pond on Cohasset Common), Hero's Pond (for those who have served our nation in time of war), Village Fountain, Bob, Loch Ness and Car Pond.

Most of the votes stuck to the original and historical name for the pond on the Common – "Meetinghouse Pond."

To date we received a total of 68 votes. To vote visit: www.wickedlocalcohasset.com

Here are some of the comments we received:

• "In our time in Cohasset, we and others have always called it the Duck Pond. That was its name. There used to be ducks and, yes, people feeding them became a problem. However, I like the memories of it and the ring of it — Duck Pond."— Sheila Evans

• "In times past, it was always just called 'The Frog Pond.' I like that. Why gussy it up?" — Nancy Garrison.

• "Well, we could maximize its revenue-generating ability by selling the naming rights and call it the 'Fidelity Spartan Equity Index Fund Pond.' Or maybe we could follow the university model by creating an endowment and naming it after a significant donor like The Annie E. Casey Foundation Pond. Or maybe we should just listen to our kids and call it the duck pond...." — Rick Shea

Sounds can be a symphony!

SENIOR SCENE

LOUISE MULLEN

One day in late summer I was sitting in my garden swing as I often do when the weather is just right. The air was so still one could almost hear the proverbial pin drop. My home is far enough back from the street so that I hear no traffic go by.

Soon my ears began to pick up sounds, first the singing of the gentle breeze in the tall pines. A robin began to sing his cheerful song. He was soon joined by the song of a cardinal, then the raucous call of a blue jay, and the twittering of the smaller birds. From the nearby park came the sound of a child's happy laughter and the barking of a dog. In the distance came a pinging sound, perhaps ledge being chipped away. A plane passed overhead, filling in the bass — all together, the sounds made a kind of music, a symphony of man and nature.

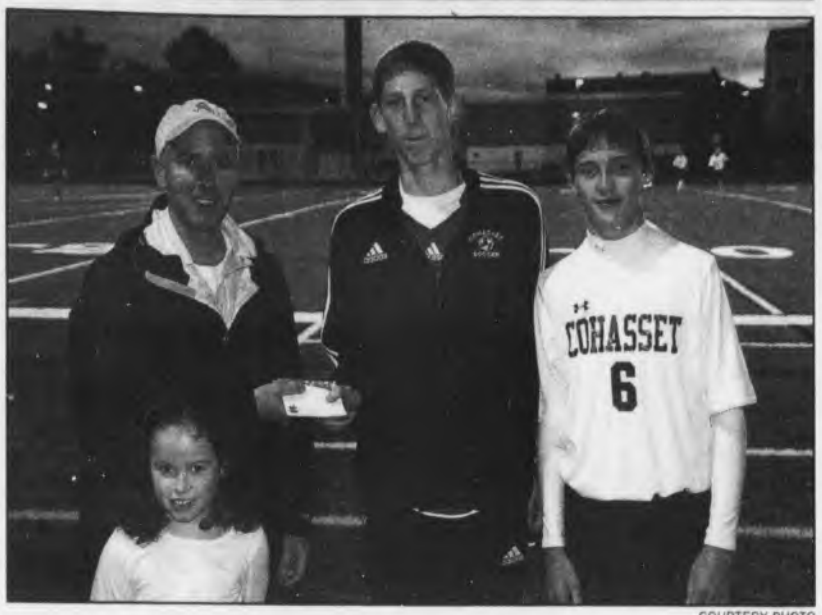
ELECTRONIC MANAGEMENT



In the past, employee attendance required manual timesheets or mechanical time clocks. The advent of semi-automated time clocks provided data that was used for payroll calculations. Today's computer-based options provide a streamlined tracking system based on unique software. This option allows for employees to login and perform a wide range of computerized clock operations. A computer-based time clock gives the employees the ability to clock in and out. They may review their schedules and request time off. Even clocking out for breaks can be accomplished with this program. Such a program is installed on the server, then deployed to employees' workstations by sending it out as a web link. Information gathered may be restricted to workstations inside the private network.

Today's column on electronic management is brought to you by the entire staff at RGB COMPUTER SOLUTIONS. Located at 94 Station St., 2nd Floor, Hingham, we can help you with any other computer related issue. Consult with us if you're interested in a software solution that can help you with your current time sheet applications. Call us at 781.749.1130 with any questions. Get control of your computer.

P.S. Electronic time clock software is designed to streamline the management of human capital.

Here are the raffle winners from the Cohasset Soccer Boosters Annual Pancake Breakfast. The McKeon Family won a month's worth of groceries from Stop and Shop. Presenting the award to Kevin and Ava McKeon are varsity players Sam Richardson and Andrew Whitney.

Pancake breakfast, raffle support CHS soccer

To the Editor:

Dear supporters of Cohasset Soccer Boosters Club:

Cohasset High School Soccer owes a great debt of gratitude to all who supported our recent fundraising raffle and annual pancake breakfast. Proceeds from the breakfast and raffle help support the Cohasset High School Men's and Women's soccer program.

The winning raffle ticket was sold by Morgan McCarthy to Kevin McKeon. The McKeon's won a month's worth of groceries at Stop & Shop.

The success of this annual event could only be realized through the generosity of local merchants, the efforts of Booster Club members, the salesmanship of our Varsity and Junior Varsity athletes and most of all the support of the Cohasset citizenry and their friends.

We would like to personally thank the following local merchants and families for their generous donations to the breakfast and raffle:

Wallace St John, US Flag; Black Rock County Club; Liz Richardson, photographer; Good Sport; Paperscapes; Cohasset Dog Wash; Lemon Lime; Shoe Market Kids; Rita Kirk, artist; Cohasset Sailing Club; Cohasset Sports Partnership; Mary Sullivan/Fitness Barn; Cohasset Kennel; La Petite Maison; Paul Davis; the Craven family; the Fein family; Dependable Cleaners; and Atlantic Bagel's inimitable "Steve."

We would also like to thank Ann Kelly who spearheaded the auction drive.

Finally thanks to all the parents and athletes who prepared the delicious breakfast for over 400 hungry Cohasset supporters of the program.

FROM BUDGET, PAGE 10

The town is required by law to submit a balanced budget, so tough decisions need to be made...

We are examining all town operations to recommend efficiencies, identify impediments to savings, consider increases in revenues and develop any other changes that will improve town services and functions. We will, in the days and months ahead, be reaching out through articles like this in the Mariner and other forums in an effort to inform and involve a broader number of citizens in this choices the town faces.

The BPG is made up of appointed members of the Board of Selectmen, School Committee, Advisory Committee, Capital Budget Committee. The Town Manager, Town Finance Director, School Superintendent, and School Business Manager also participate.

The BPG meets on a regular basis (approximately monthly) and welcomes any and all input from citizens. In the coming months we will get more specific about the choices we are considering.

Our next meeting is scheduled for Tuesday Nov. 17 in the basement of Town Hall.

Sam Wakeman is Chairman of the Budget Planning Group.

Skippers are in

By William Wassersug
WWASSERS@CNC.COM

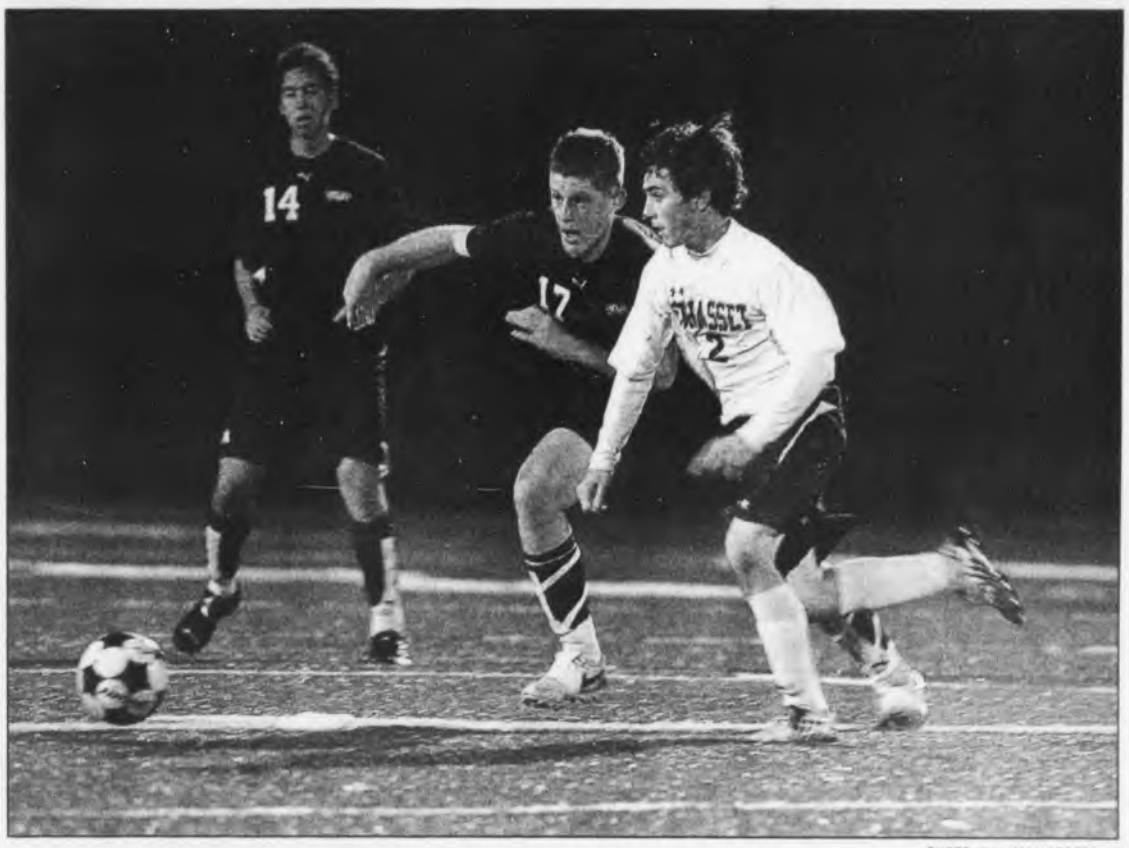
The Cohasset boys soccer team got the job done, qualifying for the MIAA Tournament with a 2-0 win over Abington Tuesday.

That, added to a 3-1 win over Cape Cod Academy the night before, gave the Skippers the points they needed to get to the dance.

Boys' Soccer

Jonah Adkins and Nick Brown scored the Skippers' goals against Abington and Will Wise notched his ninth shutout of the season.

In the Cape Cod Academy win, Tyler Durant scored twice. Adkins got the ball rolling with a goal in the opening minutes.



"If we can keep our scoring punch going like we have the past few games, we can ride it into the tournament," Cohasset coach Jim Willis said. "Our defense has been great and Will Wise has been the difference all year."

Willis said Brown has been coming along offensively and Adkins has scored three goals in three games now.

The wins over Cape Cod Academy and Abington were important.

Cohasset players enjoy the moment after beating Mashpee two weeks ago. They'll have another big game Nov. 6 when they face off against Abington.

Taking care of business

Next up, the game of the year

And after the seventh game, they rested.

Deservedly so.

Following its 33-0 South Shore League victory at East Bridgewater last Friday night, sparked by two Dana Valentine touchdown runs and a shutdown defense, the undefeated Cohasset High School football team has this weekend off.

Football

The Skippers now await the highly anticipated showdown Friday, Nov. 6, against defending SSL champion Abington.

Both Cohasset and Abington are 7-0 overall, 3-0 in the league. It might have been normal to "look past" East Bridgewater (now 1-6) and toward Abington, but Cohasset was too wise to fall into that trap.

"Some of the kids told us after the game that they were kind of mad at the coaches for (repeatedly) saying that we've got to take East Bridgewater seriously," Cohasset head coach Pete Afanasiw said.

"It was almost as if it came to that moment where the kids took it upon themselves to take care of business. It wasn't the coaches' responsibility anymore to get them ready. They knew they were prepared; they knew they were ready to go. It was like the kids' saying, 'Coach, we're ready. We can do this.'

"It was kind of like a coming-of-age moment for the team, which was nice to see."

Afanasiw said he was not surprised at such a mature approach shown by his players.

"With the strong group of seniors we have, the experience that they have, we knew they had

Ruggiero to be honored

The Massachusetts Basketball Coaches Association Hall will honor Cohasset varsity basketball coach Bo Ruggiero as the South Div. 4 Coach of the Year at their banquet Nov. 22 at Holy Cross.

Ruggiero led Cohasset to the MIAA Tournament last season in his first year with the Skippers, helping turn the team around.

Coasset vs. Abington expected to win Fox Friday showdown

It hasn't been formally announced, but the Friday, Nov. 6 South Shore League battle between Cohasset and Abington is expected to be named the winner for the Fox Friday Game of the Week for that week. When polling closed, Cohasset was well ahead.

The game is expected to live up to the hype.

Cohasset will come into the game undefeated. They have a bye week this wek, while Abington could also come in with a perfect record if they get by Norwell this week.

The game is Nov. 6 at 7 p.m. at Alumni Stadium.

It will be Senior Night and fans are encouraged to be a part of the fun.

Tickets are available at the gate and cost $5 for adults, $3 for students and is free to children under 10.

Should both teams be undefeated, the South Shore League title will be on the line.

Talking about a milestone

Cohasset's Beal talks about win No. 100

By William Wassersug
WWASSERS@CNC.COM

For Cohasset girls soccer coach Deb Beal, soccer isn't just about winning.

It's about teaching, and having fun.

Of course, winning is always fun, and Beal knows all about that.

With a win over Carver last week, Beal won her 100th game as Cohasset's coach, a big milestone when you consider that she's in her 11th season, and took over a team that wasn't an established power like it is now.

And add the fact that 10 wins in a season makes for a tournament team, that says something.

Beal said the early years were a bit different from today.

"No doubt that 100 wins is an accomplishment," Beal said. "I never had set goals to get to this point. I really just enjoy what I do and I look forward to each season with renewed energy. When I took over the program in the fall of 1998 there were 27 girls at pre season. We finished off that year with 25. Our record was 3-11-2, losing to teams like Hanover 10-0 and Norwell 7-0. We weren't it in them," the coach said. "It was just nice to see them actually put forth not just the effort on the field – which they always do – it was the other things: the stuff on the sidelines, stuff prior to and during the game, the little things . . .

"All the coaches were saying, 'Wow, something got into these guys tonight.' It was something we hadn't seen out of them because all along they had been relatively laid-back and loose. It's not that they were tight at all (against EB). They were just really focused and bent on beating this team."

Beat the Vikings they did with a strong performance, especially defensively. Cohasset gave up only 33 yards of offense to East Bridgewater, which earned four first downs, two of which were on defensive penalties.

"So we gave up only two first downs the whole game," said Afanasiw, who's Skippers also blocked a punt and ran that in for a touchdown and returned a punt for another TD. That's 12 more points the defense contributed.

Senior Nick Lieberman opened the scoring by blocking a punt and rolling in 6 yards for a first-quarter touchdown. Senior Brendan Doonan kicked the extra point and it was 7-0.

A 7-yard TD run by Valentine made it 13-0 in the second quarter, followed in the same period by junior Thomas Flibotte's 1-yard touchdown carry. Valentine ripped off a 57-yard, third-quarter TD run (followed by a conversion pass from junior Jeff Cavanaro to senior Dean Driscoll), and the scoring was capped later in the quarter by Doonan's 52-yard punt return for a touchdown.

Valentine finished with 12 carries for 159 yards, giving him 1,244 yards on 159 rushing attempts for the season. He also has 14 touchdowns and 94 points.

Cavanaro, at quarterback, was 4-for-9 for 99 yards, hiking his season totals to 40 completions on 88 passes 45.5 percent) for 548 yards. He has thrown for 7 touchdowns

With East Bridgewater now behind them, the Skippers will have found plenty to do while preparing for Abington's visit to Alumni Field.

"A little bit of everything," Afanasiw said, "you know, trying to get some bumps and bruises healed, get some well deserved rest, but also stay in shape."

Toward that end, the Skippers did a lot of lifting, a lot of running, and underwent some light practice sessions this week before planning to take the weekend off. Intense practices will be in order starting Monday, and by Friday, Cohasset should know all it'll need to know about every player on the Abington side of the field – except their favorite ice cream flavors.

Knowing the thorough manner in which Afanasiw and Co. prepare their troops, they might even know some of those.

While the Skippers will have had two weeks to work up a game plan, Abington has to play tonight, hosting Norwell at 7. So that will turn into a scouting mission: The Cohasset coaching staff and likely many of the players will travel to Abington and watch the Green Wave take on Norwell (5-2, 1-2).

Afanasiw is quite familiar with Abington. He and his assistants have seen coach Jim Kelliher's Green Wave in person and on tape. Tonight will represent just one more opportunity to nail down the enemy's tendencies.

"We know what they want to do, what they hope to do," Afanasiw said. "They've got a handful of good athletes, as they've had the last four or five years. They're always extremely well coached, so it's not like they're going to beat themselves."

Is it an advantage to be in a bye week and scouting while Abington has to play another game before The Grand Showdown?

"We as a coaching staff and as players definitely see it as that," Afanasiw said. "We will have had one thing on our minds for two weeks and that's Abington. We can prepare and there's really no sense of rush to get ready for them.

"They can't even think about us until they get past Norwell. And Norwell is a vastly improved team.

"So, it's kind of six one way, half a dozen of the other. It's good to get the rest because you need it for the homestretch, but there's the other school of thought that if you keep playing, you stay sharp and stay up to game speed, and so forth.

"In football, I just don't know if that's the case. I don't think you necessarily need to play every week to stay sharp. If you take a week off in, say, baseball or basketball, it probably shows with your timing. But I think in football the kids can adjust a little bit quicker to that. There's not as much fine motor skill involved."

ple of wins, a tie with Norwell, we were cruising," Willis said. "The we had a few hiccups with East Bridgewater and Carver. We knew we had to get back into it."

Just as importantly, the wins give the Skippers a little breathing room on Senior Night.

Cohasset will host Scituate under the lights at 7 p.m. in the regular season finale.

Scituate beat Cohasset 2-1 in the season opener at Scituate.

"We didn't want to go into Senior Night with that pressure," Willis said. "We can go out and enjoy it. We don't get many Friday night games. This one is at 7 p.m. against cross-town rivals. The seniors are psyched. This game is important to us. There are some powerful teams at the top of the draw. We don't want to go into the tournament at .500 and have to go right against them. This game is big overall for our seeding."

As for the rally to get in, Willis credited several factors.

"Tyler Durant has been a huge sparkplug for us," he said. "He's playing really hard. He's probably been one of our most consistent players all year. He's a captain and a great leader. He also runs the sidelines very well. He had the two goals (Tuesday). He worked hard for those. He deserved them. The defense across the board has been excellent, and John McGoldrick has stepped up and filled in for Travers Craven when Travers was hurt. He's done a great job."

compe0titive in our league at all. The girls kept us all smiling and we simply just went out, got our butts kicked and went out again the next day."

Early on, Beal said the numbers were less than spectacular, but the big picture was forming, especially off the field.

"That trend (losing frequently) continued for the next four years as I amassed a 10-49-11 career record," she said. "So at that point 100 wins was a cruel joke. Those though, are the years that I worked my hardest to establish pride in our program by getting to know the girls and boosting their confidence, it was fun even when we got crushed. All those youngsters are off and doing wonderful things in the world now. Many keep in touch and I love hearing from them."

The 2002 season was a turning point," she said. "The hard work and dedication of the Cohasset Soccer Club took over. That was the first year we qualified for the state tournament in my tenure. Our record was 10-8-1. I still have the gold key chain the girls gave me that was engraved with one word; 'FINALLY".

"As the program gained confidence everything grew from there," she said. "We weren't the best yet but we certainly were not the worst anymore. We began winning games and the fun continued. The arrival of some very talented freshman in 2004 led me to where we are now. In four years we amassed a 55-20-10 record. That's quite different from the first four years."

"Obviously if you ask me what the greatest moment was, I would have to say it was the first ever Div III south sectional title last November," she said. "The excitement with the players and their families is something I know I will never forget. Funny how when I was starting out in 1998 winning was rare and not so important but in 2008 it was something so different in that the girls expected to win and played to win. I find it hard to believe that I have coached so many years, where does the time go? I coached my 221st game tonight."

Beal said support has been the key to her success.

"As the seasons passed, one thing remained constant and that was the support we received from each other, our families and the school administration," she said. "We go out and we represent our school and ourselves with pride, sportsmanship and integrity. Those are the foundations to a successful program."

In the team's most recent action, there was another win to report, with Cohasset beating Abington 3-1 on Tuesday.

The win improved the Skippers to 10-5 with two games left to play.

Samantha Crough, Caroline Fein, and Mackenzie Hart each scored for Cohasset in the win.

Cohasset Youth Soccer Winter Indoor sign-ups open

Football, food are 'suptastic!'

LIFE AT CHS

SEAN MACCARTHY

I'm going to use it again, right now, to describe how epic it is that Cohasset High football, their awesome fans, and the pep band will all be on TV.

Përshëndetje! That's how you say "hello" in Albanian. Trust me, learning that one Albanian word alone will be very beneficial to you at some point in the future…and is incredibly random. Anyways, now that you have finally learned something new today, it's time for me to recap the past week at Cohasset High School. Shijoj! That's how you say "enjoy" in Albanian. See that's two things I have already taught you and this is only word number 78. Man I'm good…

I got some news for ya'll. Its great news. Its big news…no wait…its HUGE news. And it involves a HUGE news station. What's the "HUGE" news? Fox News will be coming to Cohasset High School on Nov. 6th to film the football game between the 7-0 Abington Green Wave against our very own 7-0 Cohasset Skippers after Cohasset residents were rallied together over the internet to vote for the game online. Remember in one of my articles a few weeks ago when I coined the word "suptastic" which is a combination of the words super and fantastic? Well guess what? I'm going to use it again, right now, to describe how epic it is that Cohasset High football, their awesome fans, and the pep band will all be on TV. This is suptastic. This isn't an opportunity to watch the Cohasset High School football team from the comfy confines of your home. Not even close. This is the best opportunity to act like a very loud and spirited lunatic in public in an attempt to get on TV. May the best lunatic win…

Speaking of suptastic, I believe the first time I used that word was to describe all the free food I got at the last Student Council presidents' meeting. Well I guess I am going to have to use it for the second time in the article because guess what, we had another suptastic presidents' meeting on Tuesday with free food! Free custom made wraps with free cookies and chocolate milk. So good! Don't label me as a fat slouch though, because after the feast we buckled down and got down to business. After talking about how successful homecoming week was and after GLO JAM 2 was mentioned, we started talking about the possibility of a huge cookout or tailgate before the Cohasset vs. Abington football game to unite the town behind the team. The idea was actually brought up by some National Honor Society members so the National Honor Society and the Student Council then held a meeting to discuss the possible event on Wednesday. Nothing was set in stone, but the idea is looking good. Nice juicy hamburgers. Some scrumptious hot dogs. Some cheesy pizza…oh man…all this talk of food is making me twitch again. And now I am really hungry. But not just for any food, I am hungry for some chicken parmesan…

Oh Përshëndetje! Chicken ParmeSEAN here, Sean MacCarthy's alter-ego. I would like to inform you all of a craze that has been sweeping across Cohasset High School. A food craze. This isn't your average food though, this is better than food. Some even argue it is better than breathing. It's the Fat Chicken. There's no typo there. The Fat Chicken is the most, dare I say it for a third time this article, suptastic combination of food ever assembled on a bulkie roll. Two large pieces of chicken parmesan sit in the middle of the Fat Chicken. Underneath the chicken parmesan are four, count them, four mozzarella sticks. It doesn't stop here. The top of all this excellence is showered with a crazy amount of curly fries and it is all sandwiched in between two beloved bulkie rolls. It is easily the best thing ever constructed in the world and it can only be found at one place; Victoria's on 3A. I'm serious. Call them right now. Their number is 1-781-383-2777. Do it now. But be careful, it may be too much to handle for some. I think I feel Sean MacCarthy's conscious kicking me out again. So I will put in my last words, go buy the Fat Chicken!.....

Wow what was that?! Sorry about that. I thought I Chicken ParmeSEAN was dead but clearly I still have a problem that requires professional help. Well I'm going to go look up a psychiatrist that specializes in dealing with people that have alter-egos. Have a good week and Mirupafshim! That's "goodbye" in Albanian and that's the third thing I have taught you today. You're welcome.

Sean MacCarthy guarantees he will get on TV on Nov. 6th.

Trick or Treat for UNICEF; spare change sought

"When children come to Cohasset homes for Halloween we hope families will donate their spare change to UNICEF."
— Sophie Bertolami, CHS senior

Cohasset High seniors, Lauren Blaze and Sophie Bertolami, have formed the Cohasset Teens for UNICEF Club.

Sophie explains that UNICEF is the world's leading international children's organization working in more than 150 countries to address the ongoing issues that impact why children are dying needlessly. UNICEF provides lifesaving nutrition, clean water, education, protection and emergency response — saving more lives than any other humanitarian organization in the world.

Every day 24,000 children die from completely preventable causes: UNICEF strives to make this number zero with the "Believe in Zero" campaign.

Trick or Treat for UNICEF invites children and adults alike to "Make Halloween Count" by joining with UNICEF to help save children's lives. By Trick or Treating for UNICEF, children and adults can help UNICEF provide nutrition, immunization, sanitation, access to clean water and proper education for children around the world.

Even the smallest donations are vital: 6 cents provides water for one thirsty child; $2 provides nutrition for one hungry child; $44 provides school supplies to 20 children; $112 provides emergency blankets to 37 children; $200 immunizes 550 children against measles.

Lauren and Sophie decided to start a UNICEF club after their volunteer work in the Caribbean, Africa, and Costa Rica over the past two summers.

They hope to encourage Cohasset children and adults to support UNICEF's mission worldwide. The spare change a family may find around their house can add up to make a real impact in a child's life, Sophie explains.

"When children come to Cohasset homes for Halloween we hope families will donate their spare change to UNICEF," she says.

Children can pick up a "Trick-or-Treat for UNICEF" box in the main offices at the Osgood and Deer Hill schools. Boxes can also be picked up at the library.

Parents can turn their children's boxes in at the main office at Cohasset High School the week after Halloween. Donations can also be given through Coinstar located at Stop and Shop and Shaws. Choose "UNICEF" as the recipient of that donation.

'Lend Me a Tenor' opens in Cohasset on Nov. 6

The show takes place in 1934, as cast and staff of the Cleveland Grand Opera Company prepare for the big opening night of Verdi's 'Otello' with famed (fictional) opera star Tito Merelli.

The Cohasset Dramatic Club (CDC) will present Ken Ludwig's smash Broadway hit "Lend Me a Tenor," from Nov. 6 to 15 at the historic Town Hall Theater on the Cohasset Common. An outstanding cast of well-known South Shore actors will present this laugh-a-minute comedy, winner of three Tony Awards, and enjoyed by audiences here and abroad.

The show takes place in 1934, as cast and staff of the Cleveland Grand Opera Company prepare for the big opening night of Verdi's 'Otello' with famed (fictional) opera star Tito Merelli. Mistaken identity, slamming doors, high-strung characters and an uproarious series of mishaps combine to ensure non-stop laughter for the audience.

To highlight the show within the play aspect of "Lend Me a Tenor," CDC will present the incoming audience members with faux programs and posters from "Otello" and will recreate an opening night at the Opera experience for the first Saturday evening performance, complete with red carpet and formally dressed opera patrons.

"Lend Me a Tenor" is directed by Lisa Rafferty of Scituate and stars Mark Bono from Milton, Richard Chason of Scituate, Bonnie Gardner of Rockland, Cara Lee Haman of East Bridgewater, Chris Hetherington of Scituate, Caroline Maus of Quincy, Jake Plummer of Hanover and Lisa Pratt from Cohasset.

Lend Me a Tenor, presented by Cohasset Dramatic Club, plays Friday and Saturdays, Nov. 6, 7, 13 and 14, at 7:30 p.m. and matinees on Sunday, Nov. 8 and 15 at 2 p.m. at the Cohasset Town Hall Theater, 41 Highland Avenue. Tickets are priced at $16 for general admission and $14 for seniors, students and groups. They can be purchased at Paperscapes Cohasset Village, Buttonwood Books CJC Hwy, Cohasset or via reservation at 617-697-2115. Tickets may also be purchased the day of the show, one hour prior to the show at the box office. For more information, go to www.cohassetdramaticclub.org.

Gallery Benoit in Boston will present Cohasset-based artist Robert Merton in a group show of contemporary art Nov. 6 though 30. The public opening will be on Friday, Nov. 6, with a reception from 6 to 9 p.m. The gallery is located at located at 450 Harrison Ave, No. 63, Boston.

A member of the South Shore Art Center, Merton has painted for 15 years, including at the Boston Visual School and the Accademia di Belle Atri Lorenzo da Viterbo in Italy.

Cohasset-based Paul Ognibene, developer of high-end condominium residences at Dana Park Place in Cambridge, commissioned Merton to create original artwork for the building's lobby.

Gallery Benoit's exhibition will feature recent works by artists based in Boston and Europe. Hours are Wednesday through Sunday from 11 a.m. to 6 p.m. For more information visit www.robertfmerton.com or www.gallery-benoit.com

SALOME'S STARS
FOR RELEASE WEEK OF
Oct. 26, 2009

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) A rejection of your attempt to be friendly leaves you with two choices: Try again, or give up. If you want to make another effort, go slowly. Let things develop without pressure.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) It could be a problem dealing with unfamiliar people who do things differently from what you're used to. But rely on that strong sense of purpose to get you through this difficult period.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) To avoid neglecting a personal matter because of a demanding new workplace schedule, start prioritizing immediately. Knowing how to apportion your time takes a little while to set up.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) It won't be easy to avoid some of the pressures that come with change. Best advice: Take things a step at a time, and you'll be less likely to trip up while things are in a chaotic state.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) A much-talked-about workplace change could be coming soon. Be sure to get all the details involved in the process, and once you have them, you can decide how you want to deal with it.

VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) You might still believe that your trust was betrayed, although the facts would appear to prove the opposite. But by the week's end you should learn something that will help set the record straight.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) Holiday plans could be a challenge because of shifting circumstances. But a more settled period starts by midweek, allowing you to firm up your plan-making once and for all.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) The facts continue to be on your side. So make use of them in dealing with any challenge to your stated position. Also, open your mind to the offer of help from an unlikely source.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) There could still be a communication problem holding up the resolution of a troublesome situation. Stay with it, and eventually your message will get through and be understood.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) A possible change in your workplace schedule might create a chaotic situation for a while. But once things begin to settle down, you might find that this could work to your advantage.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) A recent job-linked decision might need to be reassessed because of the possibility of finding benefits you might have overlooked. Check out all related data to help in the search.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) A personal situation you agreed to might not be as acceptable to the other person involved in the matter. Avoid pressuring and bullying. Instead, seek common ground by talking things through.

Fun By The Numbers

Like puzzles? Then you'll love sudoku. This mind-bending puzzle will have you hooked from the moment you square off, so sharpen your pencil and put your sudoku savvy to the test!

Here's How It Works:

Sudoku puzzles are formatted as a 9x9 grid, broken down into nine 3x3 boxes. To solve a sudoku, the numbers 1 through 9 must fill each row, column and box. Each number can appear only once in each row, column and box. You can figure out the order in which the numbers will appear by using the numeric clues already provided in the boxes. The more numbers you name, the easier it gets to solve the puzzle!

Maureen McGovern in the world premiere musical memoir "A Long and Winding Road," playing now through Nov. 15 at the Huntington Theatre Company's Calderwood Pavilion at the BCA.

There aren't many people who can claim to have survived not only a sinking ocean liner but also a burning skyscraper, but Maureen McGovern is one. The singer – whose recordings of "The Morning After" and "We May Never Love Like This Again," the Academy Award winners for Best Original Song for 1972 and 1974, respectively, from the Irwin Allen epics "The Poseidon Adventure" and "The Towering Inferno," earned her the nickname "Maureen the Disaster Theme Queen" – had a lot to live up to, and a lot to live down, before she was even 25 years old. McGovern remained in theme song mode and on the pop charts with "Can You Read My Mind" from 1978's "Superman" and "Different Worlds" from the short-lived 1979 sitcom "Angie." McGovern ultimately parodied her own image by playing a singing nun in the 1980 disaster movie spoof "Airplane!"

By the early 1980s, however, Broadway beckoned and McGovern headed to New York, replacing Linda Ronstadt in "The Pirates of Penzance," co-starring with the late Raul Julia in "Nine," and, most recently, playing Marmee in "Little Women" on Broadway and then on a national tour that stopped at Boston's Opera House. Along the way, she earned respect not only for her recordings and concerts, but also for her almost annual appearances on the Jerry Lewis Labor Day Telethon. The Ohio-born Grammy Award winner is currently looking back on her life in the one-woman show "A Long and Winding Road," being presented by the Huntington Theatre Company at the Wimberly Theatre, Boston Center for the Arts. McGovern, 60, spoke with Town Commons last week about her long career and her latest project.

Town Commons: What was the genesis of "A Long and Winding Road?"

Maureen McGovern: This whole project began as an album and then a cabaret show in New York. I use cabaret to break in new materials for my concerts. I do the music from the album in my concerts, but some of what we're doing here is different. In symphony concerts, everything is very structured. In the theater, however, the singer gets to drive the train. We call what we're doing now a theatrical concert, because it has a spine and a story.

> "We call what we're doing now a theatrical concert, because it has a spine and a story."

TC: How did you choose the songs for this show?

MM: A couple of years ago, my agent suggested I do a show with music that would appeal to baby boomers. I wasn't really interested, but my director and co-writer, Philip Himberg, said that if we could find the right material then we could tell not only my story, but also the story of my generation. We went through about 400 different songs before we finally agreed on just the right material for the show. I love Bob Dylan, Laura Nyro, Pete Seeger, Carole King, Joni Mitchell, and, of course, the Beatles, so we chose music by all of them, plus songs by Broadway composers like Stephen Sondheim and William Finn. What's great is that the songs spring from the dialogue.

TC: There is a lot of folk music in this show. What do you suppose gives it such enduring appeal?

MM: I started out as a folk singer so I have always loved it. Most of these songs I'm doing now, I played on the guitar when I was just a kid. The best folk music is very conversational and very direct. What makes it wonderful is that so much of it remains as timeless and relevant today as when it was first written.

TC: Folk isn't the only music with lasting appeal. How does it feel to know that, no matter what else you may do, you may always be best known for "The Morning After"?

MM: I will be grateful for "The Morning After" for as long as I live. When I recorded that song, however, things weren't going that well for me. It was a very frustrating time, because my record producers at the time had all the power over song choice, orchestrations, even the key I sang in. In the years since, though, many people have told me that the song has helped them get over everything from break-ups to the loss of loved ones. I've performed it many times over the years on the Jerry Lewis Labor Day telethon and about 12 years into my association with Jerry, my niece was diagnosed with a neuromuscular disease. I finally understood what people meant. It is the ultimate song about hope.

TC: What is it like to share so much of your personal story?

MM: My mother died in 1981, just before I made my Broadway debut. I've always been sad that I didn't get to share that experience with her. My dad lived until 2004 and was always very proud of my success. He was a decorated World War II veteran and we parted ways over Vietnam. It was very hard in rehearsals, because that is where you have to honor those emotions. I still get choked up when I think of my father. My father loved "If I Had a Hammer," so that moment in the show, when the entire audience sings along, is transcendent for me. I always have Peter, Paul and Mary in my head when I sing it, too, and the recent passing of Mary Travers has only added to the emotion.

French Memories is one of the many places three high school seniors have found to play music (here, they are playing jazz). Mark Seraikas on the guitar (foreground), Austin Meyers on the bass, and David Hernon on the drums are good friends and have been playing music together since grade school.

Making music to make music

Three high school seniors have the passion

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

When Austin Meyers, Mark Seraikas, and David Hernon get together it is all about the music.

With Austin on the bass, Mark on the guitar, and David on the drums the three high school seniors are not so much aspiring musicians as they are simply musicians.

"This is our passion," Austin said with Mark nodding next to him during a recent interview at a French Memories table.

As they prepare their college applications, they all are looking to keep music as a big part of their lives.

While the high school seniors (Mark and Austin attend Cohasset High and David is at BC High) do play other instruments and are known to occasionally sing, the guitar, the bass and the drum, respectively, are the only instruments they are willing to play professionally.

And they have become well known and recognized around town from their summer gigs at French Memories, or regular concerts as a jazz combo.

The boys, now 17, got started in playing and making music like a lot of other kids — they liked what they saw and heard from established bands.

"We wanted to be a band before we even knew how to play an instrument," David said. Blink-182, Green Day, Smashmouth, and Guns & Roses introduced them to rock music. For Mark and Austin, they started teaching themselves the guitar and later took lessons to hone their skills. David was taken to piano lessons, but really wanted to play the drums. It turned out his piano teacher was a drummer as well so his 30-minute lessons then transformed into 15-minutes of drums and 15-minute of piano, and then all to drums.

Just over two years ago, the long-awaited, much debated Greenbush commuter rail became an operational railroad.

Now, next door to the Cohasset Station, the transit-oriented district, is inching closer to completion. Sixteen new apartments and new storefronts are in the very near future.

H1N1 clinic slated for CMHS

Students are first in line

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

Middle and high school students will be the first in town to receive H1N1 vaccinations.

The Board of Health and middle-high school have collaborated to provide about 200 student vaccinations on Nov. 10.

A connect-ed telephone message went out at 5p.m. on Wednesday evening alerting parents of children grades six through 12 of the availability of the vaccine. The clinic will be held in the library during school hours.

Parents who wish to have their student receive this vaccine need to complete a Town of Cohasset H1N1 Flu Vaccine Consent Form, available on the middle-high school web page (www.cohassetk12.org).

These H1N1 Flu Consent Forms will be numbered as they are returned to Judy Collins, the school nurse, and vaccines will be administered in first received order.

"We are hopeful there will be rolling supplies (of the vaccine)," said Peggy Chapman, chair of the Board of Health. This first wave of vaccinations will only vaccinate one-third of the student body.

When additional vaccine becomes available, it will be offered to the next students in line, according to the receipt of the consent forms. The vaccine can be administered in two forms, a mist or inject-able vaccine. Depending on responses to questions on the consent form, the nurse administering the vaccine will determine in which form to administer the vaccine.

Teenagers are one of the priority groups for the H1N1 vaccination. The priority groups are: pregnant women, emergency health-care workers, caregivers or people living with a newborn up to six months old, children six months old up to adults age 24, and adults age 25 to 64 with chronic health disorders or a compromised immune system.

Elementary school students are not part of the initial vaccination program for the town of Cohasset. Children nine and under must receive the vaccine in two shots. Parents of elementary-age children are encouraged to contact their pediatrician, Chapman said.

"The assumption now is if you have flu symptoms, it is the H1N1 flu...we are expecting a large wave in the next month, but the symptoms have been very mild so far," Chapman said.

Chapman said first responders – police, fire and EMTs – are also next on the vaccination list. Teachers, however, are not on the list very soon, with the exception of pregnant staff.

The schools started this week monitoring both student and teacher absences. Almost across the board there were increases in absences from last week (the week of the Oct. 26) and this past week.

At Osgood, last week absences for

PICTURE THIS/Officer Jay St. Ives

Name: John Jeffrey St. Ives Jr. ("Jay").

Occupation: Cohasset Police Officer.

Best day of your life: My best day was July 29, 1995. (The day I was married to my wife Debbie).

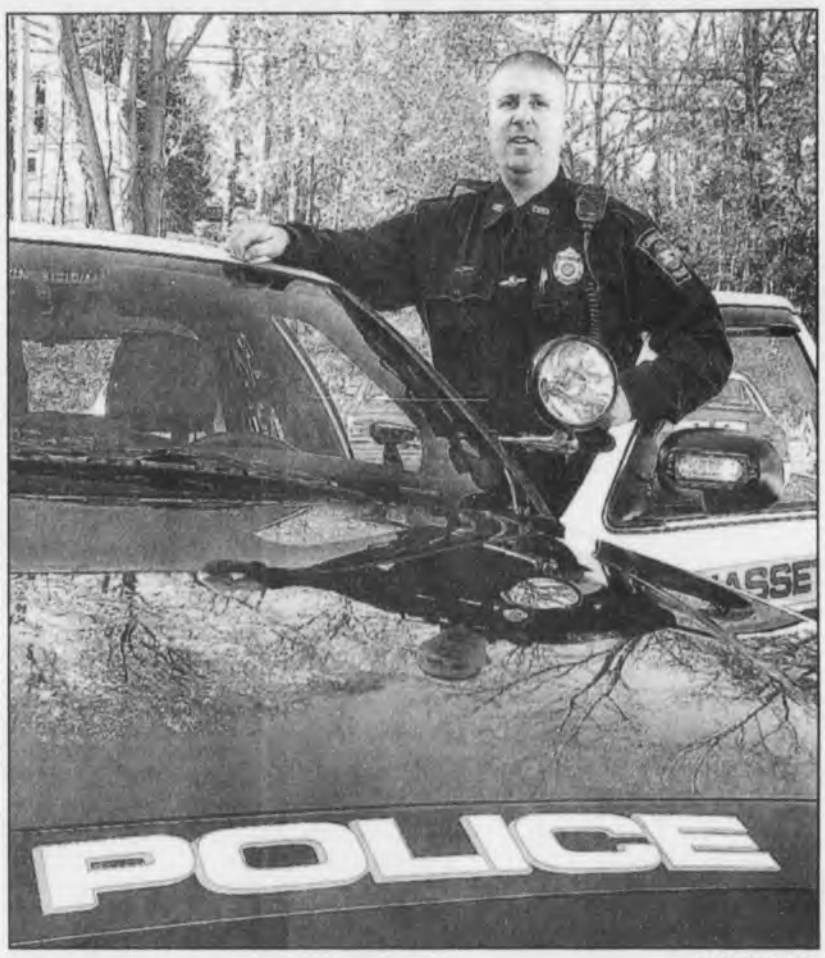
Best vacation: Honeymoon in Aruba. Aruba is a wonderful island and very relaxing.

Favorite season: Summer. I enjoy vacationing at my summer houses. I enjoy boating, golfing, and spending time relaxing on the porch with my entire family.

Favorite holiday: Thanksgiving.

Favorite meal: Chicken Pot Pie.

Best book: "The Killer Angels," Michael Shaara. It is a Civil War novel and the only book I ever read in one day.



Best actor: Matt Damon. I liked him in "Good Wil Hunting," "Saving Private Ryan," and all of the Bourne movies. He gets it.

Best TV show: " Law and Order."

Best music, group, or artist: This is a tough one, either U2 or Red Hot Chili Peppers. I liked the group Chicago too!

Pet peeve: Tardiness (I hate being late and I dislike others being late).

Most embarrassing moment (or dumbest thing you've ever done): This answer should qualify for both. On my wedding day I forgot that I was hooked up to a microphone while at the church. While on the altar, I pretended to recite all of the prayers and actually sang some of the songs. Unfortunately for me, I had no idea what the words were. This provided a lot of enjoyment for my family and friends. Not so much for me.

COURTESY PHOTO

Officer Jay St. Ives, who is a new face at the Cohasset Police Department, is a big fan of Cohasset's history and the town's ocean vistas.

Goal: I would love to be able to have kids someday.

Person you'd most like to meet: This is a tough question. Today I am torn between Dwight Evans #24 Boston Red Sox (retired) or Larry Bird. (Celtics).

Dwight Evans should have had his number retired by the Red Sox. He was one of best right fielders of his time.

Biggest worry: (See embarrassing moment). I'd hate to see those tapes be made public, and make it to "America's Funniest Videos."

Best part of Cohasset: Cohasset is a beautiful Town with so much history. I enjoy eating my lunch at any point where I am in front of the water. The views are incredible. A close second is the Police Department (of course).

POLICE BEAT

Pumpkins used to smash car windows

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

Police received several reports on Friday and Saturday (Oct. 30 & 31) about vandalism to cars from pumpkins being thrown from a passing vehicle.

Scituate also had similar incidents in the Arborway area, police said.

A 63-year-old Norwell man reported a pumpkin smashed his 2003 Toyota's rear window and front windshield. The car was parked in the vicinity of 190 South Main St. and he discovered the damage at 9:07 p.m. on Friday (Oct. 30). Police said the pumpkin was thrown with such force that it broke the rear window and traveled through the inside of the car smashing the front windshield from the inside.

A 59-year-old Portland, Maine woman, who was visiting relatives on Howe Road, heard a noise at about 10:19 p.m. on Friday (Oct. 30) and came out to find the rear window of her 2003 Volkswagen Jetta smashed by a pumpkin. Neighbors reported a vehicle full of youth in the area.

A 61-year-old man from Howe Road reported a pumpkin vandalized his 2004 Honda Element. He reported the incident at 9:07 a.m. on Saturday (Oct. 31). The pumpkin did not break the rear window but damaged the side of his car, police said.

Police are investigating the incidents.

OUI arrest

Police arrested at 57-year-old Nantucket woman for drunken driving following a cell phone call from a concerned motorist about an erratic driver at 2:07 a.m. on Saturday (Oct. 31). The woman was driving a 1998 Buick, four-door sedan.

An officer, who got the call from dispatch, observed her driving 25 in a 50 mph zone. The officer pulled her over and found an open container of vodka in the car. Based on the results of a field sobriety test she was arrested and charged with operating under the influence of alcohol, failure to stay in marked lanes and having an open container of alcohol in the car.

OUI arrest

An officer was on routine patrol on Route 3A by Red Gate Lane when the cruiser's radar clocked a car traveling 81 mph in a 45 m.p.h. zone. The officer caught up with the 2008 Mitsubishi Gallant by the Hingham line on Route 3A. Based on the results of field sobriety tests the 26-year-old Weymouth woman was arrested for operating under the influence of alcohol, failure to stay in marked lanes, speeding and negligent operating of a motor vehicle.

Larceny

A 50-year-old Lamberts Lane man, whose house is in the final stages of a major renovation and has not been occupied, reported last week that Waterford crystal and stereo equipment were taken from the home sometime between Oct. 3 and Oct. 10. Detectives are investigating.

Police said the pumpkin was thrown with such force that it broke the rear window and traveled through the inside of the car smashing the front windshield from the inside.

Summons

A 21-year-old Weymouth man operating a 2006 Kawasaki motorcycle is being summonsed to court for unlicensed operation after being stopped at Ripley Road and Sohier Street on Saturday (Oct. 31) at about 7 p.m.

Police said the man had a learner's permit for a motorcycle. However the rules for a motor cycle learner's permit state there can be no passenger (he had one) and the driver cannot operate after sunset (he did).

He was able to call a friend, who is licensed, to take the motorcycle, police.

Summons

A 34-year-old Weymouth man stopped for speeding on Forest Avenue at about 1:54 a.m. on Sunday (Nov. 1) is being summonsed for operating without a license after he produced a Brazilian passport but no license, police said. He is also being charged with speeding.

Wrong address

A North Main Street resident called police after a man called her from outside her home to repossess her car. As it turned out the "repo" man soon figured out that he at the wrong address and talking to the wrong resident. He was looking for the house with that same number on South Main Street. The resident notified police about the incident at 11:12 p.m. on Monday (Oct. 26).

Items found

A walk-in to the police station, who wished to remain anonymous, turned in a toolbox with hand tools and a pair of binoculars to police at 8:34 p.m. on Tuesday (Oct. 27). He found the items in the cove area across from the Legion Hall. Police have not received any calls about the missing items.

MV crashes

• At 7:02 a.m. on Wednesday (Oct. 28), police received 9-1-1 calls reporting a three-car accident on Chief Justice Cushing Highway (Route 3A). Police said a 2001 Toyota that was headed south and was operated by a 19-year-old Scituate woman rear-ended a 1999 Toyota operated by a 26-year-old Scituate woman that was waiting to turn left into Good Sport. The 1999 Toyota then careened into the northbound land where it struck a 2003 Toyota operated by a 54-year-old Scituate woman.

Transported to the hospital with what appeared to be minor injuries were the 19-year-old woman and her two-year-old passenger in the 2001 Toyota and the 26-year-old woman in the 1999 Toyota. All cars were towed from the scene. The 19-year-old was cited for following too closely on a state highway.

• At 4:10 p.m. on Wednesday (Oct. 28), a 74-year-old Cohasset woman in a 1999 Dodge Caravan was trying to parallel park on North Main Street by the community center when she pulled too close to a parked 2009 Ford Escape and sideswiped it. A 40-year-old Cohasset woman was driving the Escape.

There were no tows, no injuries and no citations, police said.

• Police said a 21-year-old Scituate man was probably driving too fast when he was leaving the Shaw's Plaza parking lot in a 2003 Dodge Durango SUV at 8:04 a.m. on Saturday (Oct. 31). The Durango hit the curb between the Bank of America and Rockland Trust and flipped over. The SUV was towed and the driver was transported to the hospital with minor injuries, police said.

Deer hit

• A 49-year-old Cohasset woman in a 1997 Jeep Grand Cherokee hit a deer at 5:39 p.m. on Wednesday (Oct. 28) on Chief Justice Cushing Highway near Pond Street. She was headed south when the deer darted out across the road. No injuries were reported and the car was drivable, police said.

• A caller notified police at 6:42 p.m. on Wednesday (Oct. 28) that a car had hit a deer on Chief Justice Cushing Highway. The deer ran off and the operator kept driving. Police said the driver notified police when he got home and his car had minor damage. The incident took place near the train station.

• At 8:53 a.m. on Friday (Oct. 30), a motorist reported that a train had hit a deer near the North Main Street crossing. Police saw the deer on the tracks and notified the MBTA, which removed it right away.

• A 56-year-old Hull woman operating a 2005 Ford Focus reported hitting a deer near the grade crossing on Lower King Street at 2:16 a.m. on Saturday (Oct. 31). There was minor damage to her car. The deer was near the crossing, not on the tracks, and was removed by the DPW, police said.

Civil matter

A property dispute involving two people over a business in the process of closing in the village area is a civil matter, police said. The matter came to police attention last week when one of the business partners complained the other was at the location threatening her and that items were taken overnight. Police said both people had different stories. They were advised that they could seek criminal complaints in court if they chose to do so.

Road plates

Police received several complaints about metal plates on Sohier Street last week by the entrance to the Swim Center. One caller reported hearing what sounded like gunshots but police determined the plates were clanging as cars traveled over them. Two other callers complained about the plates sliding and shifting. The Water Department was notified to get someone out to fix the plates, police said.

BEFORE
I've been a member at Get In Shape For Women since February 2009. I initially joined because my friend invited me to a trial workout. I figured it would be a way for me to work out over the winter with a friend and to maybe tone up and lose a few pounds. Well since then I have lost over 18 pounds and 8% body fat and I feel great. I've also reduced my cholesterol dramatically. As a matter of fact, my doctor told me that whatever I'm doing to keep doing it because it's working!! The owner and the trainers at GISFW are wonderful. They are extremely encouraging yet they are tough on me and have been instrumental in forcing me to challenge myself to reach and also to maintain my goals. I have muscles now that I never even knew I had. I must admit too that I look forward to my workouts every week!!

Old Colony Square taking shape

from the Planning Board for the town's first — and only — transit oriented overlay district, or TOD. The mixed-use project got the green light in the fall 2007 and broke ground a year ago.

The development includes roughly 32,000 square feet of first floor retail space and there is a free-standing 3,400 building with drive-thru available. In addition to the first floor retail space are 16 residential apartments on the second floor.

Coldwell Banker has the exclusive listing agreement for the apartments at Old Colony Square. Realtor Christine Powers is the listing agent.

"The building is definitely taking shape," Powers said, describing the units as "luxury apartments."

There will be five one-bedroom units and 11 two-bedroom units. All of the apartments have at least two baths and a loft area. Power said the apartments would have open floor plans and high-end amenities like gas-lit fires, stainless steel appliances, and granite countertops. The apartments range from 1100 to 1400 square feet in size.

The residences are all located on the second floor and the loft areas are the third floor. The apartments will have a private lobby and residents will be able to park their car in a detached garage for an additional fee, Powers said.

Powers is expecting occupancy on March 1, 2010.

"We're stressing the pedestrian-friendly design, the ease of commuting into the city," Powers said, adding she has received many calls of interest on the apartments since her sign went up on Route 3A.

The monthly rent for the market-rate apartments will be between $1850 to $2400.

"We're stressing the pedestrian-friendly design, the ease of commuting into the city."
— Christine Powers, Coldwell Banker

Two of the 16 units will be deemed affordable, one one-bedroom and one two-bedroom and will be available through a lottery. MCO Housing Services is coordinating the lottery for the affordable units.

Specific information about the lottery or what the affordable monthly rent will be is not yet available.

"We have not been notified by the developer when we can move forward," said Maureen O'Hagan, director of lottery programs for MCO Housing Services.

However, O'Hagan said eligibility for the affordable units is based on income. The maximum income earned guidelines are as follows: for one-person household is $46,300; for two-person $52,950; for three-person $59,550; and for four-person $66,150. There will be two lottery pools, one solely for local preference and one at large pool (Cohasset local preference will be included in the at large pool as well).

Once MCO Housing Services gets the go-ahead from the developers there is a 60-day application period where there will be a public information meeting held as well as other outreach done in the town and schools.

"Hopefully we'll fill the units quickly," said O'Hagan.

Powers said the access to the commuter rail should attract renters, in fact, the train has attracted house hunters all over Cohasset.

"Being in real estate, we have definitely gotten more people looking at the area because of the train," Powers said. She expects the apartments to attract some young professional couples "looking to get their feet wet living in the suburbs," professionals looking to go green with a commute via rail, or even residents looking for a easy maintenance second home.

The commercial component of the Old Colony Square is still working toward getting tenants. There is 32,000 square feet of first floor retail space in the main building.

Matt Curtin of The Dartmouth Company, which is heading up the effort to lease the space, said this week one lease has been signed for the development. South Shore Athletic Club, a 12,000square foot fitness club, is expected to open in spring 2010.

Over the summer, Curtin said the developer was a prime location for service retailers, such as dry cleaners, quick serve restaurants, day spas and coffee shops.

For more information about Old Colony Square, visit www.oldcolonysquare.com. For more information about the market-rate apartments, contact Christine Powers at christinedpowers@nemoves.com. For more information on the affordable unit lottery, or to be added to the application list, contact Maureen O'Hagan at Maureen@mcohousingservices.com

H1N1 clinic slated for middle-high school students teachers and students hovered around 3 percent. This week, absences jumped to 6 percent for students and teachers.

At Deer Hill, last week absences for teachers and students hovered around 3 and 4 percent. This week, absences jumped to around 8 percent for students and went as high as 14 percent for teachers on Nov. 3.

The Middle School had the highest percentages of student absences this week going up to 13 percent on Monday and Tuesday, and 10 percent on Wednesday. For teacher absences, the percentage hovered around four percent.

The high school student absences were higher last week than this week (about 8 percent last week and 5 percent this week). Teacher absences jumped to 18 percent (seven teachers) on Wednesday.

Cohasset Mariner 'drop box'

The Cohasset Mariner has a "drop box" and pickup location at Tedeschi's in the village. The drop box is on the counter in the front window around the corner to the left after you enter the front door.

The Mariner picks up at 8 a.m. on Mondays and Tuesdays. The drop box can be used to drop off glossy photographs, letters, flyers or other editorial copy.

Special Town Meeting is Monday, Nov. 16

The Board of Selectmen approved the Special Town Meeting warrant on Monday night and sent it off to press with seven articles. Town Meeting voters will take up amendments to the fiscal 2010 operating budget (article 1), a balance transfer for the snow and ice deficits (article 2), community preservation projects (article 3), adjustment to the tax deferral limits (article 4), inclusion of military service for tax deferrals (article 5), demolition of property at 137 Hull St. (article 6), and a proposed easement to Abbott Homes (article 7).

Special Town Meeting is scheduled for Monday, Nov. 16 at 7p.m. at the high school gymnasium.

Weir River Watershed Association to meet

Weir River Watershed Association's annual meeting will take place from 7 to 9 p.m., on Thursday, Nov. 12, at the Weir River Estuary Center. The public is invited to learn about ongoing efforts to restore Straits Pond and bringing the herring back to Weir River. Food and beverages will be provided.

The Weir River Estuary Center is a joint effort of three nonprofits: Weir River Watershed Association, Hull Performing Arts and the Surfrider Foundation. The Estuary Center is available for community group use. To find out more about the Estuary Center visit the Web site at weirriver.org.

Adopt-a-street program

The Board of Health's Adopt-a-street program is looking for more participants. Families, organizations and businesses are welcome to join.

Health Inspector and program coordinator Tara Tradd has targeted additional areas of town that need a little help with litter.

Organizations, businesses, families and individuals can adopt a street, a portion of a street, park or other public place and keep it free of litter. If interested, contact program coordinator Tradd at the Board of Health office, (781) 383-4116 or by e-mail at tarat@townofcohasset.org.

KidsConcert at Scituate Library

Scituate Library Foundation will present Atlantic Symphony Orchestra's KidsConcert, a fun introduction to music, instruments that bring the music to life and the musicians who play them. The concert, which will take place at 3 p.m., on Sunday, Nov. 8, is recommended for ages 4 and older, with an adult. All tickets are $3 and will be available at the door.

In this interactive and entertaining program created for children and families, conductor Jin Kim and an octet of musicians, featuring strings, woodwinds, brass and percussion, will present a program of music and demonstration.

For more information call 781-545-8727 or consult the library Web site at scituatetownlibrary.org. The library is at 85 Branch St.

K-9 searches not OK

Split vote leaves police canines out of schools

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

The majority of the discussion centered on the possibility of trained police canines searching the school for illegal substances, like alcohol, marijuana and other drugs.

Trained police canines sniffing for banned substances like marijuana or alcohol will not be conducting any sweeps of school property in the near future.

After a lengthy discussion between the school committee, school administration, police department and members of the public on proposed changes to the Memorandum of Understanding, the school-police cooperation agreement, the school committee reached a stalemate.

Two members of the committee were against the amendments and two were in favor. Committee member Lucia Flibotte was not present at the meeting.

This was the second discussion, the first was held in June, the School Committee has had about canine searches.

High School administration and the police department have been collaborating for the past few months to come up with specific changes to the Memorandum of Understanding that they felt would strengthen the two entities' cooperation and make the schools a safer place.

"We can do a better job and this is a way to make our school safer," said Mike Gill, assistant principal of the high school.

There were three amendments to the Memorandum of Understanding suggested by the school administration and the police department. First, they wanted to establish an agreement where there would be year-round cooperation and communication between the two town departments. Second, they wanted to collaborate on a school safety plan and drug-free initiative, which may include the use of canine searches during the school year. And last, to make clear in the language the two-way reporting between the schools and the police department of reportable acts.

The majority of the discussion centered on the possibility of trained police canines searching the school for illegal substances, like alcohol, marijuana and other drugs.

School Committee member Helene Lieb cited a letter she and other committee members received after last June's initial discussion from high social studies teacher, Jack Buckley. In the letter, which Lieb read aloud excerpts, he strongly opposed the use of canine searches because, he believed, it would have a damaging effect on the positive relationship between the students and the police that currently exists. Through Buckley's "Introduction to Law" class police officers come to the school to talk about their role as law enforcers and in the community at large.

Also opposing the institution of random canine sweeps was resident Peggy Chapman of 25 Virginia Lane. As a nurse who works with adolescents she said she has had several patients who have had negative and, what she perceived as uneven, consequences following school canine searches in other school districts.

"(With the canine searches) you are bringing in the enforcer in a big way," Chapman said. "This is a line I really prefer we don't cross."

On the other side of the coin, School Committee member Paul Schubert said from a parental perspective he saw the canine searches as a good thing. "As a parent, this is a means to screen and prevent drugs and alcohol from entering our schools."

Schubert said if the searches could prevent one accident from occurring it would be worth it, adding in a public building and a school the expectation of privacy is different than on the street or in your home.

School Committee chair Adrienne MacCarthy also supported the institution of canine searches as means to help ensure all kids can learn in a safe and drug-free environment, "it is sad to think of a kid who has to think about going to the bathroom because there might be a drug deal going on in there…we're trying to make this a community for everyone."

Lieb and School Committee vice chair Alfred Slanetz, wanted more information about how the searches would be conducted and the consequences for students caught with drugs or alcohol on school property.

School administration said there had been no specific instance or spike in drug activity, but that it was present on the campus. High school assistant principal Gill said the request for canine searches were part of an overall review of the safety manual.

Gill disagreed that the canine searches would be a detriment to the relationship between the students and police.

"The same police officers coming into the building to talk to students are coming in to make this building as safe as possible," Gill said. "I think the kids would not be bothered by the canine searches, on the contrary I think they would be very interested in the process."

Lieutenant Greg Lennon said the canine searches were a way for the schools and police to be pro-active in their approach toward becoming a drug-free school.

"The way the school is handling (alcohol and drug) issues right now unfortunately is reactive because there is no a way for the schools to be proactive. We are willing to supply the tool to keep the schools drug-free and take a proactive approach in making sure no drugs are brought into the school," Lennon said. He assured the School Committee they would not be using "heavy handed tactics" and the use of canines was not a way to "menace people."

Area school districts such as Hingham, Scituate and Marshfield are already using drug-sniffing canines as a means to keep schools safe and drug-free.

When the issue came to a vote, two were for the changes to the Memorandum of Understanding (MacCarthy and Schubert) and two were against (Lieb and Slanetz).

With the split vote on the issue, no action can be taken at this time and will remain in place without the proposed amendments. The Memorandum of Understanding is an agreement between the Superintendent of Schools, with the support of the School Committee, and the Police Chief, with the support of the Board of Selectmen.

The School Committee could take up the issue in the future and re-visit their position.

Town to observe Veterans Day Nov. 11

Each year the town of Cohasset pauses on the 11th of November to remember those who have served our country.

Next week, the American Legion will hold a ceremony at the Veterans Memorial at the harbor to honor the sacrifices made by the men, women and their families on behalf of the country.

The ceremony will begin at 11a.m. this coming Wednesday and is expected to last about a half-hour. Cohasset resident and Vietnam Army veteran Francis Paradise Jr. is the keynote speaker.

The ceremony will be followed by a reception at the Legion Hall across the street from the memorial.

On Tuesday the students of Deer Hill have invited veterans to an assembly. Fifth graders have written essays and a few will read them for the assembly.

Joseph McElroy, veterans agent, sees Veterans Day as not only a day to remember those who have served, but all those who sacrifice on behalf of our nation's freedom.

"As we pause at the eleventh hour of the eleventh day of the eleventh month (WWI Armistice) to honor all veterans, living and deceased; I cannot help but think of the sacrifices of their wives, immediate and extended families and all who supported and loved them. It is our solemn duty to protect the freedom service members sacrificed to protect and assure adequate care for both the veteran and his family," McElroy said.

Forty eight year old loses 30 pounds in 5 months!

BEFORE
This has been a life changing experience for me. I was so afraid to join because I thought I was too old or too out of shape but I got the courage and went for just a "trial" workout to see how I would do. I was so afraid I would embarrass myself. Well, after the first work out I was totally hooked. I was in such poor health when I first joined (high blood pressure and cholesterol) and after my last physical my doctor told me my cholesterol was back to normal and if I kept losing weight I would be able to come off my blood pressure medication. What I love about Get In Shape is that I show up and they set the machines up, all I have to do is concentrate on my weight training and cardio. Also, having a scheduled time and day to show up is great…it is not like joining a regular health club where you just show up when you want to. I have tried that and I never had the motivation to get there on my own, I would always find some sort of excuse not to go. I have followed the nutrition plan, weight training and cardio and I can't believe the result I have had in five months. I have lost 30 lbs and I am down two clothes sizes. I have muscles I have never seen before! The trainers are all so supportive and they know how to motivate me to work my hardest to reach my goal. I love walking in to smiling faces and happy people, the atmosphere is really enjoyable and everyone you meet is so encouraging. I actually enjoy and look forward to my workout days. Thank you so much!!!

Colin Quinlan has impressive Indoor Finals season

AROUND TOWN

JENNIFER PIEPENBRINK

THANKFUL

Hello Cohasset. I hope that everyone had a fun-filled Halloween weekend last week and are now getting ready for I hate to say this but, the Holidays! Well, we still have some time thank goodness to enjoy the Fall weather and take the time to reflect on what we have in our lives. I know that I am one of the biggest ones to not be thankful for who and what I have, my family, super friends and a wonderful circle of children who make "Miss Jen" so happy each and every day. If you have the time, send me some of your "I am Thankful for…" quotes and feelings. It can help to re-direct the thought process when needed. Now, On to the news…

GO SHARKS

Come cheer on the 4th-Grade Sci-Coh Sharks this Sunday Nov. 8 as they battle the Marshfield Rams in the playoffs. The game will be held at Hingham High School and the winner will go on to the Superbowl. Don't forget to wear your blue and white. Good luck boys!

EQUESTRIAN

During the year equestrians from all over the country compete to qualify for the National Indoor Medal Finals held at prestigious horse shows in the fall. Cohasset resident, Colin Quinlan, 16, aboard his new horse, Venus, just finished an impressive Indoor Finals season.

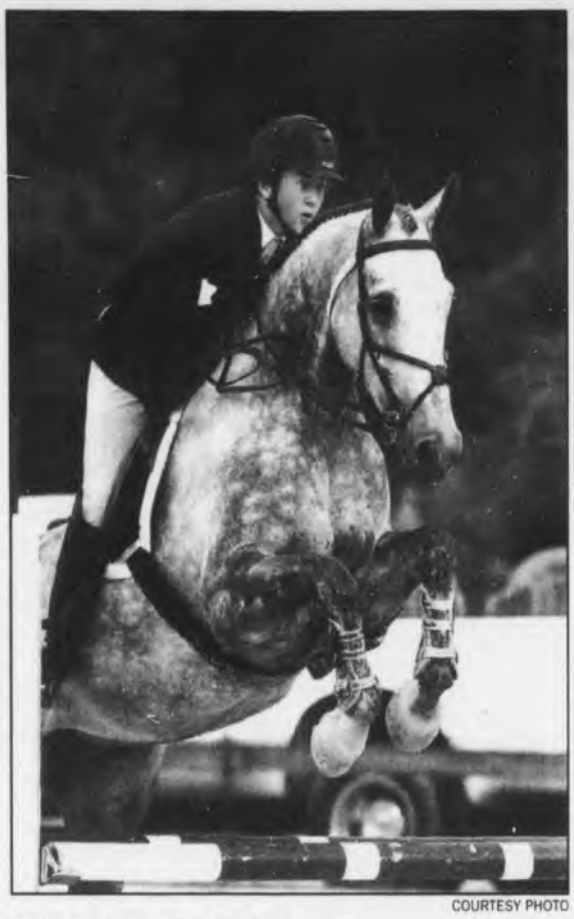
A junior rider with River Wind Farm, an established hunter/jumper show barn in Pembroke, Colin qualified for the Maclay Regionals, Massachusetts Horsemen's Council (MHC) Day of Champions, Pessoa/USEF Hunt Seat Equitation Medal Finals at the Pennsylvania National Horse Show and the New England Equitation Championships (NEEC). Highlights of Colin's season include, Reserve Champion, MHC Junior Hunt Seat Medal, 2nd NEEC Junior Hunt Seat Open Equitation, and 5th NEEC Challenge of the States.

Congratulations on a winning season.

GEORGIA TECH

Susan Curry of Cohasset made the dean's list for the 2009 spring semester at George Institute of Technology.

Undergraduate students earning a 3.0 or higher academic average for the semester gain the distinction of being named to the dean's list.



Well done!

JOB HELP

HELPING OUT

You can get out and enjoy the beautiful fall weather with family and friends and Make a Difference at the same time. This year there are 20 elders in the community looking for assistance with cold weather preparation and fall clean-up over the weekend of Nov. 14th and 15th. A two-hour commitment is needed to assist with general fall clean-up (i.e. leaves, storage of lawn furniture, etc.). Leaf bags provided. This is a wonderful opportunity to bring generations of the town together and make some new friends. If you have any questions or are interested in volunteering please contact: Patty Cunningham at 781-383-1378 or Pamela Turpel at 781-923-1199

Make sure to send all of your news and information to me no later than Tuesdays by 5 pm!

Making his way off-Broadway

Dave Ingber merges his love of sports and theatre for success

By Nancy White

COURTESY PHOTOS

Cohasset native Dave Ingber, who did the book, music and lyrics for "Fantasy Football the musical?" and Emily McNamara, who played the character of Sarah in the show, sing one of the musical numbers at a promotional event.

Dave Ingber, right, grew up in Cohasset and is now making his way in New York City theatre. He and Jeff Nathan, who played Stoner in the musical Ingber wrote, sing a duet from the show, "Man Friends."

Sports and theatre have long been passions of Cohasset native Dave Ingber.

But, leave it to the aspiring comic and writer to combine his interests and talents into an off-Broadway musical production that appealed to audiences and industry professionals alike.

In early October, "Fantasy Football the musical?" premiered as part of the New York Musical Theatre Festival. Ingber came up with the concept for the show and wrote the book, the music and the lyrics.

The musical comedy, set in New York City in 1991, tells the story of an unemployed stats geek and a small-time bookie who realize their passion for sports is keeping them from maintaining a job or a girlfriend. Combining forces, they set out to create the ultimate sports fan experience — and, in the process, pull their lives together.

The six scheduled performances of "Fantasy Football" quickly sold out and the New York Musical Theatre Festival added two more additional sold-out shows, the most allowed under festival rules.

Ingber has been in New York for the past two years making his way into show business.

After graduating from Harvard in 2007, Ingber moved to New York City, the theatre capital, to pursue his career. He had ambitions involving music and comedy, both talents he was able to develop at Harvard. At Harvard he co-founded a stand-up comedy group and was a member of the all male a cappella group, the Din and Tonics.

With a friend of his from Harvard (and his co-founder of the Harvard Comics Stand-up Society), Harrison Greenbaum, he founded a weekly stand-up comedy show at the Sage Theatre in Times Square.

From that gig, he made connections and co-wrote his first musical, "God Loves My People Best," which enjoyed a six-week run. Then, he went to Scotland to perform in "Jihad: The Musical," at Scotland's prestigious Edinburgh Fringe Festival. When he returned to New York he was one of the writers and performers for "A Political Party," a weekly comedy variety show leading up to the 2008 presidential election.

After doing all that he was looking for a new writing project to dive into and that's when he heard about the ESPN.com's Bill Simmons and Matthew Berry plans to organize a fantasy basketball league with eight fans. In order to get the chance, a person had to write a one-paragraph email stating what they would do in order to get into this league.

Ingber sent in an application saying he would write and compose an original piece of musical theater that paid homage to fantasy sports culture with Simmons and Berry as the main characters. Ingber made it to the final round, but ultimately was not chosen to be part of the fantasy league.

However, he decided to write the musical anyway and wheels that ultimately ended with "Fantasy Football the musical?" began turning.

His motivations had changed and they were three-fold. He wanted to create a piece of theater that would celebrate the world of sports fandom he was proud to be a part of, he wanted to invite sports fans who do not consider themselves "theater-goers" to a show they would legitimately be excited about, and he wanted to introduce many in the theater world to the reasons why being a sports fan is just so fantastic.

He wrote a script and applied for inclusion in the New York Musical Theatre Festival. His script was chosen out to be one of the 30 musicals out of over 800 applications.

The musical, which takes place in 1991, draws on the influences of that era. One of the characters is a hardcore hip-hop artist struggling to get his career off the ground.

"I definitely listened to early 90s music to prepare," Ingber said. He wrote the book, music and lyrics, but did have some help. He wrote the lyrics and basic compositions on his guitar and piano. Then, assistant music director, Alvin Hough Jr., transferred them to full arrangements and music director, Brian Usifer, made them full orchestra scores.

Given the lean budget – the whole production was put on with $15,000 – the set was sparse.

"I think it gave the show some of its charm to have a bare bones set," Ingber said, and added to the humor of the whole experience.

Ingber describes the musical as a "bromantic comedy," which plays on the unique type of love men share for their best buddies.

"It's humor that I grew up with hanging out with my friends…it's everyman humor, the back and forth that happens between friends," Ingber said. Some of the comedy plays to the fact the characters are in 1991 and are completely unaware of what's possible in 2009. For example, one of the characters asks "what if we put fantasy football on the internet?"

The plot centers on Matthew Berry, who is just out of college and struggling to find work. Despite a comprehensive knowledge of sports statistics and a reputation for being the greatest sports journalist his college had ever seen, it was not enough to land his dream job as Sportscenter anchor on ESPN.

Meanwhile, Berry's old pal Bill Simmons is running a small, underground gambling operation, but it is too small to keep up with the changing gambling times. The two pair up to put their lives back together when they stumble upon the idea for fantasy football, "the ultimate sports fan experience."

One of the most rewarding parts of the project, he said, has been the aftermath.

"Everyone who took part is pretty young and in the beginning stages of his or her career and it's been great to see some of them start to blow up a little bit," Ingber said. One of his cast members has since landed a part on "30 Rock" and another on "Rescue Me." The music director is headed on the national tour of "Dreamgirls."

"I think it was a terrific experience for almost everyone involved," Ingber said.

Participation in the New York Musical Theatre Festival was an "amazing privilege" to be a part of, Ingber said.

"In New York where there is a theatre every 30-feet, it's hard to get producers to come and see a show. (The festival) adds a layer of legitimacy and makes it a little more attractive for producers to come."

The festival also generates all sorts of press and media attention.

The show was a favorite among theatre-goers, viewers were encouraged to vote online for their favorite show of the festival, and of the 30 musicals, "Fantasy Football" was the runner-up for the "Best of the Fest" prize.

"We were thrilled when we got the news," Ingber said.

As for Ingber, he is revising the "Fantasy Football" script and hoping to parlay its initial Festival success into something more. He's going to focus on theatre for now, but hopes to get back into stand-up comedy down the line.

In an ironic twist, Ingber was so busy with rehearsals and rewrites of "Fantasy Football The Musical?" he was not able to put together a team for fantasy football. He wasn't going to let two fantasy seasons pass him by — last week he was preparing for his fantasy basketball league.

"Fantasy Football the musical?" publicity photo includes the stars of the musical Ben Steinfeld (left), who played Matthew Berry, and Nick Spangler, who played Bill Simmons and some might recognize him as the as the winner of CBS' "The Amazing Race."

'Enlighten Up' at special screening

Movie shows one man's yoga journey of discovery

By Linda Fechter
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

"It is one man's journey on what yoga can really can and will do for you!"
— Kellie Lynch, owner, Balance Studio

On Friday, Nov.13th the Balance Studio Cohasset is offering a private screening of the new film, "Enlighten Up," one man's yoga journey of discovery. This movie is for anyone who is interested in the benefits of yoga, and promises to inspire even the biggest skeptic to give it a try for themselves. It's for those for whom "Namaste" is a weekly utterance and for those who think yoga is something only done by women. It's a film for men and women of all ages who wonder what all the yoga "buzz" is truly all about.

"This film is perfect for someone who now practices yoga and for the person who is not sure what yoga is all about. It is one man's journey on what yoga can really can and will do for you!" says Kellie Lynch, owner, Balance Studio Cohasset.

According to the movie website.. "Filmmaker Kate Churchill is determined to prove that yoga can transform anyone. Nick Rosen is skeptical but agrees to be her guinea pig. Kate immerses Nick in yoga, and follows him around the world as he examines the good, the bad and the ugly of yoga. The two encounter celebrity yogis, true believers, kooks and world-renowned gurus. Tensions run high as Nick's transformational progress lags and Kate's plan crumbles. What unfolds and what they discover is not what they expected."

Seating is limited to 70. Doors open at 6:30. Movie begins at 7 p.m. Admission is $10 and will include a glass of wine and light hors d'oeuvres. Call (339) 337-3660 for more information or visit: www.balancestudiocohasset.com.

Derby Academy has 'a very important date'

Derby Academy's sixth grade students will showcase their production of Disney's, "Alice in Wonderland Junior" at 4 p.m., on Sunday, Nov. 15, in Larson Hall. Admission is free with a suggested donation of $5. All funds raised at this show will be donated to the Cradles to Crayons program in Quincy.

The play was chosen because of the innovative script, updated music and theme of self-discovery, which is particularly appropriate for middle school students. "Throughout the play, Alice is struggling to discover who she is and to understand how she relates to her world," said Thalia McMillion, drama teacher at Derby Academy. "Alice is a polite girl, but has a strong personality and a lot of spunk. She's extremely curious, which often gets her into trouble." The production also provides numerous roles for the students, allowing each one to have ample stage time.

Artistically, this play also presented a creative challenge for the set designers and their classes. Under the direction of teachers Adam Norcott and Nancy Donovan, a team of seventh and eighth grade students helped create the elaborate set.

For more information, call 781-749-0746 or visit the Web site at derbyacademy.org.

Derby Academy's production of Disney's "Alice in Wonderland Junior" is presented through special arrangement with and all authorized performance materials are supplied by Music Theatre International, 421 West 54th St., New York, NY 10019. Music and lyrics by Sammy Fain and Bob Hilliard, Oliver Wallace and Cy Coban, Allie Wrubel and Ray Gilbert, Mack David, Al Hoffman and Jerry Livingston. Music adapted and arranged and additional music and lyrics by Bryan Louiselle. Book adapted and additional lyrics by David Simpatico. Based on the 1951 Disney film, "Alice in Wonderland" and the novels "The Adventures of Alice in Wonderland" and "Through the Looking Glass" by Lewis Carroll.

Small town is good fit for Messina

Director of Student Services gets to know schools, Cohasset

By Nancy White

As the director of student services Denise Messina is in charge of overseeing the special education issues throughout the district.

Each school day Denise Messina, Ph.D., the new director of student services for Cohasset Public Schools, begins and ends with one of the most scenic drives in all of New England: the drive along Jerusalem Road.

It is one of the many reasons Messina is finding it easy to call Cohasset and the South Shore her new home.

As the director of student services Messina is in charge of overseeing the special education issues, individual education plans of almost 175 students throughout the district, as well as adjunct services like tutoring, civil rights and other unique situations where students need support.

Being new to the school and the area, Messina is in the "get to know you stage" with the students, parents and staff as well as the area's resources.

She's been making trips to all three schools in the district as well as familiarizing herself with schools, such as the South Shore Collaborative, where some of Cohasset's students attend when they need more support than the district can provide in-house.

Messina comes to Cohasset from another small school district in Massachusetts in the town of Monson, which is located in Western Massachusetts near Springfield. For three years she held a similar position as the director of pupil services. Before Monson she worked for 15 years in the Springfield Public Schools in a variety of positions related to special education.

The move to a similarly sized district as Monson was a goal of her, and the South Shore was a destination, an area she fell in love with when touring the Boston Harbor Islands.

"I feel very effective (in a small district). I like to be hands-on and really get to know the students, the parents and the community. The direct contact suits me and it's what I'm best at."

The cornerstone of Messina's philosophy is inclusion and it applies in particular to special education, but also as a general rule.

"It's not so much a belief, it's the law to provide a free and appropriate education in the least restrictive environment" and the default position for that environment is inclusion in the regular education classroom, said Messina.

Inclusion for Messina isn't just about what goes on in the schools, but an overall community effort to be partners in inclusion.

"Every student brings attitudes and relationships from the community into the classroom and vice versa," she said.

As the director of student services she is the decision-making authority for the delivery of special education services and she has been spending a lot of times in meetings with parents and staff to get to know the issues facing students and the school district.

One of her goals is to improve communication, build a relationship of trust and respect between the community, parents and student services. "I want to work collaboratively."

One of the groups she has been getting to know is the Parent Advisory Council (PAC), a parent-group dedicated to special education issues and serves as an advisory board to the director of student services.

"The Parent Advisory Council is looking forward to not so much a fresh start but a re-focus of the importance of our community supporting a child-centered inclusive education. Inclusive education means that all students, regardless of their strengths or weaknesses in any area, become part of the school community," Sue Mavilia, chairperson of the Cohasset PAC, said.

Mavilia said she and the PAC have met with Messina several times since the start of school, "I sense that with the experience, background and philosophy she brings to the table – she will be instrumental in building a stronger relationship between the parents and the school in regards our children's education."

In addition to years of experience in special education, Messina is also a trained mediator and has relevant experience in supporting equity and disenfranchised populations. She also brings a personal perspective to her job because she has family members with disabilities.

Messina said that special education is "a complicated world" where laws are changing constantly. In spite of that, she has noticed parents are better educated on the issues surrounding special education.

"They come to the table much more informed of their rights and what their child needs. It's a really good thing. Parents always come with the child's best interest at heart and they have knowledge of their child that's important to bring to the table," Messina said.

As is the case at all levels of the school district and throughout the town budget challenges are here and are still ahead.

"All school districts have the challenge to provide, according to the law, the best education to all students with resources that continue to be limited," Messina said. With all special education costs there is always the unknown and the unpredictable.

"We can budget for what we know, but we can't budget for what we don't know. We always know there's stuff we don't know…there will be needs not identified yet," Messina said.

Finding the balance between the fiscal needs and the special education need of a school district is no easy job. For her work in finding that balance and re-vitalizing the PAC in Monson, Messina was awarded with The Federation for Children with Special Needs 2009 Community Partnership Awards.

"I think I am well-matched for what the district needs now," Messina said. "It feels like I could grow roots here very easily…I love being here."

Get involved in the PAC

The Parent Advisory Council holds a variety of presentations and workshops for parents and professionals throughout the school year. Here is a list of some of the upcoming events:

• Cohasset PAC Workshop: Understanding My Child's Learning Style

Tuesday, Nov. 3, 7:30 p.m., Osgood School Library. Presented by Melody Stowe. The different ways people take in and generate information can greatly affect how and whether they succeed in school and in life. This workshop will delve into different learning styles and show how they can be understood and harnessed to achieve success in many different environments, including the classroom.

• Red Flags for Struggling Readers

Wednesday, Nov. 4, 6:30 to 8:45 p.m., Hingham Public Library, the Whiton Room. Presented by Pam Hook, President of the Massachusetts Branch of the International Dyslexia Association and Dr. Sasha Yampolsky, certified speech-language pathologist and licensed literacy specialist. This lecture focusing on the important topic of Early Intervention for Struggling Readers and the common symptoms observed in children who may struggle to learn to read. The lecture is appropriate for professionals and parents.

• Cohasset PAC Workshop: True Colors

Tuesday, Dec. 1, 7:30 p.m., Osgood School Library. Presented by Barbara Popper. The True Colors mission is to enhance the way we live, work, communicate and interact with those around us. "True Colors," is an exercise that will help you learn about your individual communication style and understand how people with differing styles interact. In away this is a method of helping individuals find their own learning styles.

Coffee with the Authors

Buttonwood Books & Toys will host its semiannual event, "Coffee with the Authors," from 9:45 to 11:30 a.m., on Tuesday, Nov. 10, at Atlantica Restaurant, Cohasset. Attendees can enjoy a continental breakfast while two contemporary authors discuss their work. Authors are Brunonia Barry and Hallie Ephron.

Barry is the author of "The Lace Reader," a New York Times bestseller about an enigmatic Salem family who can foretell the future in patterns of lace. The other author, Hallie Ephron, will discuss her book, "The Bibliophile's Devotional," a resource for book lovers. It is filled with a year's selection of books. The collection is packed with intriguing opening lines, concise plot summaries and expert insight.

Reservations and tickets, at $16 per person, are required. Call Buttonwood at 781-383-2665 to reserve seats or order a signed copy if unable to attend.

Joe Micarelli has been teaching piano and vocal coaching at his Crow Point home in Hingham for 18 years. He is also a familiar figure in Cohasset where he plays the keyboard at French Memories with Cohasset vocalist/blues-harpist, J Place.

Music business is booming

Micarelli says job is recession-proof

By Matt whorf
CORRESPONDENT

In recent months, you might have spotted the occasional in-depth news story or internet posting about Recession-Proof Jobs.

Recession-Proof Jobs might even be something of a buzz-term these days. The jobs usually range from Computer and Network Systems Analysts and Administrators and Data Communications Analysts to Registered Nurses, according to such media sources as Time and Forbes Magazines.

But it's unlikely even Time or Forbes ever considered private work-from-home music lessons in its job-market surveys.

Pianist/keyboardist Joe Micarelli of Hingham is a long-time professional musician who has also been teaching piano and vocal coaching at his Crow Point home for 18 years. But as true in bucking the recession for an occupation as any, business for Micarelli has never been better since he launched his home based second career in 1991.

The pianist/instructor currently handles a full docket of 36 students per week, juggling half-hour lesson slots for his mostly youngster clientele over some 30 hours per week, Monday through Saturday.

"I'm very pleased with the response from the community and the local area outside Hingham," said Micarelli in his home kitchen, a few feet away from the elegant Steinway Grand piano where he hosts his students.

"I would guess that I'm fulfilling a certain need in the community with a unique type of service," Micarelli added.

Micarelli has lived in Hingham for more than 20 years, and been a professional musician for more than 30 years. He's familiar to many throughout the South Shore as a co-founding member of The Fat City Band, the long-running rock 'n' roll/blues/R&B ensemble which since the mid-1970s has become one of the best-known, hard-working, good-time bar bands in the Boston area.

With the Fat City Band, Micarelli opened for Ray Charles, B.B. King and James Brown among many others, and appeared on studio albums produced by famed New Orleans pianist and songwriter Allen Toussaint, and Steely Dan guitarist Elliot Randall (of "Reelin' In the Years" fame). Additionally, his original song, "Mad Money," was played for a national audience by Fat City on comedian David Brenner's cable-network talk show.

Currently, among other gigs, Micarelli performs a mix of blues, soul, New Orleans R&B and standards with Cohasset vocalist/blues-harpist J Place and Hull drummer John Litwin in the Drift Away Trio, and in the Red Parrot Jazz Brunch with the Joe Micarelli Jazz Trio each Sunday, 10:30 a.m. to 2 p.m., on Nantasket Beach in Hull.

Micarelli draws a different sort of satisfaction from his home private lessons business. He notes that his student roster leans heavily to younger kids — age 6 to 16 — with a few adults and retirees, as well as to Hingham residents, with others from Scituate and Cohasset.

"When people in the community find out you can be a positive influence on their kids, they respond to that well," said Micarelli.

"For my part, I get a chance to help in the raising of kids in the community, to contribute to their development. In this line of work, I think you have to know how to support your students, and send them out feeling confident, better than they felt when they came in," Micarelli said.

The keyboard master adds these words of caution, however.

"I have to be honest with my students — both kids and adults — and let them know that learning music takes work. Music can be a pleasant diversion, but students have to deal with the rigors of learning and they're going to need patience. The hard work is going to come at them, and I like to warn my students about that right off the bat, so that they're not shocked by it when it happens," Micarelli said.

Micarelli also noted that his private lessons service has always been steady for 18 years, building slowly but surely through word-of-mouth. But he added that "this summer, it's really gone gangbusters," despite, or perhaps because of, the current economics.

Said Micarelli, "It's a very reaffirming thing to know that the community has supported this service like it has. It says a lot about them."

"When people in the community find out you can be a positive influence on their kids, they respond to that well."
— Joe Micarelli, musician

OPINION

EDITORIAL

Carpool please!

Winning high school athletic teams can pull a community together like almost nothing else can.

The undefeated CHS football Skippers and the undefeated Abington Green Wave are bound to draw a ton of fans to tonight's game on Alumni Field under the lights.

Estimates are that as many as 2500-3000 people may attend. Adding to the excitement, Fox 25 News is also going to be there, featuring Cohasset versus Abington as the game of the week.

However, our middle-high school does not have the parking capacity for all those fans. In fact, there are only about 250 parking spaces at CMHS.

Therefore, Cohasset Police are wisely requesting that people carpool or be dropped off at tonight's game.

"Parking is extremely limited," Chief Brian Noonan said. "We are encouraging people to do what they can to carpool or be dropped off."

On-street parking will be allowed on the high school side of Pond Street and on one side of some area streets, as signage will indicate.

Police plan to keep the horseshoe-shaped driveway in front of the high school on Pond Street operational for drop-offs.

"We hope we do not have to tow cars," Noonan said. "But if cars are blocking driveways or are parked on private property – we will have to have cars towed."

Police will not be using Milliken Field for overflow parking. Noonan explained that Milliken Field is the designated landing area for MedFlight and needs to be kept open should there be an emergency such as a serious car accident. Police and fire, which must be mindful of the big picture should there be a robbery, heart attack or other incident in town, also need unfettered access to Route 3A.

Fans – including faculty, students, players and their friends and family – all want to be able to enjoy the game.

Nothing can wreck a night out more than parking hassles or traffic gridlock.

We encourage all to attend tonight's game and support the Skippers! But arrive early, be patient, and be respectful of other people's property.

It's a big night for Cohasset.

Go Blue!

Signs around town are showing town-wide spirit for tonight's game. However, parking is going to be a problem so fans are encouraged to carpool or be dropped off.

POLL QUESTION

Meetinghouse Pond it is

The pond on Cohasset Common is officially named "Meetinghouse Pond." But in our travels in and about Cohasset we rarely hear it referred to as such. We've heard a variety of different names — Duck Pond, Pond on the Common, even Frog Pond.

With discussion about renovating the pond we thought it would be fun to ask readers what they would name the pond, if given the chance. We offered readers some names to choose from (see pie chart), but we also left an "other" option for open-ended answers.

Readers came up with some interesting ideas for a new name for the pond: Muskrat Pond, Liberty Pond, Towle House Pond, Cohasset Common Pond, Skippers Pond, Kettle Pond, T-POCC (The Pond on Cohasset Common), Hero's Pond (for those who have served our nation in time of war), Village Fountain, Bob, Loch Ness and Car Pond.

We received a total of 92 votes during our two-week poll.

Local historian and town archivist David Wadsworth commented:

Why are you even running a contest for something that already has a firm answer? The historic name of the pond at the Common is Meetinghouse Pond. That's the name in the official records of the Dept. of the Interior's National Register of Historic Places maintained by the National Park Service. Duck Pond certainly is inappropriate since it is ducks that do the damage to the pond by fouling its waters and its bottom and "frog pond" is laughable.

Let's keep the names of our town's historic assets (and the pond is one of them; a natural glacial punchbowl in the Common Historic District) dignified and appropriate to the historic aspects of our unique Town Common. The name "Meetinghouse" refers to the historic precinct and town hall of 1747 in which governmental business and community activities were carried on. That Meetinghouse still exists, and is one of the finest examples of an early Georgian or Colonial Meetinghouses to be found in this historic area.

MAKING TRACKS

TOM GRUBER & MARK BRENNAN

Paving – You probably wouldn't believe the roller coaster ride we've been on as we try to get the Common paving going. We made arrangements with the paving contractor to give us three full days of paving for this week. This would consist of Wednesday, Thursday and Friday, Nov. 4th through the 6th. We did a Connect CTY phone message to alert all residents in the area that will be affected, coordinated with the Police Department, had the Common marked as "No Parking," sent flyers to the churches on the Common as well as the Community Center, Elder Affairs and the Carriage House Nursery School. We probably failed to mention a few others, but you get the idea. There are a lot of homes and organizations to be notified within this busy hub of our town.

And, oh yes, we had to get a local contractor to do some last minute work that couldn't be done until immediately before paving. So what happened? The paving contractor called us mid-day on Tuesday with the delightful message that they would be detained at their present job and won't grace us with their presence until mid-day on Wednesday rather than 7 a.m. Poof! There goes four hours, or more, of paving time. Couple this with the fact that, as of mid-week, the weather forecast for Thursday and Friday is starting to look not so good.

As we have said before, we will all know how successful the paving activities have been by the time you open your mailbox to read this article. Let's hope that Thursday and Friday turned out to be very productive days for paving. But, we'll see!

Would Someone Please Pave Me!

...one of the biggest hold-ups has been the State job repaving Route 228 in Hingham. That's where our paving contractor has been this week.

Roads currently ready for paving are: all roads around the Common, North Main St. north to Red Gate Lane, Redgate and Fernway, the Logan estate off of Jerusalem and two driveways, one on either side of the Logan Estate, Joy Place and Gammons, Keene Way and Sandy Beach Lane. This constitutes our current "hit list." Beyond this, we'd like to pave the side roads off of Atlantic between Whitehead and Hobart before the snow flies.

While we are on the topic of paving, there a bit more information we'd like to share with you. We get a few calls, email and letters from residents who ask about some of the other main roads around town. Jerusalem Road, Atlantic Ave. and Beach Street seem to be high on quite a few lists. The news is that it will be physically impossible to pave these roads with a shiny new asphalt surface before the asphalt plants close around Thanksgiving.

The facts be known, we have asked the paver to be here at least one day a week since early May. You have seen the paving time we have actually received. There just is more paving work than the contractor can get done. In fact, one of the biggest hold-ups has been the State job repaving Route 228 in Hingham. That's where our paving contractor has been this week. To put this into perspective, you can't blame the paving contractor for the delays. Remember the rainy weather we had in June? That just caused paving jobs to create a huge backlog of paving that has to be worked off.

Getting back to the roads that won't be paved, we are trying to do remedial work to improve them. We would like to do enough work to get rid of the major potholes and smooth out the roughest parts. Local contractors will be called upon do the pothole remediation and we hope to get the paving contractor do an overlay on the worst spots of these roads. We will be walking the entire length of the roughest roads and marking the spots where we would benefit from an overlay. (An overlay is a thin coat of asphalt that will have limited life, but will be serviceable enough to carry us through the winter.) We are also going to ask the gas company to revisit their trenches and add asphalt to level them up a bit. Remember, on this project the Greenbush Guys are really working for the DPW and their main winter worry is snow plowing and the condition of our roads. So, it is our main worry as well.

COMMENTARY

BROOKE ALLEN

As your kids are starting to settle in to the new school year, new shoes are getting a little dirty, the refrigerator door starts to fill up with drawings and schoolwork again, and your family dinners now revolve around the latest activity in Ms. Owens-Rigby's classroom (rather than the new butterflies at the Carriage House), it hits you: my child is really growing up!

Now, you're probably thinking, what do I know about any of this? After all, I'm a 21-year-old college student, right? Well, yes, I am...But, I'm also a product of the Cohasset Public School System. I have lived in Cohasset my entire life (well, up until three years ago, when I found a second home in Easton at Stonehill College where I am now a senior). I attended K-12 in Cohasset: starting at the Joseph Osgood School, back when we had classes where the town library now stands (and we had the playground of every child's dream), then to the Deer Hill, which seemed quite frightening at the time even though it was a one-floor square building, and finishing up at the Middle/High School, where we officially became Skippers.

Why am I telling you all of this? Well, it hasn't been until recently, that I have realized how lucky I was to have such an education.

Why am I telling you all of this? Well, it hasn't been until recently, that I have realized how lucky I was to have such an education. Here at Stonehill, I am studying psychology and early childhood education, and although the million-dollar question of what I will do when I graduate remains to be unanswered, I can say that I have learned a lot about one of my passions: children. I am currently taking a course titled "Reading: Theory and Instruction," and it has forced me to reflect on my years at Osgood, where I undoubtedly learned the "Golden Rules," and most importantly, how to read. It's something we all take for granted, right? The fact that we can read is expected, and we expect it (at an ever increasingly early age) of our children. But, why? What's so important about reading anyway? Well, as a graduate of Ms. Owens' class (back when she taught third grade), I am here to tell you.

Been to Buttonwood Books recently? Well, it's time to go again. I highly recommend picking up a copy of Jim Trelease's book, "The Read-Aloud Handbook," which summarizes the latest research in the benefits of reading aloud, and invites parents, teachers, and children to engage in the reading process. Children who are exposed to language are at a huge advantage, as it conditions children to associate reading with pleasure. Reading aloud increases children's background vocabulary, which will help them in later years of schooling.

Trelease explains that children first develop a listening vocabulary when they are very young, which transforms into a speaking vocabulary, then a writing vocabulary, and finally into a reading vocabulary, which helps children bring meaning to print. Psychologist Edward Thorndike studied frequently occurring words in the English language, with the conclusion that "the" is the most common word in the English language, causing it be recognized by sight by early readers. In order to expand and acquire a new core of words, we must read aloud to our children. Hearing enriched vocabulary, rather than controlled monotonous vocabulary, is what fosters reading in the early ages.

So, make reading a habit in your home. And do it yourself, too. After all, children learn best through modeling. If your child sees you reading a book, the newspaper, or even a magazine, they will begin to develop the basic skills necessary for reading (i.e. page-turning left to right), and will maybe even be more likely to bring a book with them in the bathroom the next time in order to be more like you!

Probably one of the most staggering facts I learned from Trelease's book was the fact that the average child spends 900 hours a year in school, and 7,800 hours outside of school. That's a pretty significant amount of time at home spent with the family. And, children are sponges, soaking up more and more little pieces of new knowledge every day. It is during these 7,800 hours a year that parents must plant the seeds of reading and school success. It's never too early to start reading aloud to your children. By providing an environment conducive to learning and reading, you will be fostering a generation of life-long readers.

Take a page out of Trelease's book, and take my advice on this one. Your child will thank you when they're 21, a college student, and doing their homework for their reading class at Stonehill. (Hint: Thanks Mom and Dad.)

Concerned about hearing loss

VETERANS

JOE MCELROY

At the Oct. 24th Veterans' Forum, the single subject of most concern to veterans was hearing loss.

This came as no surprise because hearing loss and tinnitus (ringing in the ears) are the most common medical complaints of veterans nationwide. There is an obvious reason: until relatively recently, protective "mufflers" were not available. So, older veterans were lucky if they had time to insert cotton balls or small rags in their ears before the advent of explosions, gunfire and extreme noises in vessel engine rooms, tanks and so forth.

There is an obvious reason: until relatively recently, protective "mufflers" were not available.

The Boston Veterans' Administration Health Care (VAHC) System realizes that exposure to extreme noises while in the line of duty is commonplace. Even with improved protective hearing devices, service members do not always have the reaction time to put them on; or, they may interfere with communications to nearby comrades in life or death situations.

As a result, the Boston VAHC System issues free hearing aides to veterans who take audiology tests and qualify based on the test results. However, the veteran must first be a member of the VAHC System.

Approximately 95 percent of veterans who served on active duty qualify to be a member of the VAHC System. Every veteran should apply to be a member.

If you want more information, contact Joe McElroy, Cohasset Director of Veterans' Services at 781-383-0505 or e-mail cohjoe@aol.com.

POLITICAL CORNER

Rallying behind the Republicans

All interested voters are welcome to the November HRTC meeting to be held at the Holiday Inn, Rockland in the Boardroom from 6 to 7 p.m. Tuesday, Nov. 10. Never been active with the HRTC before, but you're tired of the business as usual on Beacon Hill and Capitol Hill? Find out what they are all about.

Current regular and associate members should make a special effort to attend, since there will be short, but important business to attend to regarding the upcoming 2010 Massachusetts Republican Convention in April.

This is a brief meeting before the Plymouth County GOP "2010 Revolution Begins Here" Rally. Join the enthusiastic rally crowd from Hingham. Contact Lynne at chair_HRTC@yahoo.com for more information.

Register to vote for Special Town Meeting

Friday, Nov. 6, will be the last day to register to vote for the Special Town Meeting on Nov. 16. Registration will take place in the Town Clerk's office from 8:30 a.m. to 8 p.m.

Any citizen of the United States who is a Massachusetts resident and who will be 18 years old on or before a town meeting or Election Day may register to vote. There is no waiting period to be eligible to register to vote. If people move, they may register to vote as soon as they move into their new home. Registration is closed for a brief period before each town meeting and election to allow election officials time to prepare the voting lists. If people register during a "closed" period, they will be eligible to vote only in later town meetings or elections.

CEF embarks on fundraising campaign

Two new language labs at CMHS is the goal

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

It's the largest project ever undertaken by the Cohasset Education Foundation. And, if successful, the Cohasset Middle High School would be the recipient of two new state-of-the-art language labs.

The current language lab, which is shared between the middle school and the high school, was installed 16 years ago with the help of CEF funding.

"(The language lab) has been well-used over the years and is now very much outdated. For example, it relies on cassette tapes and has not digital capabilities whatsoever," said Beth Marat, a French teacher at Cohasset High and one of the teachers involved in the CEF grant application.

The goal is to raise $223,000 for the purchase and installation of two new language labs and the CEF plans to focus its fundraising efforts on this project for the next year. The CEF is a non-profit dedicated to raising funds to support the Cohasset public schools. This is the first time in CEF history where organization has agreed to raise money for a specific project and part of the reason is the significant cost.

The CEF looks to support grant requests that have enduring value for the school district, are in keeping with Cohasset's system-wide goals, and impact a significant number of students. According to CEF Vice President Mary McGoldrick, the language lab is a perfect fit for the organization.

"The primary mission for the CEF is to support, enhance, enrich and maintain excellence in Cohasset schools in ways the (operational) budget cannot," McGoldrick said.

Middle-High School Principal Joel Antolini said the language lab would be an asset for both the school and its students.

"We certainly need it, that's for sure," he said. Right now, the language lab is light years behind current technology and is prone to mechanical problems, Antolini said. The current lab uses cassettes, old monitors, and dated audio technology, much of which does not work properly.

"It's tough to keep things going," he said.

Despite the mechanical problems virtually every student at the Middle School and the High School (about 750) uses the current language lab. Foreign language was expanded to the sixth grade at the start of the 2008-2009 school year.

A new language lab opens up opportunities for instruction currently not possible, Marat explained.

"We are proposing to replace the current lab with an entirely digital, software based language lab system," Marat said. Antolini, Marat and other members of the language department talked to various vendors and visited area schools with new language labs to get a sense of the technology available.

The current language lab is located across from the auditorium and one of the new labs would be located there as well. Antolini said there is currently a vacant classroom where the middle school language lab could be installed. The CEF's plan is install the high school lab once enough money is raised and to reuse the current lab's furniture for the middle school language lab.

One of the advantages of a digital language lab is differentiated instruction. Right now, "every student hears/sees exactly the same thing at the same time…It is not possible for students to control the material independently or work at their own pace or on the things that will most benefit them specifically," Marat said.

Another one of the drawbacks of the current language lab is the students can communicate with each other, only with the teacher or on their own into a recording.

"A properly equipped language lab enhances instruction in a number of ways. For example, it enables the teacher to expose students to a variety of native speakers using the language in a multitude of culturally appropriate situations," Marat said, adding this is more effective than having only one fluent speaker, the teacher, in a classroom.

A new language lab would have the capability to digitally record students speaking at the same time, or pair up students to simulate a phone conversation.

"Students get a much greater amount of speaking practice than in a traditional classroom," Marat said.

The software-based lab is a more flexible technology – the schools would have the option of augmenting the lab with additional software that could even allow students to work on languages not currently offered at the school.

The 30 stations in each language lab will have computer and recording capabilities where students can interact with a variety of audio-visual material, including video clips, songs, podcasts, reading and writing activities, and listening and speaking activities, Marat said.

This particular lab – the SANAKO Digital Lab 300 – has been installed in about seven area high schools, including Scituate, Braintree, Marshfield, Carver, Dover-Sherborn, Pembroke and BC High.

"We love to offer our students the opportunity to do the same thing, or more, than students in other school districts," Antolini said. Language labs are a means to facilitate a global perspective and 21st century learning, two of the cornerstones of the Cohasset schools curriculum. "It's extremely important for our students."

In the last three years, the CEF has donated more than $280,000 to the schools through grants. Large grants included the STEM (science, technology, engineering, and math) lab at Deer Hill, at the middle school the CEF teamed up with the PSO to construct an technology/engineering lab, and Virtual High School, now part of the high school curriculum and budget, got its start with a CEF grant.

"We are thrilled that the CEF is taking this initiative and that the public is taking interest in the importance of language and culture training to prepare students for the future," Marat said.

Subcommittee to meet with paraprofessionals

The paraprofessionals will get some time in front of a School Committee subcommittee to address their questions and concerns. A finance and budget subcommittee will convene to discuss their issues, as well as other budget issues facing the schools in the current fiscal year and next.

A paraprofessional at Deer Hill School, Collette McElhinney, wrote to the school committee two weeks ago asking to come before them to discuss the recent pay cut to the paraprofessionals, a non-union group of employees.

"I talked with her at great length about her concerns, their concerns," School Committee chair Adrienne MacCarthy said. MacCarthy also said she talked with school counsel to see where the committee should go with the issue.

In September the paraprofessionals, a small group of employees that provides support to teachers and students, particularly special education students, during the school day, were shifted from salaried to hourly employees.

The payroll adjustment resulted in a significant loss of pay and a change to benefits.

"We have a big budget coming up and cuts that are going to affect this year's budget," MacCarthy said.

MacCarthy suggested the sub-committee meeting would be a good place for the paraprofessionals to air the concerns. "They really want to be heard and articulate their jobs…it would be a healthy discussion to have."

School Committee member Paul Schubert, who is appointed to the budget and finance sub-committee, said the request was "reasonable."

Alfred Slanetz, vice chair of the School Committee and the second member of the budget and finance sub-committee, said he wanted to make sure that no staff is lost in the upcoming year. At the subcommittee meeting, he said they could also begin talking about next year's budget and planning going forward.

MacCarthy said it was important the communication goes two ways.

When reached on Thursday morning, McElhinney said she was pleased they would have the chance to speak to the School Committee in a public forum.

"I'm happy that they did that," McElhinney said. "I'll get a group together to attend."

The budget and finance sub-committee meeting has been scheduled for Tuesday, Nov. 17 at 7p.m. at the community meeting room at the high school.

THE HOUSE AND SENATE. BHRC records local representatives' votes on three roll calls from the week of October 26-30. There were no roll calls in the Senate last week.

RETAIN AFFORDABLE HOUSING (H 4298)

House 153-0, approved a bill that would require owners of "expiring use" affordable housing to notify a tenant at least two years before bringing a unit's rent back to market rates. Expiring use affordable housing was built or renovated by private developers with the help of federal money in exchange for the developers' guarantee that a percentage of the units would be affordable for the life of the federally subsidized mortgage.

The U.S. Congress many years ago instituted a law allowing the owners of these buildings to pre-pay their mortgages and end their obligation to keep a percentage of the units affordable. Now thousands of these building have 30 and 40 year mortgages that will be paid off in the next few years and their owners will be allowed to convert the units to market rates.

Another key provision of the legislation offers some protections to tenants including a cap on how much the rent can be raised during the first three years following the changeover to market rates. The measure also gives the state the right of first refusal to purchase the property at the current appraised value when the owner voluntarily decides to sell it.

Supporters said that these rent hikes would make the state's affordable housing crisis ever worse. They argued that 85 percent of the renters of these units are elderly or disabled people who would not be able to afford the increased rent which in some cases will triple. They noted that there are thousands of units that are about to expire and thousands of people who will be displaced and homeless.

Although no one voted against the measure, some supporters acknowledged that they felt the bill had been watered down and should have been stronger. They argued that this weak measure is better than nothing but would still lead to many vulnerable people being forced out of their apartments.

The Senate in July approved a different version of the bill. The House version now goes back to the Senate for consideration.

(A "Yes" vote is for the bill).

Y

REGULATE MIXED MARTIAL ARTS COMPETITION (H 4290)

House 144-10, approved a bill regulating kickboxing, wrestling, karate, jiu-jitsu, and other mixed martial arts competition in Massachusetts.

The bill would replace the current State Boxing Commission with a new and expanded State Athletic Commission that still regulates boxing but also regulates the promoters, fighters, referees and doctors of mixed martial arts. Currently, this sport is not regulated by the state. The measure also gives the state four percent of the revenue from ticket sales and two percent from televised events.

Supporters said that there are currently martial arts matches across the state that are completely unregulated and can lead to fraud, injuries and even death. They argued that the bill would lead to the popular Ultimate Fighting Championship staging matches in the Bay State. They noted that these events would generate millions of dollars in revenue for ancillary businesses and for the state from the sales tax, meals tax and hotel tax that would be generated when people come to these matches.

Opponents said that the state should not sanction this violent sport when studies show that blows to the head can cause concussions and even irreversible brain damage. They argued that there is enough violence in the state and nation without encouraging this type of blood sport.

The Senate in July approved a different version of the bill. The House version now goes back to the Senate for consideration.

(A "Yes" vote is for the bill. A "No" vote is against the bill).

Y

DIVEST STATE FUNDS FROM TERRORIST NATIONS AND TEXAS (H 4297)

House 0-152, rejected an amendment to a bill requiring the $50 billion state pension fund to divest its holdings in foreign companies doing business related to petroleum with Iran.

Supporters of the bill itself say that Iran is one of the most evil and dangerous nations in the world and should not receive any support from Massachusetts' pension fund.

Some opponents say that the bill is weak and note that they support a broader proposal requiring the pension fund to divest from any foreign companies doing any kind of business with not only Iran but with many other terrorist nations including Sudan, North Korea and Syria. Other opponents say that the Legislature should not be micromanaging the pension fund. They argued that Massachusetts should try to solve its many local problems like unemployment, housing foreclosures and health care instead of sticking its nose in international affairs.

The amendment was proposed by Rep. Steve D'Amico (D-Seekonk), an opponent of the bill itself. The amendment would add to the list of nations all countries that are labeled repressive by the organization Freedom House. It also calls for the state to divest from companies doing business with Texas, until it repeals its capital punishment law.

D'Amico told Beacon Hill Roll Call that he offered the amendment tongue-in-cheek to make the point that the entire concept of listing nations is a slippery slope. He said that he threw the Texas ban in the amendment to illustrate the absurdity of the entire proposal.

D'Amico's plan was to make his point and then withdraw the amendment which he does not really support. That plan went awry when a legislator objected to the withdrawal of the amendment. Under House rules, if one legislator objects to the withdrawal of an amendment, it remains on the floor for debate and a vote.

(A "No" vote is against the amendment).

HEALTH NOTES

Food preparation and holiday drinking

By Steve Bobo
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

Ho Hum, last Quarter of '09; There was an election at which nobody here was elected, Halloween is over and we have tons of candy which we shouldn't eat. At the last Health Fair, everybody looked healthy. If it weren't for swine flu we wouldn't have anything to talk about. Even the Flu is in stasis, with H1N1 vaccine not yet broadly available. We've had to delay the planned flu clinic for lack of vaccine. Call your doctor to see if he has a supply.

Cheer up, the holidays are coming and they'll give us plenty to worry about. It seems the "obese police" have lost their clout. Despite increasing numbers of people we see walking and running and the amount of flesh we've observed at the beach, we are in an epidemic of overweight. According to the Center for Science in the Public Interest (CSPI), "Many single-serving food and drink containers are misleadingly labeled as several servings, despite some companies' recent moves to re-label single-serve products." The (CSPI) says that the steady growth in sizes of soft drinks, snack cakes, candy bars, and other foods that are clearly meant for one person to consume in a single sitting fuels the obesity epidemic, not to mention the recent revelations in the movie Food Inc.

Don't forget to cook correctly! — The Department of Public Health recommends that you protect yourself, your family and friends by following these tips to keep your food safe:

Separate foods — Don't cross-contaminate: Keep the Thanksgiving turkey away from other foods in your shopping cart and place it below other foods in your refrigerator to prevent contamination. Use separate cutting boards for cooked and raw foods. Always use clean platters

Clean hands and food surfaces often with hot soapy water before touching the turkey and after you use the bathroom, change diapers, or play with pets.

Wash cutting boards, dishes, kitchen tools and counter tops with hot soapy water after you finish fixing the turkey.

Cook foods to safe temperatures. Cook the turkey thoroughly. Use a food thermometer to check for doneness. Cook whole turkey unstuffed (or dark meat only) to 180°F; turkey breast to 170°F.

CHILL foods promptly.

A good tip is to thaw frozen foods by placing them on an aluminum-baking sheet; the aluminum conducts and disperses the cold temperature, radically reducing thaw time. Put prepared foods and leftover turkey in the refrigerator within two hours. Split large amounts of leftovers into small bowls and cool them in the refrigerator.

Holiday Drinking — Mass DUI laws consume 16 pages and over 11,000 words to the extent that it has become a lawyer's cottage industry evading them. The town is a part of the You Drink & Drive. You Lose. National Mobilization, launched in December 1999, as a comprehensive impaired driving prevention effort focused on conducting highly visible criminal justice-related efforts to deter impaired driving still valid today.

The Mass law in brief:

1. Whoever, operates a motor vehicle on a pubic way having a, blood alcohol level of .08 or more, or fails tests for marijuana, narcotic drugs, depressants or stimulant substances or the vapors of glue shall be punished by a fine of at least $500 or by imprisonment for not more than 2-1/2 years, or both. Prosecution requires test or analysis evidence to be made by a police officer with consent of the defendant,

2. If a person's blood alcohol percentage is greater than 0.08, a police officer shall take custody of the person's driver's license.

(ii) provide to those who refuse the test notification of suspension; and

(iii) immediately report action taken to the registrar.

(iv) impound the vehicle for a period of 12 hours after the operator's refusal, with costs for the towing, storage and maintenance to be borne by the operator. Notwithstanding these provisions, the court may order that a defendant convicted of a violation to be imprisoned only on designated weekends, evenings or holidays if not convicted previously or assigned to a treatment or rehabilitation program.

So, if you plan to drive, don't drink or use drugs. Choose a sober designated driver before celebrating. Take mass transit, a taxicab or ask a friend to drive you home or spend the night. Finally, always wear your safety belt.

Alcohol is still the No. 1 youth drug problem, killing 6.5 times more young people than all other illicit drugs combined. The earlier one begins drinking, the more likely alcohol problems develop later in life including dependency and drunk driving. Don't let yourself or anyone you know become the subject of another heart- breaking article on these pages.

Steve Bobo is a long-time member of the Cohasset Board of Health.

GIMME SHELTER

Tiger brothers are purr-fect!

This week Hull Seaside Animal Rescue is featuring Shelby and Sherman who are two 8-month-old tiger brothers. They are adorable, friendly, playful, purring older kittens. They adore each other and are extremely fond of humans and should do well with children of all ages. They cuddle together and will keep each other company so you won't have to worry about their being lonely when you're away from home. Please come visit them and our ever-changing assortment of cats and kittens.

We will have five adorable all black kittens ready to be adopted in mid-December, just in time for early holiday gifts. Give us a call if you'd like to be put on our "waiting for kittens" list.

HSAR has a low-cost spay/neuter clinic scheduled on Friday, Nov. 20. Call 877-378-1195 if interested, leave name and phone number and someone will get back to you. Shelter hours at 50 L St., Hull, are from 2 to 3 p.m. on Saturdays, and 6:30 to 7:30 p.m., on Mondays. The mailing address is P.O. Box 787, Hull, MA 02045. Pulitzer Prize winning author, Tracy Kidder, signs a copy of his book for one of his many fans who attended Monday's "An Evening with Tracy Kidder."

Kidder event packed the house

By Linda Fechter
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

On Monday night, Nov. 2, a sold out crowd filled the Cohasset High School Auditorium for An Evening with Tracy Kidder. The Pulitzer Prize winner is currently on a book tour with his latest work, "Strength in What Remains." Kidder delivered his talk with great humility for his accomplishments and also a bit of humor. He spoke of Deo, the subject of his book; a young man whose will to survive and love of knowledge took him from the horrors of genocide in Burundi to Columbia University and then on to medical school. Kidder showed a brief slide show that brought to life the horrors of what existence without proper healthcare is like in a place like Burundi and why Deo's story should be told, and brought to life for the world to understand. Kidder told the audience, "Good storytellers make the world new again. They catch the reflection of human beings, each unique on the page."

"Good storytellers make the world new again. They catch the reflection of human beings, each unique on the page."
— Tracy Kidder

The event was generously made possible by a grant from the South Shore Music Circus and all proceeds benefit the Cohasset Library Trust. In addition to a Committee comprised of Library Trustees, Cohasset Library Trust Board Members and Friends of the Library, the event received tremendous support from an Event Committee of Cohasset residents and library supporters who sold tickets. Goodwin Graphics; the Cohasset Mariner; Buttonwood Books & Toys, and the staff at Cohasset High School, all played a key role in making the evening a success. A reception was held after Kidder's talk and was generously hosted by Diane Griswold Johnston and underwritten by Adrian Morris owner of LemonLime AVEDA Lifestyle Salon here in Cohasset. The reception was attended by nearly 100 guests, including Kidder.

Cohasset was one of Kidder's last stops on his media tour, which has taken him to countless cities, towns and universities from Chicago to Vermont to coastal New England. An Evening with Tracy Kidder was truly a best seller for the town and the library. Due to the overwhelming response and support of this first event, The Cohasset Library Trust, Inc. is encouraged to plan additional author events in the future.

Three high school seniors have the passion

Once they each could somewhat play their instruments they banded together.

"We've had a band since the summer of fifth grade," Mark said. The three have been good friends since the Deer Hill School. Over the years they've had different members come and go, but now they are back to where their original configuration.

They believe the fact that they have been friends since elementary school gives a unique facet to their music and they way they create it.

"It goes beyond communication. It's sort of creating one band, one being and that's really the philosophy behind a band," Austin said. Having always played together since they learned how to strum a guitar (or bass) gives them a distinctive connection not many musicians have with their bandmates.

"As we grew as musicians, our friendship grew even stronger," David said. "It's a fun time, just three friends getting together to play music."

At times when they are jamming they can almost predict what they other is going to do, in a similar way they can complete each other's thoughts as good friends do.

Their current band, and musical passion, is White Cloud Hunters, a name borrowed from a New Orleans Native American tribe.

They describe their original music as a sort of experimental fusion of a lot of different genres, depending on how their mood strikes. They draw on all sorts of different musical influences from mainstream to jazz to classic rock in order to create their own sound.

They are quick to admit their music isn't for popular consumption. In a sense, the way they compose and play together transcends a label because it is a lot of different things at once and even they aren't sure what's going to come out of their instrument next — it's a free form improvisational experience for the musicians and the audience.

"It's just about the music, and that's all that matters at that time," said Mark.

They describe the White Cloud Hunters music as 70 percent jam, meaning free improvisational composition, 15 percent original composition, 10 percent covers and 5 percent "other."

COURTESY PHOTO

The White Cloud Hunters 'jam' in a backyard. Austin Meyers (left) is on the bass, David Hernon is on the drums and Mark Seraikas is on the guitar.

When they play together they often simply allow the sound to evolve and become whatever it might be.

"It's rock music, but we try to do stuff no one else has done," Mark said. They take the musical structure and then try to do something different with it.

When they do get together to jam, it's an interaction that's largely without words, but not without communication. As each of the musicians gets set up in David's basement, one of them starts tuning their instrument or "vamping on a cool idea" and the others jump in. After a few minutes of fumbling around they start playing cohesive music.

"Once you get yourself there, get yourself situated, then you start listening to other people and that's when it starts," Mark said with a snap of his fingers.

The improvisational music sessions produce a creative atmosphere and David said sometimes his artistic friends stop by to draw while listening.

More than specific artists, they say they are influenced more about the philosophy behind music.

For Austin, the medium is about connection and transcendence, "music does what language and ordinary form of communication can't do."

Mark agrees, "(when playing for an audience) you are all experiencing music at the same time, you don't need to fully understand to have a response."

A friend described their White Cloud Hunters' music as "scary and ominous," but that's feedback they'll take.

"Anything more descriptive than 'good' is nice to hear. If (listeners) say it's good, then I know they didn't really listen to it," Austin said with a laugh.

For Mark, Austin and David their White Cloud Hunters music is hard to attach adjectives to. They describe it as "unbiased," "very underground," "psychedelic funk rock." They're a rock band, but an unconventional one.

The trio has played a variety of events around town, playing a range of music. Although the free form jam sessions are their favorite type of music to play, they said they are willing and able to play just about anything — from jazz to country to classic rock.

Over the summer they played a regular set of jazz on Sunday mornings at French Memories. With the jazz combo they played for a crowd at the Thursday Farmer's Market. They've done the PSO Telethon, the senior center's Thanksgiving dinner and their music teacher's wedding.

Although the boys got their start in music through watching rock stars, they don't necessarily aspire to rock stardom. They see music as art and as an emotional tool.

"I have always seen creating music as a self-rewarding endeavor," David said. "It's never been about anything else but doing something we love to do."

Austin agrees, "we're not interested in making tons of money, if we can get by, we're going to make music."

Next fall, the boys are off to college and to the unknown paths that await them there. They hope to still have the opportunity to play together during summers, vacations and, if they end up in the same city, on a more regular basis.

"Whatever we can do with music, we're going to do," Mark said.

SSL champs second at League Meet

By William Wassersug
WWASSERS@CNC.COM

The Cohasset golf team finished its season with a solid showing at the South Shore League Meet at the par 72 Cranberry Valley Golf Course in Harwich on Wednesday.

The Skippers, who won the regular season SSL title with a 10-2 record, finished second on Wednesday, five strokes behind Abington.

Cohasset shot 245, while the Green Wave shot 240.

Golf

Harwich (248), Norwell (249) and Mashpee (254) were next.

Cohasset was led by Chase Stebbins, who shot a 79, good enough for fourth overall, while Morgan Grasz hit an 82 that put him eighth.

David Hill was ninth with an 84 and Ian Quinlan, a senior captain, was 13th with a 97.

"It was a good day," Cohasset coach Torin Sweeney said. "We would have liked to beat Abington, but they shot lights out. It was a heck of a day."

The top four golfers on each team played, and the top three scores were kept over the 18 holes.

"Abington shot 78, 81, 81," Sweeney said. "That's really good. It's too bad we didn't keep all four scores. We would have won."

The top five finishers in the league meet were, Harwich's John O'Connor (74), Mashlepee's Corey Donlan (78), Stebbins (79) and Norwell's Eric Scott (80).

Quinlan, Grasz and David Hill were named to the 2009 South Shore Golf Team, as voted by coaches.

For Sweeney, the meet was an extension of what has already been a great season.

"It was fantastic," Sweeney said about the season. "We won the league. That was exciting. We won it in 2006, then we won the league meet in '06 and '07. Last year we didn't do anything, so to win the league, finish second at the league meet and do well at Sectionals is great. We're also still building. I think we can continue to get better every year."

At Monday's South Sectionals, Stebbins made the top four with an 83, while David Hill shot an 87 andGrasz finished with an 89.

Harry Cipolla shot a 93, Quinlan hit 95 and Robbie Hill scored a 98.

"We missed the State cut by six strokes," Sweeney said," It was still a good showing. We were eighth out of 23 teams."

It wasn't an easy road to the regular-season title.

After a 4-2 start, the Skippers went through a week where they played four times, with three of them for first place.

"The last weekend in Sept. we were in second place at 4-2 and we went and beat Mashpee at their home course," Sweeney said. "Then two days later Norwell came to Cohasset. They were first at the time. We followed by beating Carver that "The kids are anxious. They wish it were Friday night already," Cohasset coach Pete Afanasiw said Tuesday after a session that one of his assistants called "the best practice we've had all year."

"They were focused," Afanasiw said. "They were moving around a million miles an hour. They're very positive, very upbeat. I know they've worked hard."

Cohasset comes in with a 7-0 record overall, 3-0 in the league. Abington is 8-0, 4-0.

Afanasiw said the fact that both teams are unbeaten hasn't played into his Skippers' anticipation and readiness.

Gledhill joins greats at alma mater HOF

Longtime local named to Waltham Hall

By William Wassersug
WWASSERS@CNC.COM

Oct. 2 was a very special night for long-time Cohasset resident Bob Gledhill.

That was the night that he was inducted into the Waltham High School Hall of Fame, joining a group of illustrious athletes that included former NFL great Fred Smerlas.

Gledhill, who has lived in Cohasset for 31 years and owns R.W. Gledhill Inc. a construction company in town, was thrilled about the honor, and the fact that he was able to share it with his family.

"My mom is 88-years old and she was at the induction," Gledhill said. She got a standing ovation. It was amazing."

Gledhill was inducted for his accomplishments on the track.

"I was a six-time state champion in the high jump and hurdles," he said. "I was the top point-getter in the Boston Athletic Association Games as well."

Gledhill went undefeated in the high jump for four years of high school and still holds the state record with a jump of 6-7 fl.

"My record still stands after 40 years," Gledhill said proudly. "Noone has even been close."

After high school, Gledhill went to prep school in New Hampshire, and then went to the University of Texas at El Paso, which was a national champion at the time.

"We were national champs in track when I was there," he said. "I was jumping 6-11, 7-feet and I was still the third jumper on the team. It was quite an experience."

To Gledhill, athletics was a big part of his life that still stays with him.

"Business-wise athletics has helped me because of the competitive aspect," he said. "And then there were the people who helped me get where I am. My track coach, Lee Gould, who is deceased, was an incredible man. He wore a derby like my dad. He was like a dad. I met him when I was in sixth grade. I started jumping in sixth grade.I always had people who took care of me. There were 1,000 kids in my graduating class (1969) and my coaches took me to every interview for prep schools, everything. It was amazing how many people affected my life."

Gledhill said he was friendly with everyone from the equipment managers to the people who took care of the track.

"I lived next to the track," he said. "The people around me took care of me. I still have to thank the coaches. Not just my coaches, but all coaches. It's a thankless job. What I am today has to do with coaches. They're dedicated people."

All the help he's had has influenced him in the way he presents himself in business.

His company has been involved in numerous projects benefiting local athletics.

"We've been pretty involved in charitable things," he said.

In all, Gledhill, who has two grown sons, Tucker and Teddy and has been married to Meredith for 34 years, was thrilled with the honor.

"It's quite an honor for a guy almost 60-years old," he said.

It sure is.

Registration open for Bay State Winter Games

Registration for the 2010 Bay State Winter Games is now open, as the annual Olympic-style amateur sporting event celebrates its 25th year in Northern Berkshire County. From Friday, January 22 to Sunday, January 24, 2010, individual competitions in alpine skiing and figure skating, and team competition in masters ice hockey will take place.

Since its inception, the Berkshires have played host of all the events in the Bay State Winter Games. Athletes participating in the Winter Games represent over 200 Massachusetts communities, and range in age from 8 to over 60.

"We are very excited about celebrating the silver anniversary of the Winter Games in 2010," said Kevin Cummings, Bay State Games Executive Director. "Since 1985, the Winter Games have showcased thousands of winter sports enthusiasts from Massachusetts; some of whom have gone on to compete in the Winter Olympics, including figure skaters Nancy Kerrigan, Paul Wylie and Tiffany Scott, and alpine skiers Krista Schmidinger and Nikki Stone."

The 2010 figure skating competition will take place at the Lansing Chapman Rink on the campus of Williams College in Williamstown, MA, and features both ISI and UFSF competition for males and females. Masters ice hockey will be played in two divisions, age 40 plus and 50 plus, at the Vietnam Veterans Memorial Skating Arena in North Adams, MA. Alpine Skiing, with scholastic, open and masters divisions, will be held at Bousquet Ski Area in Pittsfield, MA.

On Saturday, January 23 at 7:30 p.m., the Bay State Skate Figure Skating Show will take place at Williams College.

The show will feature Bay State Games gold medal winners, regional figure skating champions and a special feature skater. Tickets for the event are $10 and can be purchased at local Berkshire businesses or by contacting the Bay State Games' office. All other skating competitions are free of charge for spectators.

For more information regarding the Bay State Winter Games including schedule of events, how to become a volunteer, and to register, please visit www.baystategames.org, e-mail info@baystategames.org or call the Bay State Games' office at (781) 932-6555.

Thursday and then beat Abington. They were 6-2. We ended with eight straight wins, six straight in the league. That one week we had four straight first-place matches. We played pretty strong golf and won all of them."

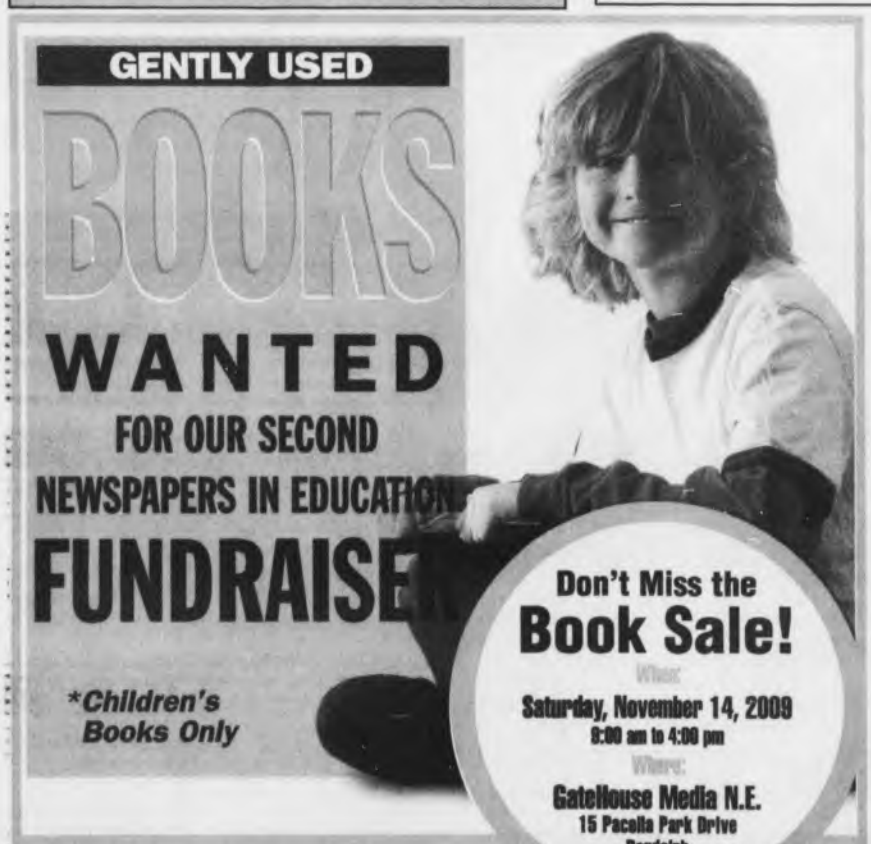
Cohasset needed every match to take the title.

They finally won it outright with a win over East Bridgewater in their finale.

"We won that match 37-17 and that clinched the title," Sweeney said. "The highlight was David Hill shooting a 39. Ian Quinlan shot a 41 and Chase shot a 42."

By the numbers, Quinlan finished with a 9-3 record on the season, while Stebbins chipped in with a 7-1 mark.

Grasz and Robbie Hill each went 9-5.



Hill, Cipolla and Sebastian Braga were sterling at the bottom of the rotation, with the three of them rotating into the five and six spots.

Cipolla finished 7-0 and Braga was 6-0-1.

"Our strength was our depth," Sweeney said. "It was a huge key. This was probably the strongest team I've had in the eight years I've been coaching."

Along with the depth, Sweeney credited Quinlan and Stebbins for their contributions.

"Ian Quinlan and Chase Stebbins have been our No. 1 and No. 2 guys," he said. "They've provided great senior leadership. Ian taught guys to play team golf. Guys were pulling for each other and for the team. That comes from the senior leadership. I think they did a super job. The younger kids have learned a lot from them."

SCITUATE/COHASSET YOUTH FOOTBALL

The playoff bound Scituate-Cohasset Mite Sharks (4th grade) football team capped a successful regular season with a solid 14-0 triumph over Hingham at the Hingham High School field Sunday afternoon.

The win boosted the Sharks, who finished with a 6-2 regular season record, into the first-seed of the Division 1 playoff picture. They will face fourth seeded Marshfield Sunday at Hingham High at noon.

The winner will play in the Division 1 Super Bowl contest next Sunday at Bridgewater against the winner of the Barnstable-Bridgewater contest.

The Sharks established their dominance over Hingham from the outset, taking the opening kickoff and marching half the distance of the field to the Hingham 15. A key play in the Sci/Co drive came on fourth-and 15 when quarterback Andrew Sullivan hit Will Bowen with a pass in the flat that Will B. turned into a 16-yard gain for a first down. Swift halfback Kyle McFetridge also made a key pickup with an eight yard scamper to the Hingham 17.

However, a fumble momentarily delayed the Sci/Co offense and turned the ball over to Hingham. Although Hingham was unable to generate any meaningful offense thanks to a stifling Sci/Co defense, a key facemask call managed to keep Hingham's first drive alive and run some time off the clock. However, with Shark defensive linemen Charlie Pyne and Will Thomas in the Hingham backfield all day, accounting for a number of big sacks that thwarted Hingham's attempts at gaining momentum, Sci/Co eventually took over on downs at its own 43 with 3:45 left in the half.

But the Sharks' frustration to that point soon disappeared in the proverbial cloud of dust when tailback Will Greer took a hand off from Sullivan and headed around right end. Will G. picked his spot to turn upfield, brushed off a couple of would be tacklers, and burst into daylight, eventually outrunning his Hingham pursuers for a 57 yard TD jaunt.

Sci/Co Shark running back Will Bowen (36) breaks into the open en route to a fourth quarter touchdown that sealed the win for the Mite Sharks in a 14-0 triumph over Hingham Sunday. The top seeded Sharks will meet Marshfield this Sunday at Hingham at noon in the opening round of the playoffs.

Will Bowen then hit the Hingham left side on a counter and pranced into the endzone virtually untouched for the two point conversion to make it 8-0 with 3:32 on the clock.

Greer boomed the ensuing kickoff over the heads of the Hingham receiving team, who eventually retrieved the ball at their own 10 and then were pinned at their 20.

The Sharks held firm, thanks to key tackles by Will Thomas (who tossed a Hingham runner for a three yard loss on second and two) and Cal Osten (who stopped the Hingham ballcarrier a yard short of the first down on fourth down), and took over at the Hingham 29 with 1:50 left in the half.

A holding call negated a big gain by the Sharks, but on third-and 14, Greer took a direct snap in his tailback position in the Sharks' Wildcat offensive formation and tossed a long pass to Chase Bomeisler, who had to twist from looking over right shoulder, turn to his left, and then leap to make an acrobatic, one handed grab for a first down at the Hingham 18.

Will Bowen then carried three Hingham tacklers for an 11 yard pick up to the seven, but after Sullivan spiked the ball to stop the clock, Cohasset's next play fell short of the endzone and time ran out in the half.

The second half proved a repeat of the opening two periods, as the Hingham defense was thwarted time and again by the schools of Shark defenders who preyed on the Hingham ballcarriers, led by linemen Andrew Blanchard, Alex DeFreitas, Victor Najjar, James Krumsiek, Pyne, and Thomas; the linebacking trio of Jackson Manzi, Tommy Carabbes, and Osten; cornerbacks Luke Murphy and John Forsythe (stepping in for the flu stricken Jason Dwight); and safety Keven Callahan .

An exchange of possessions left Sci/Co with the ball at the Hingham 25 and in prime position to put the game away as the third period neared its end. The double-Ws, Greer and Bowen, took turns pummeling the Hingham line, with Will B. first smashing through for a nine yard pick up to the 17 and then Will G. pounding for 11 more to the Hingham six.

Will B. then got the call from Sullivan on the same counter play over left tackle that had produced the PAT after the first touchdown. Thanks once again to some great blocking by the Shark offensive line, Bowen stepped in easily for the TD to make it 14-0 with 6:50 left in the game.

Sci/Co attempted a pass play for the two point conversion, but the toss from Sullivan to tight end Matt Thomas just missed connecting.

Hingham battled gamely to break the shutout, but the Sci/Co defense continued to prove unyielding up to the final whistle. The Shark offense was able to control the clock, with halfback Liam Maguire often getting the call and turning in his best runs of the season.

The Sharks will be meeting a Marshfield team in the semifinals whom Sci-Co defeated 18-0 in their regular season meeting a few weeks ago. A victory will propel Sci/Co into their division Super Bowl for the second straight year. Last year, the then 3rd graders tied Hanover in the Super Bowl contest to earn a share of the 2008 division championship.

"We're looking forward to the post season," said Shark head coach Dan Varney. "All of the players and coaches have worked very hard this season to get to this point. We'll be ready to give it our best in the playoffs."

Battle of the unbeatens

To be honest, that hasn't even come up," he said. "It's more just the fact that it's Abington. They've won (the SSL title) four times in a row (and six this decade), and if we want to be considered anywhere near their level, we have a chance to prove it on a pretty good stage.

"The kids really want to try to prove to not just Abington but the rest of the league that they're a legitimate football team. I agree with them 100 percent. They get a lot of that from me. No one's just going to bow down and give you respect. You have to go out and earn the respect. You would do that by what you do on game night.

"If you come out here and lay an egg, (people) are going to say, 'Oh, 7-1,' whatever. 'Maybe it was a mistake. They got lucky.' But you want to do it week in and week out, prove to the rest of the league, the rest of the teams around the area that we actually are worth our record. There's no better way to do that than facing a quality opponent like Abington."

While Cohasset is expected to rely significantly on senior tailback Dana Valentine for offensive contribution, Abington will lean heavily on its centerpiece running back, senior Kristian LaPointe. Remember that name.

"He's a big part of their offense," Afanasiw said. "They try to get him the ball the majority of the time. Out of every10 plays they run, they try to get it to him at least six, maybe even seven times.

"So, yes, focusing on him and being able to contain him and not let him break any big runs or kick-offs or punts – he's used in so many different ways – has been a major concern for us this week. You have to know where LaPointe is at all times. He's the kind of kid who can score from literally anywhere on the field at any given time – offensively, defensively, special teams. He's that kind of special player."

Cohasset knows there's more to the Green Wave offense than LaPointe. The Skippers were off last weekend and had the chance to scout Abington in its 35-7 rout of Norwell. Afanasiw has a pretty good inkling of what he'll see.

"They'll try to do what they can," he said, "to keep it as diverse as possible – go up the middle, off tackle, take it down the field . . . I would imagine put forth as balanced and unpredictable a front as they can."

Afanasiw is confident that Valentine, junior quarterback Jeff Cavanaro, junior fullback Thomas Flibotte, senior receivers Brendan Doonan and Dean Driscoll, and the rest of the offense will team up with the never-bending defensive unit and turn in a productive outing

"It's just a matter of coming out and playing our brand of football," the coach said. "The only thing that can possibly keep them from performing well would be themselves. If they psyche themselves up so much that it becomes almost a deer-in-the-headlights type attitude, they're not going to do anybody any good. But if they come out loose and confident and just play football, I think we stand a pretty good chance of staying with Abington," "

Staying with Abington means minimizing mistakes and turnovers.

"I emphasized that to the kids all week long," Afanasiw said. "We cannot help this team out at all. We helped Mashpee out. We gave the ball up three or four times in the scoring zone. Against them we got away with it. If we do that against Abington, I can almost guarantee that we're not going to get away with it. The margin for error is very, very small with this team."

Regardless of which team wins tonight, the SSL championship will not be officially sewn up. While Abington has only Mashpee (Nov. 13) remaining on its league schedule, Cohasset will have two SSL games left (Nov. 13 at Norwell and Nov. 26 at Hull).

"There are a lot of scenarios, an entire litany of possibilities," Afanasiw said. "We can't get caught up thinking about that stuff. We've got to take care of Friday might."

The coach said he's "not even thinking about going undefeated. We couldn't care less about that. One of the big messages I'm sending these kids is that this is their last time playing on their home field. As a group, they will never, ever take that field together again as a team in a game.

"My message is: What kind of memory do you want to create? I don't care about the league title. I don't care about being undefeated. What kind of memory do you want to take with you? This is their last home game in high school football. Keep it simple.

"You've got 40 more minutes on your home field. How do you want to spend those 40 minutes? They'll remember the feeling they had after the game more than they'll remember the score or who the other team was and their players.

"They'll remember that feeling of walking off the field with their friends. Whether it's elation or depression, they're going to remember that feeling more than they'll remember the other details.

"It's more about the effort they put forth and how they represent themselves on the field as opposed to the actual result."

This will be the Fox 25 Friday game and is expected to be standing room only.

There will also be parking restrictions.

Parking will be limited at the school so fans are encouraged to carpool. The following parking restrictions will be in place:

NO PARKING: Even numbered side of Pond Street, from Clay Spring Road to Bancroft Road. Even numbered side of Woodland Drive. Odd numbered side of Bancroft Road, from Pond Street to Norfolk Road. Even numbered side of Holly Lane. Even numbered side of Clay Spring Road, from Pond Street to Arrowood Road. Even numbered side of Buttonwood Lane.

Bancroft Way – Block w/ barricade – residents only

Temporary "No Parking" signs to be deployed by Tom Wigmore on Friday, November 6, 2009 at 3:00pm at the above locations.

FIRE LANES: Handicapped Parking will be allowed in the fire lane located in the driveway to Alumni Field (from Pond Street to area opposite the school administration parking lot – along the curbing). No parking in any other fire lanes will be permitted. Cones and horses will indicate HP Parking area.

Gates open at 5:30 p.m. and tickets are $5, $3 for students and senior citizens.

Inside the 6 – Soccer Power Rankings

By Ryan Wood
RWOOD@CNC.COM

This is week five of Inside the 6, and we've got a lot of movers and shakers. One boys team and one girls team drop out of the table; two teams come in, including one that's making its Inside the 6 debut. The boys' table had the most action, while there was only a minor shift on the girls' side. For the boys, four teams shifted positions, and the team that held down the number one spot for the first four weeks of Inside the 6, spiraled its way down two slots. One boys team made the biggest leap of the season. These rankings reflect performances and outcomes through Sunday, Nov. 1, 2009.

The Inside the Six Soccer Power Rankings are decided based on a number of criteria: record, goals scored, goals conceded, and strength of schedule. The public schools in our coverage area include: Abington, Braintree, Carver, Cohasset, Duxbury, Hanover, Hingham, Holbrook, Marshfield, Norwell, Pembroke, Plymouth North, Plymouth South, Rockland, Scituate, Silver Lake, and Weymouth. Check out your town's Wicked Local website to see the rankings and to comment on them.

Boys

1. Hingham – There's a new number one in Inside the 6, and the Harbormen certainly deserve the top spot after beating previously unbeaten Duxbury to win the Patriot League championship. Duxbury held down this position for the first four weeks, but now find themselves below the top form Hingham boys team.

2. Hanover – Consistency has pretty much been the name of the game for the Hanover boys. The Patriot League Fisher Division champions picked up a pair of wins last week, giving them 13 on the season against one loss and four draws.

3. Duxbury – Shocking is the only way to describe the Dragons' loss to Hingham, one that decided the Patriot League Keenan Division title. Before losing to Hingham last week, the Dragons earned a hard-fought, 3-2 win over a scrappy, bottom-tier North Quincy club.

4. Weymouth – The Wildcats drop down one notch, and it's definitely not due to lack of effort. Hingham's jump from the number four slot last week to number one just so happened push Weymouth over. These boys wrapped up third place in the Bay State Carey division, a tremendous accomplishment if you look at their competition.

5. Norwell – The Clippers move up from six to five after picking up a pair of victories following two straight draws. The boys have only lost one game this season, and only one team – tournament-bound Hull – has scored more than one goal against them.

6. Marshfield – Making its Inside the 6 debut, the Rams delivered one of the most impressive runs to keep the programs two decades-plus consecutive tourney streak alive. The Rams went 3-1 last week, and they capped that off by beating Bridgewater-Raynham, 1-0, Saturday to earn the point they needed to reach the postseason. The other two victories came against Dennis-Yarmouth and Atlantic Coast League champs Sandwich.

Girls

1. Norwell – This is the team to beat. Two wins last week, with a combined score of 13-1, pushed the Lady Clippers to 16-0-1. They registered their 11th shutout of the season, and the 13 goals gave them 90 on the season against only six goals allowed.

2. Duxbury – The Lady Dragons shook off last Sunday's loss to Whitman-Hanson and won three straight – a 7-1 win over North Quincy, a 3-1 win over Hingham, and a 1-0 win over Pembroke, which knocked the Lady Titans out of postseason contention. The Duxbury girls finished second to Whitman-Hanson in the Patriot League Keenan Division.

3. Plymouth North – The Lady Eagles ran into a pesky Marshfield team and lost, 1-0, however they still remain in the hunt for the Atlantic Coast League title. Before last Friday's loss, the North girls blanked Falmouth.

4. Plymouth South – Another Plymouth team that has played phenomenal soccer this season picked up a 4-1 win over Nauset to finish tied for third place in the Atlantic Coast League, which is the highest a Plymouth South girls soccer team has ever finished in any league. The Lady Panthers also became the first team in the girls soccer program to qualify for the postseason in consecutive seasons.

5. Weymouth – The Lady Wildcats move up one position, and actually knocked Scituate from the Inside the 6 altogether. Well, that's what happens when you battle with the Bay State Carey's best of the best. These girls are playing solid soccer, not the best, but solid enough to remain in the top six.

6. Marshfield – The Marshfield girls soccer team lost four players for the entire season, all due to injury. Along the way, a total of eight players went down with injuries, most of them starters. But rather than take the woe-is-me-attitude route, the Lady Rams rallied. Needing one point in their last four games (three of which include Plymouth North, Sandwich, and Needham), the girls got that point by drawing with Dennis-Yarmouth. They come back two days later and drop first-place Plymouth North. Momentum. It works wonders.

Previous week

Boys
1. Duxbury
2. Hanover
3. Weymouth
4. Hingham
5. Braintree
6. Norwell

Girls
1. Norwell
2. Duxbury
3. Plymouth North
4. Plymouth South
5. Scituate
6. Weymouth

The Inside the 6 – Soccer Power Rankings appears online on each town's respective Wicked Local website, and each week in some of our papers. Feel free to comment and join in the discussion, maybe even adding your own two cents as to which teams should end up where in the rankings.

South Coastal Hockey League roundup

By Mark Ducharme
CORRESPONDENT

There are times on paper when the numbers don't add up.

The Rangers had the best overall defense in the South Coastal Hockey League and were undefeated going into their Classics Div. game with the Bruins, who had the worst offense in the entire league.

The Bruins, who had not scored more than two goals in a game scored the first three goals and hung on for a 3-2 win in dealing the Rangers their first loss. Jim Mulhern of Pembroke scored two goals and Tom MacInnes added one and goalie Jim Stone also of Pembroke made a big save with a second left for the Bruins.

Marshfield's Alan Smith scored his first goal of the season and Mike Crisp scored for the Rangers Mike Martin of Pembroke scored two goals and assisted on another to lead the Canadiens to a 5-1 Classics Div. win over the Blackhawks. Kirk Souza, Jim Donnelly of Marshfield and John Watson added a goal each for the Canadiens and Tim Ryan scored for the Blackhawks.

In the other Classics Div game, John Guilderson scored a goal and assisted on another, Joe Derrane scored two goals and Steve Figioli scored a goal in the Red Wings' 4-3 win over the Maple Leafs.

Marshfield's Dave Denton, Mike Ryan and Shawn Malloy scored the Maple Leafs goals.

In each Legends Div. game the winning team had a player score two goals for the winning team. Bob Zerfoss of Scituate scored two goals in the Saints 4-2 win over the Crusaders, Tim Cruz of Marshfield had two goals for the Sharks in their 4-2 win over the Toros and Paul McPherson had two goals for the Stingers in their 5-4 win over the Whalers.

Frank Elwood and Paul Murphy had a goal each for the Saints in their win over the Stingers, while Jon Choate and Mike Simon scored a goal each for the Stingers.

Jay Sloan of Marshfield and Jay Faherty added a goal each for the Sharks in their win over the Toros as they replied with a goal and an assist each from Mike Rober and James Ward, who are both from Norwell.

Tony Shaw, Steve Sawtelle and Peter Tamborella of Pembroke added goal each for the Stingers in their win over the Whalers. The Whalers got a goal and assist from both Kevin Mackin of Duxbury and Scituate's Steve Concannon, a goal each from Skip Tufts also of Scituate and Cohasset's Rob Dennis.

John Cardarelli scored to break a 2-2 tie with just over three minutes left as the Thunder held on for a 4-2 Masters Div. win over the Wolves.

Derek Rappaport of Pembroke and Tom Maguire scored a goal each and Clem Fillion iced the game with a empty net goal with 10 seconds left as Jeff Bradley of Pembroke and Keith Smith of Marshfield scored the goals for the Wolves.

Jeff Ray of Hanover and John Zimmer of Marshfield scored two goals each and Joe Bevilacqua added a goal to lead the Grizzlies to a 5-3 Masters Div. win over the Vipers.

Marshfield's Tim Burchill, Peter Fallon of Hanover and Tony Rota scored the goals for the Vipers.

SCHOOLS

First edition of Spinnaker hot off the press

LIFE AT CHS

SEAN MACCARTHY

... the very dedicated seniors had to do all the work after school as they refused to let the school newspaper tradition die out.

Hello again. I have no witty introduction for this article (and hopefully no split personalities coming out this time around). I also don't know any other languages to teach you. I guess I am just going to have to talk about the life at CHS...which my job entails...

This past Friday, the first edition of the Spinnaker came out this year. For those who are not familiar with what the Spinnaker is, the Spinnaker is a student-made newspaper at Cohasset High School. All articles are written by and edited by students with a little guidance from the master of British literature (and mayhem) Mr. McCabe. This year's Spinnaker was done a lot differently than previous years due to a certain Journalism class being cut from the curriculum. Now, instead of have four-hour-and-a-half classes every week to write the school newspaper, the very dedicated seniors had to do all the work after school as they refused to let the school newspaper tradition die out. It was a very successful and well written paper that sold out before first period even began. Congratulations to all that contributed to the newspaper. Well done.

The International Club met on Tuesday for the first time this year. They met in Mr. Kotter's room in the foreign language department for obvious reasons. Their food of the day was Italian food. And they all ate free. And none of them told me. And I am regretting not joining the International Club at the beginning of this year. I am just going to stop there before I revert back to my alter-ego, chicken parmeSEAN.

The entire student council met on Wednesday to discuss plans for the future now that the Homecoming rush is done with. The student council has plans to implement three fundraisers in the near future. The first fundraiser proposed was to sell ice cream at lunch again to fund the Junior-Senior Semi-Formal in January. Another fundraiser we are planning to do is a book drive to help support impoverished peoples outside the United States by supplying them with books to learn from. The final fundraiser we discussed was a Thanksgiving food drive so that no one goes hungry on Thanksgiving. Participating in these fundraisers is an awesome way to help those that are less fortunate; so all donations are strongly encouraged.

Finally, a shout out to all Cohasset sports teams this year. The Golf Team, Boys Soccer, Girls Soccer, and Field Hockey teams all qualified for a tournament this year, which is an incredibly rare occurrence. Not to mention, the football team is currently undefeated. Speaking of which, you all NEED to go out and support them as they take on the Abington Green Wave. This game is huge and if you are crazy enough you will get on TV. Now that's what I call incentive.

That's all that went down at CHS this week. Just for now, ciao!

Sean MacCarthy is glad the weather changed back to normal.

'Child Find' screenings

The Cohasset Public Schools, in accordance with Federal Law IDEA 2004 and Massachusetts Special Education Regulations 603 CMR 28.00, are in the process of conducting "Child Find." The school department is seeking children with suspected disabilities residing in Cohasset who may be in need of Special Education services.

The Cohasset Public Schools will evaluate students from age 3 through high school age who are unable to progress effectively in a regular education program due to a suspected disability in one of the following areas: developmental or intellectual delay, sensory, neurological, emotional, communication, physical, specific learning disability or health impairment. Cohasset Public Schools will also arrange for an evaluation of young people ages 16 21 who have not graduated from high school and who are not now attending school.

In addition, screenings for age 3 to 5-years olds are held the third Friday of each month at Osgood School. Call the Integrated Pre school Staff at 781-383-6117 for more information.

Cohasset provides all children with an opportunity to participate in the public school programs using a continuous and systematic process to identify students in need of special education. All programs and services are offered Without regard to color, race, sex, religion, national origin, sexual orientation or disability.

If you have a child who you suspect may have a disability or know a child with a disability who may be in need of special education services, call the Director of Student Services, Dr. Denise Messina, at 781-383-6104 for information regarding the referral process.

Open house at Vo-Tech

Charles Homer, superintendent of the South Shore Regional Vocational Technical High School, has announced the annual open house of South Shore Regional, located at 476 Webster St. (Route 123 in Hanover) will take place Thursday, Dec. 10 from 6– 8:30 p.m. Snow date is Monday, Dec. 14, also from 6 – 8:30 p.m.

Homer reports that 14 technical programs will be staffed to explain their programs to future students and their parents. Homer said he hopes that not only eighth graders and their parents will attend but also sixth and seventh graders will come out to see what the four-year regional technical high school has to offer.

The South Shore District includes the towns of Abington, Cohasset, Hanover, Hanson, Norwell, Rockland, Scituate and Whitman.

South Shore Vo-Tech offers programs in auto body, automotive, carpentry, cosmetology, culinary arts, drafting, electrical, graphic arts, health careers, heating, ventilation and air conditioning, electronics, precision machine technology and welding metal fabrication.

The annual open house will also have technical and academic displays along with baking and pastry displays. For more information on the open house, call 781-871-4153.

Volunteer for Make a Difference Day

You can get out and enjoy the beautiful fall weather with family and friends and Make a Difference at the same time. This year there are 20 elders in the community looking for assistance with cold weather preparation and fall clean-up over the weekend of Nov. 14-15.

A two-hour commitment to assist neighbors with general fall clean-up (i.e. leaves, storage of lawn furniture, etc.) is suggested.

Leaf bags and dump transport provided. This is a wonderful opportunity to bring generations of the town together and make some new friends.

If you have any questions or are interested in volunteering please contact: Patty Cunningham at 781-383-1378 or Pamela Turpel at 781-923-1199.

Guitarist Aaron Larget-Caplan returns to First Parish Nov. 15

Classical guitarist to perform Nov. 15

Guitarist Aaron Larget-Caplan returns to First Parish Cohasset after an acclaimed concert last spring. He will be performing a program called "Dance Bach Sleep" at First Parish Cohasset Sunday, Nov. 15 at 4 pm. First Parish is located on the green at North Main Street. Admission will be $15 for adults and $12 for seniors and children.

"Dance, Bach, Sleep" is a program of exotic dances from Spain and Latin America, works by Bach, and new lullabies. The new lullabies are a special feature of this program, and have been composed specifically for Aaron through his New Lullabies Project. This concert will include the Cohasset premiere by the young composer Joshua Hahn. At the end of 2006 Aaron began commissioning composers to write a brief lullabies for guitar solo. To date, Aaron has given the world premiere to 16 new lullabies in New York, New England, and Italy, from composers throughout the United States. More information about the New Lullabies Project can be found at www.NewLullabyProject.com.

More about the performer:

With performances in Spain, Italy, and on both US coasts as a soloist and chamber musician, Aaron Larget-Caplan rides the razor's edge of the guitar. Born in the guitar capital of Oklahoma and raised in Colorado, Aaron began playing the classical guitar at age 16 and gave his debut at the Tabor Opera House one year later. Since then he has devoted his life to the performance and study of the guitar, and the concert stage. He has appeared repeatedly on National Public Radio in New York, Oregon, Colorado and Maine.

A versatile musician, Aaron is the founder of ¡Con Fuego! a Spanish music and dance group. He also founded 'Diablo y Tango', a guitar and violin duo that focuses on the music of Paganini, Piazzolla and other Latin American composers. He has received awards and grants from the American Composers Forum, D'Addario Foundation, Denver Classical Guitar Society, Mu Phi Epsilon, New England Conservatory, and the Massachusetts Cultural Council. Enamored with new music, Aaron has premiered over a dozen new solo or ensemble compositions, many of which are dedicated to him, by such composer as Daniel Pinkham, John McDonald, Lior Navok, José Elizondo, and Kurt Erickson. He is also a passionate educator, and introduces Spanish and classical music and history into schools and other community settings through cultural programs and artist residencies. Aaron's debut CD, "Tracing a wheel on water," was released in 2006, and his second CD is due out later this year.

Aaron is a graduated from the New England Conservatory of Music in Boston, where he studied with David Leisner and Eliot Fisk. He has performed and studied at festivals in Italy, Spain and across the United States. He continues his studies of body physics and geometry and its relation and application to playing and teaching of the guitar with wife, healer, and muse, Catherine Larget-Caplan.

SALOME'S STARS FOR RELEASE WEEK OF NOV. 16, 2009

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) A long-sought workplace change could be happening soon. Consider reworking your ideas and preparing a presentation just in case. A personal relationship takes a new turn.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) Your persuasiveness doesn't really start to kick in until midweek. By then, you can count on having more supporters in your camp, including some you doubted would ever join you.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) Your workload is still high, but — good news! — you should start to see daylight by the week's end. Reserve the weekend for fun and games with friends and loved ones. You deserve it.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) Regardless of how frustrating things are, keep that "Crab" under control. A cutting comment you might think is apt right now will leave others hurting for a long time to come.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) Be more sensitive to the emotions of loved ones who might feel left out while you're stalking that new opportunity. Be sure to make it up to them this weekend. A nice surprise could be waiting.

VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) The gregarious Virgo rarely has a problem making new friends. But repairing frayed relationships doesn't come easily. Still, if it's what you want to do, you'll find a way. Good luck.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) A misunderstanding with a partner or spouse needs to be worked out before it turns into something really nasty. Forget about your pride for now and make that first healing move.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) Communication dominates the week. Work out any misunderstandings with co-workers. Also get back in touch with old friends and those family members you rarely see.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) As busy as your week is, make time for someone who feels shut out of your life. Your act of kindness could later prove to be more significant than you might have realized.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) Congratulations. Your busy workweek leads to some very satisfying results. Sports and sporting events are high on your weekend activities aspect. Enjoy them with family and friends.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) Your generosity of spirit reaches out once again to someone who needs reassurance. There might be problems, but keeping that line of communication open eventually pays off.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) You are among the truth-seekers in the universe, so don't be surprised to find yourself caught up in a new pursuit of facts to counter what you believe is an insidious exercise in lying.

BORN THIS WEEK:
You believe in loyalty and in keeping secrets. All things considered, you would probably make a perfect secret agent.

Fun By The Numbers

Like puzzles? Then you'll love sudoku. This mind-bending puzzle will have you hooked from the moment you square off, so sharpen your pencil and put your sudoku savvy to the test!

Here's How It Works:

Sudoku puzzles are formatted as a 9x9 grid, broken down into nine 3x3 boxes. To solve a sudoku, the numbers 1 through 9 must fill each row, column and box. Each number can appear only once in each row, column and box. You can figure out the order in which the numbers will appear by using the numeric clues already provided in the boxes. The more numbers you name, the easier it gets to solve the puzzle!

Nancy M. Kinchla

Nancy M. Kinchla

COHASSET – Nancy M. (Kiely) Kinchla died peacefully on November 2, 2009 at the age of 60, from complications of appendix cancer.

She was born and raised in Quincy, where she attended Archbishop Williams High School in Braintree. She graduated from Regis College in Weston, and began a career in telecommunications. She was one of the first women to participate in New England Telephone's management training program, and later consulted with the Polaroid Corporation for nine years. She joined Harvard University in 1990, and retired as the Director of Communications in 2009. Ms. Kinchla served on both the Boards of the Cohasset Community Center and the Archbishop Williams High School, and she was a volunteer with the Dana Farber One to One Program and the Cohasset Appalachian Service Project.

Ms. Kinchla moved to Cohasset 36 years ago, where she raised all four of her children. She was involved in many community groups and she was a communicant at St. Anthony's in Cohasset and Glastonbury Abbey in Hingham. She enjoyed vacations on Cape Cod and frequent trips to the Berkshires.

She is survived by her beloved children: John and Amanda Kinchla of South Deerfield, MA; Brendan and Olga Kinchla, and grandson Alexander Kendall of Wallingford, CT; Alison Kinchla of South Hamilton, MA, and Daniel Kinchla of Cohasset, MA. She was the daughter of the deceased Nina Marie and Kendall Hugh Kiely and sister of deceased Nina Mary and Kendall Francis Kiely. She also leaves behind the Kielys of Louisville, Kentucky, including Patricia Kiely and the late Kendall Kiely's four children and numerous grandchildren, as well as an extended family of Kinchla brothers, sisters, nieces and nephews.

The family would like to extend gratefulness to all the friends and family who have supported Nancy through her illness

A Funeral Mass was celebrated at St. Anthony's Church, 10 Summer St, Cohasset, MA at 10 a.m. Friday, November 6, 2009. Relatives and friends invited. Visiting hours 4-8 p.m. on Thursday at the McNamara-Sparrell Funeral Home, 1 Summer St. (Across from St. Anthony's Church), Cohasset. Interment Beechwood Cemetery, Cohasset.

In lieu of flowers, donations may be made to the Cohasset Appalachian Service Project, 43 Highland Ave., Cohasset, MA 02025.

Learning from the master

Local performers join composer John Bucchino on stage

By R. Scott Reedy
CORRESPONDENT

Composer John Bucchino has written songs performed by everyone from Liza Minnelli, Judy Collins, Barbara Cook and Harvey Fierstein to cellist Yo-Yo Ma. In Boston this week, 25 local performers – including eight from the South Shore – will join the award-winning composer for concerts of his music on Friday and Saturday at the Roberts Theatre in the Calderwood Pavilion at the Boston Center for the Arts. Before they join Bucchino on-stage, however, the performers will participate in intensive master classes with the prolific tunesmith.

"I'm very proud of our greater Boston theater community, and happy that so many of them have been selected for this important opportunity," said veteran performer Danny Bolton of Braintree by telephone last week. "It is really good to be able to work directly with someone of John Bucchino's caliber. Each performer has to strike a balance between process and presentation. We wanted them at performance level for John so we asked that they audition for the master classes as if they were auditioning for a performance. I just want it all to go great for everyone."

As stage manager, Bolton will play a key role in making sure that happens for Bucchino and his students for the week, who include Peter Furlong and Ryan Vona of Weymouth; Kelly McIntyre and Heather Glenn Wixson of Braintree; Mary Ann Schaub, Amy Strong, and Hayley Travers of Quincy; and Brittney Morello of Easton.

Dan Bolton

"I'm orchestrating the whole week which is being presented by the Vox Humana Project and Eric Larivee Enterprises. Each singer has one hour to work one-on-one with John before they come together as a group. Work on the group numbers was already well underway before John arrived."

Bolton, a member of the Equity acting company of the IRNE Award-winning Wellesley Summer Theatre – which also includes Lisa Foley of Scituate and Charlotte Peed of Weymouth – who is also known for his appearances at SpeakEasy Stage, Reagle Players, and the now-defunct Theatre Lobby, has great admiration for the composer who made his Broadway debut in 2008 with "A Catered Affair," winner of that year's Drama League Award for Best Musical.

"John Bucchino is an incredible story-teller. As a performer, I respond to his music because I see it as being very dynamic, colorful, and evocative," says Bolton of Bucchino, who has written the scores for the off-Broadway musicals "Urban Myths," "Lavender Girl," and "It's Only Life," and the Dreamworks animated film "Joseph, King of Dreams." Bucchino was also lyricist for the children's musical "Simeon's Gift," which featured music by Ian Fraser and a book by Julie Andrews and her daughter Emma Walton Hamilton. As part of its "Julie Andrews Collection," HarperCollins published "Grateful, A Song of Giving Thanks," a 2003 children's book based on Bucchino's song, which was awarded the Parents' Choice Gold Award.

Bolton, who joined the faculty of the non-profit Creative Arts Community School for Theatre, Music, and Art in Reading this spring and who will be featured this holiday season with his Victorian Carolers Troupe at Hingham's Derby Street Shoppes, South Shore Hospital in Weymouth, and the South Braintree Board of Trade, believes part of what makes Bucchino so successful is his connection with performers.

"I had a few telephone conversations with John over the past few weeks to prepare for his time in Boston and I came away from each feeling like I was learning so much and he wasn't even here yet."

John Bucchino will accompany 25 local performers in concert at the Roberts Theatre, Stanford Calderwood Pavilion, Boston Center for the Arts, 527 Tremont St., Boston, on Nov. 6-7. For tickets and information, visit the box office, call 617-933-8600 or go online at BostonTheatreScene.com.

— COHASSET CARVER—

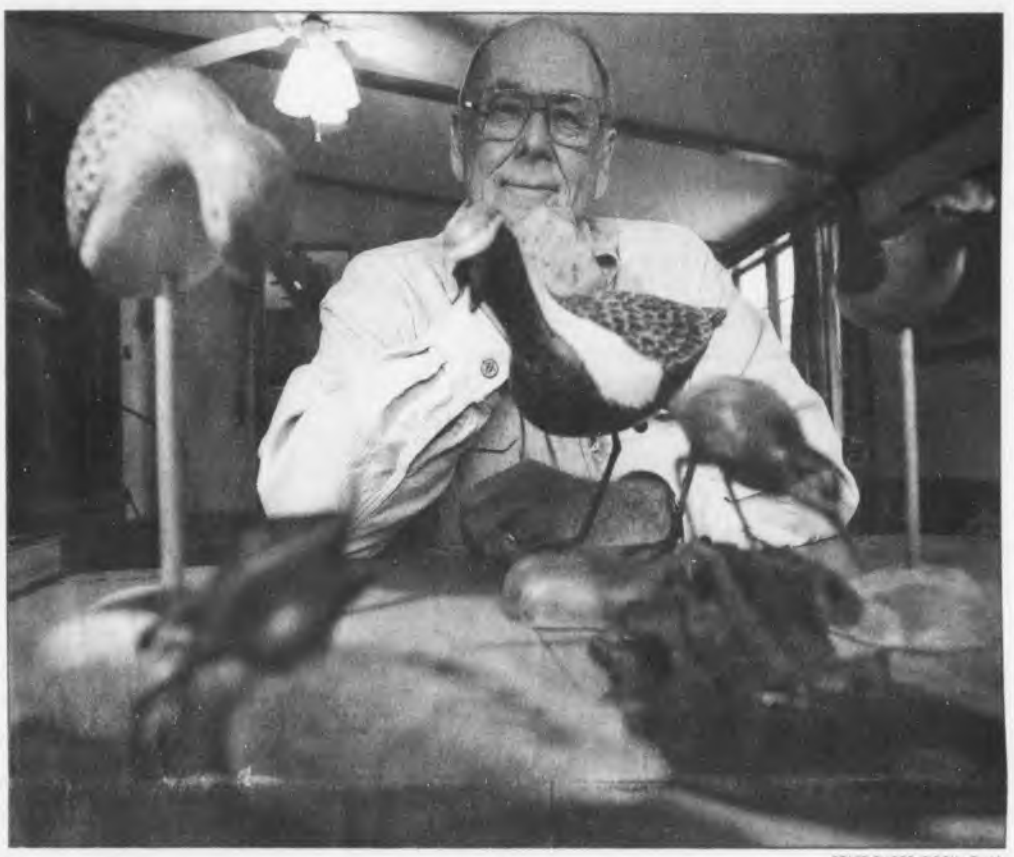
'Start with a piece of wood'

Buckley is an accomplished bird decoy carver

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

For Al Buckley buried within a block of wood is a bird waiting to emerge. Like a bird hatching from an egg, under his careful and skilled hands, Buckley can carve a realistic representation of a variety of different avian species.

From the blue heron to bobwhite quail, Buckley is a woodcarver specializing in the folk art of bird decoys.



Working with their hands is a Buckley family tradition. However, the family background is not in woodcarving, but in blacksmithing. On the hand-carved sign in front of his house are the name Buckley and an anvil.

When his grandfather emigrated from Ireland, he and his five brothers worked as blacksmiths in the Boston area. Buckley's grandfather built a horse-drawn buggy business. His father built a business in steel and after high school, Buckley joined his father's business in steel fabrication.

In the late 1940s and 50s, Buckley and his brothers built many of houses in the Forest Avenue area (Linden Drive, Surry Drive, and Rustic Drive). He built his own house set back off Forest Avenue. He has lived in Cohasset since 1956.

The house-building experience taught him skills in working with wood, but when he took up bird decoys, it was a whole different arena.

"When I started I didn't know what I was doing – my first ones look like gophers," Buckley says with a laugh.

Al Buckley of Forest Avenue looks over a number of the bird decoys that he has carved over the years.

Buckley started woodcarving in 1978 as a member of the Scituate Woodcarvers Guild. He first learned relief carvings and signs, and then over time was steered toward the skilled folk art of carved bird decoys.

"It's been a wonderful thing for me, getting together with other people, swapping different ideas," Buckley says. The community of bird decoy carvers is a close-knit one, locally and nationally. Models of birds used as decoys have been utilized in North America for hundreds of years, according to Buckley.

He says he has had the opportunity to learn from very good instructors and friends who have taught him patience and skill. Thirty-one years later after

Turbines blow back into town

CCI-Energy application remanded back to Planning Board

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

"All we know now is that we have the opportunity to make a presentation of the information at a public hearing."
— Ken Ingber, attorney for CCI-Energy

It's back.

Some may cringe, some may rejoice, but there is no way around it. The two-turbine project proposed by CCI-Energy is coming back to the Planning Board.

On Tuesday, Nov. 24 at 7:15p.m., the Planning Board is scheduled to hold a public hearing to consider the applicant's modifications to the special permit application.

The project application, put forth by a private developer, Plymouth-based CCI-Energy, proposes the installation of two AAER 1.65-megawatt sized wind turbines sited off Route 3A on the hill behind Graham Waste Services and Hingham Lumber.

In early May, the Planning Board voted 3 to 1 to approve the application. However, the vote was effectively a denial of the application because under state statutes, the application had to be approved by four members of the five-member board. (Planning Board member Jean Healey took office after the public hearing began and could not vote on the project.)

Planning Board vice chairman Stuart Ivimey was the sole opposing vote. The Planning Board's special permit decision was filed with the Town Clerk on July 9 and CCI-Energy filed its appeal of the decision to Land Court on July 20.

Since then the planning board has met in executive session with the applicant and as a result, the parties filed a joint request for remand back to the planning board. The attorney for CCI-Energy, Ken Ingber, said as of Wednesday evening they were still waiting for the Land Court's affirmation of the motion.

"The amendments offered to the application were sufficiently interesting (to the Planning Board) and worth assessing," Ingber said. The Planning Board must make their assessment in a public forum, which is what the public hearing

The Cohasset Mariner has a "drop box" and pickup location at Tedeschi's in the village. The drop box is on the counter in the front window around the corner to the left after you enter the front door.

The Mariner picks up at 8 a.m. on Mondays and Tuesdays. The drop box can be used to drop off glossy photographs, letters, flyers or other editorial copy.

Food Pantry collection

Cohasset residents can drop off non-perishable items for the Cohasset Food Pantry 24-hours-a-day at the Cohasset Police Station on Elm Street through the month of November.

There will be a big collection box in the lobby of the police station.

Adopt-a-street program

The Board of Health's Adopt-a-street program is looking for more participants. Families, organizations and businesses are welcome to join.

Health Inspector and program coordinator Tara Tradd has targeted additional areas of town that need a little help with litter.

Organizations, businesses, families and individuals can adopt a street, a portion of a street, park or other public place and keep it free of litter. If interested, contact program coordinator Tradd at the Board of Health office, (781) 383-4116 or by e-mail at tarat@townofcohasset.org.

Keno license not opposed

The Selectmen did not have an objection to the Keno license sought by the Blackstone Tavern, a restaurant located on Route 3A/King Street.

The Board of Selectmen notified abutters of the public hearing on the Keno license, but no residents showed up at the appointed time Monday night. In order to object to the Keno license, the selectmen had to hold a public hearing.

With the lack of opposition from neighbors, the Selectmen did not oppose the license.

The owner of the Blackstone Tavern was present at the hearing, but did not speak.

A resident and abutter to Blackstone Tavern did come later in the meeting after the Selectmen closed the public hearing on the issue. Selectmen chair Paul Carlson invited the resident to speak, but admitted there would not be much the Selectmen could do at this point.

"It's very prescribed legally," said Selectman Fred Koed.

Town Manager Bill Griffin provided the Lottery Commission's address so the resident could make his concerns known to the state.

The Board of Selectmen is currently appealing the decision of the state Lottery Commission that granted DiNero's Restaurant a Keno license. The Selectmen felt a Keno license would not enhance DiNero's already successful, established business and adding gambling to the predominately residential neighborhood would not be in the public interest. They also cited parking and noise concerns.

Overpaying for deed copies

Some Bay State homeowners are still being solicited to pay a private company $59.50 for "certified deeds" they could get directly from the Norfolk Registry of Deeds for just $2. "It may be legal, but I still think it's outrageous," said William P. O'Donnell, Norfolk County's Register of Deeds, of a direct-mail solicitation thousands of Massachusetts homeowners recently received.

In an official-looking letter that includes the homeowner's Norfolk Registry Book and Page deed citation, National Deed Service Inc. writes: "The U.S. Government Federal Citizens Information Center website recommends that property owners should have an official or certified copy of their deed. If you don't already have this important document, you may obtain one now." The letter offers homeowners one certified copy of their deed for $59.50, and then appears to offer a bargain by charging only $20 for a second certified copy. The firm's letters do disclose that many of these records "are available free or at a nominal cost from government agencies," and notes that it is not affiliated with any governmental agency.

The Norfolk Registry of Deeds, 649 High St., Dedham, is the principal office for real property in Norfolk County. Registry land records back to the founding of Norfolk County in 1793 are available for online viewing at the Registry website, norfolkdeeds.org. A full-service customer service staff is available by calling 617-461-6101 or at the Registry's walk-in center to assist the public with certified copies or deeds, other documents or any Registry related matter.

POLICE BEAT

Quick thinking averts 'grandparent' scam

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

A 72-year-old Cohasset grandmother almost lost nearly $3,000 in the "grandparent" scam that has resurfaced. She received a phone call from a man, who said he was in Canada and claimed to be her grandson. The caller said he was in trouble and was crying. Before she could question him further another man took the phone who said he was a police officer. He explained that her grandson was not in trouble but his friends were and $2700 was needed right away to pay for the bond.

The Cohasset woman drove to Stop & Shop and completed a cash transaction to have the money wired to Canada. After leaving Stop & Shop, she drove to the police station to report the incident. The officer handling the matter recognized the scam right away and called Stop & Shop, which was able to stop the transaction.

The woman has caller ID and the number that showed up was all zeros, police said.

Cohasset Police continue to warn senior citizens to be aware of the telephone scam that surfaced last spring and is preying on grandparents nationwide.

The scam works like this: the grandparent receives a distressed phone call from whom they believe is their grandchild. The supposed grandchild typically explains that they are traveling in Canada and have been arrested or involved in an auto accident and need the grandparent to wire money to post bail or pay for damages — usually amounting to a few thousand dollars.

It is believed that scammers are most likely calling random numbers until they happen to reach a senior citizen. The scammers' basic tactic is to pose as a grandchild and let the unsuspecting grandparent fill in the blanks.

Police are advising seniors to confirm the status of the individual by calling them directly or verifying the story with other family members before taking any further action.

Police also advise that any request to wire money through Western Union or MoneyGram should be seen as a "red flag" and an immediate tip-off that the call may be part of a scam. Funds sent via wire transfer are hard to track once received by scammers and are usually not recoverable by law enforcement or banking officials.

Car on the tracks

A 74-year-old Norwell woman and her female passenger, also 74, were transported to South Shore Hospital following an accident at about 7 p.m. on Saturday (Nov. 7) on lower King Street by the grade crossing.

Police said the 1998 Buick LeSabre the woman was driving hit the curb on the traffic island and careened onto the tracks. Train service was interrupted for 30 minutes due to the accident, police said.

The Buick had substantial damage and had to be towed. The driver is being issued a citation for failure to stay in marked lanes.

Police said they call the MBTA immediately where there is any incident on the tracks and the trains are stopped immediately.

Speeding

At 6:30 a.m. on Monday (Nov. 2), police stopped a 1995 Nissan pickup for speeding along Route 3A. The stop resulted in the arrest of the 18-year-old Quincy operator because a computer check revealed there was an active warrant for his arrest for operating after license suspension.

Police said the teen's license was valid but he had not cleared up the criminal matter with Quincy District Court.

The officer clocked the pickup on radar as going 59 in a 35 mph zone on 3A near Beechwood and caught up to the pickup in Scituate. Police are allowed to make stops and arrests in another jurisdiction if it involves "fresh and continuous pursuit."

The driver was also given a speeding ticket.

Traffic offender

An officer was running radar on Route 3A near Beechwood Street at 3:10 p.m. on Tuesday (Nov. 3) when the officer observed a 2000 Chevrolet Blazer pass by with an expired registration sticker on the plate. The officer stopped the Blazer and ran a computer check on the 28-year-old Somerville man who was driving that revealed his license had been revoked for being a habitual traffic offender. The man was arrested for operating with a revoked license, operating an unregistered motor vehicle and having expired inspection sticker.

No license

At about 9 a.m. on Monday (Nov. 2) at the intersection of Route 3A and Beechwood Street a two-car crash sent two people to the hospital with non-life-threatening injuries, police said.

A 2000 Dodge pickup was headed north on Route 3A and was attempting to make a left onto Beechwood when it pulled in front of a 2001 Chevrolet Cavalier traveling south and headed straight.

The 65-year-old Scituate man operating the pickup truck was cited for failure to grant the right-of-way.

The 25-year-old Plymouth woman operating the Cavalier and her passenger, a 36-year-old woman, also from Plymouth, were transported to the hospital.

Both vehicles were towed.

The 25-year-old Plymouth woman is being summonsed to court for operating without being licensed.

Registry check

An officer who was conducting traffic enforcement on Forest Avenue ran a random registry check on a 1993 Jeep Grand Cherokee that was being operated by a 58-year-old Cohasset man. The computer revealed the registration and been revoked and the vehicle was not insured.

The officer stopped the SUV that was later towed. The Cohasset man is being summonsed for operating with revoked registration and without insurance.

Alleged child abuse

At 12:30 p.m. on Thursday (Nov. 5), a Cohasset woman reported seeing a grown man throw a four- or five-year-old boy on the ground at the Beechwood Ballpark, then kick him, hit him and swear at him before dragging him over to a gray SUV and throw him into the back of the vehicle before driving off. She described the man as being tall and wearing a black, leather jacket. Police interviewed the witness at her home and found her to be very credible.

Detectives are investigating and police are keeping an eye on the ballpark and talking to people who regularly use the park. There were no other witnesses at this time.

Drug paraphernalia

A Deer Hill student turned in a glass pipe typically used to smoke marijuana to the principal's office. The student found the pipe on the soccer field and the principal turned it over to police. The incident took place at 12:13 p.m. on Friday (Nov. 6).

White stuff

A 74-year-old Parker Avenue resident called police about a white, chalky substance on his driveway which he thinks is vandalism. The investigating officer thinks the white substance may be bird droppings. The resident has requested extra patrols.

Rock thrown

A youth football coach is going to handle the incident that occurred between two boys, ages 10 and 11, at last Friday's high school football game, police said. One of the boy's mothers came to the station and said another boy had hit her son in the head with a rock during the game. One boy is from Cohasset and the other is from Scituate, police said.

Forty three year old lowers cholesterol by 50 points!

Joining Get In Shape for Women was the best decision I have ever made. I have lost weight and inches and feel great about myself. I have lowered my cholesterol by 50 points.
My endurance and strength have improved drastically. I have been challenged and have never been bored with the work-outs and the interval cardio training has turned me into a runner. Since joining, I have lost over 25lbs, 11 inches, and 5% body fat. I can't thank the staff enough for all of the time and effort they put into helping me succeed. I would highly recommend Get In Shape for Women for anyone who has weight to lose and or health issues.

CCI-Energy application remanded back to Planning Board

is for, Ingber said.

"All we know now is that we have the opportunity to make a presentation of the information at a public hearing," Ingber said.

Planning Board chairman Al Moore said in his 20-plus years on the planning board there have been circumstances where an application has been remanded back to the planning board, but he did not believe there had ever been one on a special permit application.

The remand order, Moore said, there was no guarantee of approval.

He expects the public hearing on the project will generate a fair amount of interest from the community.

However, he said, he would make clear that this round of public hearing(s) was not an opportunity to scrutinize the entire application. "It doesn't open the whole thing up again," Moore said.

The public hearing process for the CCI-Energy's special permit application, the first under the town's wind energy conversion bylaw, was contentious, controversial and drawn out. The public hearing process began for the project in early September 2008 and concluded in early May. In between, there were hours of developer and public comment entered into the record as well as hundreds of pages of data and public comment submitted.

With the remand, the public hearing is for a "limited purpose," specifically the public hearing is on those issues related to the denial.

In the denial decision, the Planning Board named five general areas of concern: visual impact, noise, excessive noise, vibration, or light, ice and/or snow throw, and structural integrity.

In a press release from CCI-Energy, the modifications to the application are outlined.

First, the applicant is proposing an additional safety measure during conditions when ice drop could occur. CCI-Energy will propose installing software so that in the case where ice formation on the blades is sensed, the entire nacelle (the hub where the blades originate) will rotate in such a way to the ice will not drop over Crocker Lane or the two buildings owned by Graham Waste.

Second, CCI-Energy will bring forth information for specific opportunities where the town and residents could have financial benefit. These include real estate taxes, electric energy costs (if the town entered into an agreement with CCI-Energy to purchase energy) and green community benefits.

Ingber noted, however, the entire field of green energy is still evolving specifically in its regulations and interpretations.

"Although on some level these details appear to be minor technicalities, they in fact have very substantial ramifications in any particular project, including ours. We have tried to furnish as many details as we can, but understand there are many assumptions we are making and we will need to be flexible as things progress," Ingber said.

Third, CCI-Energy will propose providing up to $1000 reimbursement per household in the Rose Hill development (Sanctuary Pond Road) to be used for any tree planning to create a visual buffer. Sanctuary Pond Road is the closest residential neighborhood to the proposed turbine project. (The to-be-built 200-unit Avalon apartment complex will be closer). In a letter to the Planning Board office, the applicant additionally proposed providing up to $50,000 for the construction of a sidewalk from the end of Sanctuary Pond to King Street, an asset those neighbors sought previously.

Lastly, the applicant has proposed to financially support up to $6000 an educational program at the high school to give students real-time access to electrical generation information associated with the turbines.

As of Thursday morning, planning board administrator Jo-Ann Pilczak said there were two new documents on file at the planning board office for public review. The documents concern a CCI-Energy commissioned sound study submitted in September and a peer review by the Planning Board's sound engineer consultant.

The sound study uses the same data, but utilizes more conservative parameters. In addition, the sound study also details a shift in location for both proposed wind turbines in an effort to reduce the noise impacts on the surrounding area.

Jim Sweeney, president of CCI-Energy, is looking forward to bringing the project back before the town.

"We're definitely very excited to be given the opportunity to present additional information," Sweeney said. "It is another opportunity for Cohasset to become green."

Over the summer, the planning board also heard a preliminary sub-division filing brought forth by CCI-Energy. The application, which the Planning Board requested more information on, proposed a new access road off Route 3A. The application also proposed making the current two lots, one of which is home to the capped Graham Waste landfill, into three. CCI-Energy's application for two commercial-sized wind turbines was on the same property as the subdivision filing.

Sweeney said that application, which has been postponed several times since its initial hearing in early July, is currently on the backburner.

Special TM is 7p.m. Monday at High School gym

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

The business set for Monday night's Special Town Meeting hasn't grabbed many headlines in the past few weeks. Still, like every town meeting, important issues affecting Cohasset for the near and distant future will be discussed.

This Monday, Nov. 16 at Special Town Meeting will convene at the Cohasset High School Sullivan Gymnasium at 7p.m. Voters will be asked their collective opinion on a total of nine articles, or items of business, including budget amendments, Community Preservation projects and a proposal to create a Planning Board associate member.

Selectmen Chairman Paul Carlson recognized the lack of a major controversial issue, but is nevertheless expecting a quorum to be ready to tackle the issues on the table come Monday night.

"We do have a number of important matters that must be decided by Town Meeting. I strongly urge everybody to come out and participate in town government," Carlson said.

One of the issues he expects to face some debate on the floor is the proposed easement to Abbott Homes-Cohasset, the developers of the Cook Estate.

"The authorization for a possible Abbott Homes easement is a classic example of the long-standing conflict between development and conservation," Carlson said.

Town Manager Bill Griffin agrees the easement will generate discussion, as well as the Planning Board's article seeking an elected associate member position and an allocation of $20,000 for the demolition of condemned house on Hull Street.

Before the meeting can even get started, a quorum of 100 registered voters is required. Once a quorum is determined at the start of the meeting, it is assumed a quorum is present throughout the meeting unless challenged. If challenged the number of voters will be counted, and if a quorum does not exist, the meeting will be adjourned.

Each article will be taken up one at a time, a motion will be made, and votes will typically be taken on a voice basis. Town Moderator Dan Evans once again will oversee the proceedings having the task to keep discussion on point and courteous.

• Article 1 would amend the fiscal 2010 operating budget. The town is proposing one amendment to the budget previously approved at the annual Town Meeting in March.

Town Manager Bill Griffin told the Selectmen earlier this week that the most recent state aid allocation to the Town of Cohasset for fiscal 2010 remains very similar to the projection made going into the annual Town Meeting. However, new growth revenues for fiscal 2010 of approximately $323,000 fall short of the original $400,000 projection. As a result, the Board of Assessors has voted to release the sum of $77,000 from the fiscal 2007 and 2008 overlay accounts to allow the town to maintain a balanced budget and set the fiscal 2010 tax rate.

• Article 2 involves the snow and ice deficit. Special Town Meeting will be asked to authorize a transfer of $203,111.78 from Free Cash to fund the remaining fiscal 2009 snow and ice deficit.

• For Article 3, Town Meeting will be asked to consider several Community Preservation funding requests: $50,000 to be transferred to the Affordable Housing Trust; $40,000 to be set aside for debt incurred in the purchase of open space around Lily Pond; $10,000 for the construction and bid documents to restore Meetinghouse Pond on the common; and $35,000 to address safety and drainage concerns at Beechwood Ballpark.

• Article 4 is put forth by the Planning Board. The article asks Town Meeting to allow the election of an associate member to the Planning Board who would sit in (and possibly vote on) special permit applications. The associate member would vote on projects if a regular Planning Board member were ineligible to vote due to absence from one of the public hearings, inability to act or conflict of interest, or in the event of a vacancy or an application that crosses an election. The associate member could help maintain a full five-member Planning Board vote in the case of special permits application under the following bylaws: wind energy conversion, transit-oriented district, cluster development and the village business district bylaw.

• Article 5 and article 6 request changes to the tax deferral bylaws. Article 5 would allow the Board of Assessors to increase the qualifying gross receipts limit for seniors to defer their property tax. Article 6 extends tax deferral capability for military service to permit National Guard and Reserve Military personnel who are called to active service to defer their taxes while deployed.

• Article 7 concerns the demolition of property at 137 Hull St. The Board of Health is seeking a $20,000 appropriation to properly demolish the house. The condemned home is rapidly deteriorating and is an attractive nuisance especially for children and young people, Board of Health officials said. The house is currently boarded up and locked and unsafe for human habitation. A lien will be placed on the property to allow the town to recover all the expenses incurred.

• Article 8 seeks authorization for the Board of Selectmen to grant an easement for approximately one-acre to Abbott Homes, the developers of the Cook Estate. The easement would be for drainage purposes and to provide for necessary erosion control.

• Article 9 puts on the books a long-standing practice in Cohasset and in cities and towns throughout Massachusetts to move retirees out of the town's health insurance and into Medicare program coverage along with supplemental health insurance coverage (the cost of which is shared between the town and the retiree) when they turn age 65. A general law needs to be adopted by the town indicating the statute. Town Manager Bill Griffin said it was unclear if the town through a town meeting vote or ballot question had ever adopted a statute. Both Town Counsel and MIAA (Massachusetts Interlocal Insurance Association) recommended the statute be adopted so there is no question it is on the books.

Pond, ballpark want CPC support

$135,000 in recommendations to go before Town Meeting

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

Two town assets, both of which have previously been supported by Community Preservation funding, were back again for additional monies.

The Community Preservation Committee met Tuesday night to evaluate the projects in preparation for Monday's Special Town Meeting.

According to its proponent Merle Brown, the Meetinghouse Pond needs a complete makeover and was seeking approximately $230,000 to do it. Glenn Pratt, speaking on behalf of the Beechwood Ballpark, sought $30,000 to address infield drainage problems and a safety concern at the park.

Both applications walked away from Tuesday night's Community Preservation Committee (CPC) meeting with a recommendation for funding: $10,000 for the development of construction and bid documents for the pond and $35,000 for fencing and drainage improvements at Beechwood.

On Monday, Town Meeting voters will have the final say on the allocations. Funds from the CPA can be spent in four specific areas: open space, recreation, affordable housing, and historic preservation.

Last fall, special town meeting allocated $15,000 to do the preliminary engineering work to restore Meetinghouse Pond, the pond on the Common. This year, Brown and civil engineer, John Cavanaro, were before the CPC seeking the monies to execute the restoration designs.

The renovation plans include creating a system where water can be re-circulated through the fountain. Right now, the pond is fed almost continuously with domestic water. More controls would be incorporated to limit the waste of water.

The current four-foot wide sidewalk would be extended an additional foot to accommodate a new retaining wall. The disheveled concrete stairs would be replaced with an ADA-compliant ramp for increased accessibility.

Preliminary construction estimates are $230,000 for the clay bottom and $310,000 for the concrete bottom, but the project would have to go out to public bid. At a recent Board of Selectmen meeting, the board unanimously supported the clay bottom option. The last time the pond was rehabilitated was in the late 1980s.

Some members of the CPC were hesitant to spend the amount of money requested on the project given the town's financial situation. CPC vice chair Jeff Waal asked if there was a way to lengthen the life of the pond without doing a complete restoration.

"Any compromise (we come up with) will shorten the lifespan of the project," Cavanaro said, adding the construction costs would likely go up in the coming years. Cavanaro said the restoration he was proposing would likely be a 50-year fix.

"Every frost season there are more and more signs of deterioration. The option of doing nothing will cost more in the future," Brown said.

However, the $230,000 price tag seemed too much for most of the committee to swallow.

"It's a heck of a lot of dough and given the state of the economy, the state of our accounts, this is pretty much going to strap us," said CPC chair Stuart Ivimey, adding he recognized the high visibility and historic value of the pond. "The bottom line is this project is going to make us broke."

After discussing several different funding options, the committee voted to take a small step toward making the restoration project, which falls under the historic preservation category of the Community Preservation Act, a reality.

The CPC is recommending to Town Meeting a $10,000 allocation for the development of the final engineering drawings and preparation of the bid documents. If this allocation is approved, they expect to revisit the project before the Annual Town Meeting in March.

In the meantime, Ivimey requested other sources of funding (grants, federal stimulus money, private donations) be sought to offset the cost of the project.

Beechwood Ballpark

The short left field at Beechwood Ballpark makes for a good number of home-runs, but also creates a safety situation for the children and parents in the playground, located just on the other side of the fence. As a result, Glenn Pratt and Merle Brown, co-chairs of the Beechwood Ballpark Committee, were back to seek funding to install additional fencing to protect those in the playground from fly balls. Estimated cost is $15,000.

Pratt said the exact remedy for this problem, whether is a net, 40-foot chain link fence or some other solution, would be worked out by collaborating with the neighborhood.

Also, Pratt said the infield drainage was not done properly.

"We need to address (the drainage) to make the ball field playable," Pratt said. The estimate to address the drainage was $10,000.

CPC member Ralph Dormitzer said he was "very disappointed" to have this issue back before the CPC. He said when he visited the Beechwood baseball field during construction; he took note of the infield drainage problems and notified Pratt and Brown.

"It's a shame we have to pick it up again for a mistake," Dormitzer said.

The Beechwood Ballpark is the largest project Community Preservation has undertaken in its existence. A total of $630,000 was allocated by Town Meeting for a complete restoration of the baseball diamond, the basketball court and toddler playground. The field was officially opened in fall 2007.

The CPC voted to recommend a $35,000 allocation to address the safety and drainage issues at the ball field, which includes contingency funding.

CPA match cut again

Cohasset receives 35 percent match

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

For the second year in a row the state's percentage match to the town's Community Preservation surcharge has been lowered. This year, the town is set to approximately receive 35 cents for every dollar collected by the town.

Last year, the town received a 65 percent match and in years previous a 100 percent match was received from the state.

During the last fiscal year Cohasset taxpayers contributed approximately $345,000 to Community Preservation funding and the state is matching those funds with $120,170.

The CPA's funds are generated from two sources, a town real estate tax surcharge (in Cohasset it's 1.5 percent) and some level of state match, determined year-to-year. The state funds are derived from a $20 surcharge on all documents filed in the Recorder of Deeds office statewide (e.g. mortgages, deeds, homesteads, etc.).

Community Preservation funding can only be used for very specific purposes: open space, recreation, affordable housing, and historic preservation.

There is pending legislation to ensure communities that have adopted the Community Preservation Act receive a 75 percent match, but Cohasset CPC chairman Stuart Ivimey said Tuesday night he wasn't hopeful it would come to fruition in the near term.

"There's no stomach for this increase this year with the state budget going the way it is going," Ivimey said.

The fiscal 2010 base payment of a 34.8 percent match to locally raised funds is more than 65 percent lower than the dollar-for-dollar match received in the first six years of the CPA program. According to the Community Preservation Coalition, the Department of Revenue estimates that the distribution will fall again next fiscal year, likely as low as 28 percent for many communities.

In the CPA legislation as currently written, the state match can go as low as 5 cents for every dollar collected locally.

Last October was the first time in CPA history that the state match was not a 100 percent dollar-for-dollar match of the town CPC surcharge.

In planning for the next fiscal year, the CPC keeps its revenue projections conservative. This year, Ivimey said he forecasted a 25 percent match, so the CPC ended up with more money than they though they would have. Translated into numbers, this fiscal year, the CPC estimated a state of $81,000 and ended up with $120,000, which meant $38,920 more than they anticipated.

This year, the number of communities receiving matching funds reached 135. Due to the popularity of the program, the distribution for this year uses a formula so towns across the state, which have adopted the Community Preservation Act, are slated to receive anywhere between a 35 percent match to a 100 percent match. In total, $31.5 million were distributed across the 135 communities.

Other recommendations

The CPC will also make recommendations to Town Meeting to allocate $50,000 to the Affordable Housing Trust and to set aside $40,000 to go toward retiring the debt incurred in the purchase of several open space lots in order to protect Lily Pond, the town's primary water source. The 20-year bond can be paid off in 2015 (after 10 years have elapsed) and, if it is paid off, it will save the town the interest obligation on the loan, Ivimey said.

'Downtown' Beechwood?

Zoning bylaws still on the books

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

A hospital in Beechwood – impossible?

Under the current zoning bylaws, a hospital is possible – and a variety of other non-residential uses.

In the Beechwood neighborhood there is a zoning anomaly left over from a time gone past. A triangular portion of land bordered by Doane, Beechwood and Church streets, comprised of 13 lots, is zoned "downtown business," or "DB."

Spurred on by a similar situation in the James Lane neighborhood — where two parcels that border a residential neighborhood are zoned village business district and neighbors are upset with a pending application for a condominium development — the Planning Board wanted to get an understanding of neighborhood sentiment in the Beechwood area.

The planning board sent out letters to 110 households in the Beechwood area asking the residents to come a meeting on Wednesday, Nov. 4. About nine households were represented at the meeting.

"We're not trying to do anything, we just wanted to talk about it," Moore said in a phone interview last week after the meeting. "Our thought was let's not wait until Walgreens wants to set up shop."

The "DB" zoning designation dates back to the pre-1950s when the Beechwood section of Cohasset had its own library, firehouse, gas station and variety store. The "Downtown Business" zoning designation means allowed uses in this district include, among other things: stores for the sale of goods at retail (including dry goods), food, apparel and accessories, furniture, marina products, fishing, boats and boating gear; miscellaneous trade and repair services and shops; appliance and furniture repair services; medical and dental offices; building supply showrooms; beauty salons and barbershops; banks; and, printing establishments.

"Beechwood has some allowable uses that may be troubling to some people," Moore said.

After a discussion where the Planning Board received many comments pro and con for changing the zoning – "some people thought it was a good idea, but a good idea to a point," Moore said.

With the economy, Moore is not expecting anything drastic to happen in the Beechwood area in the near future. The Planning Board said it would revisit the issue in January.

"Right now, we have no plan to change something," Moore said. "If there are concerns, we want to get them aired now, not when there is a gun to our head and a project is before us (the Planning Board)."

All zoning changes are vetted by the Planning Board, require a public hearing and would have to garner a two-thirds majority vote at Town Meeting.

Busy business owner finds time to lose 30 pounds!
My name is Debbie Webb. Since joining Get in Shape I have lost over 30 lbs. and many inches! Being a busy business owner and not being a morning person, I was reluctant to commit, but I have been dedicated to the program. I look forward to my early morning workouts with my trainer and am happy with the results in my weight loss and the overall improvement of my health, fitness and strength. When I pick up a 30 lb. dumbbell during my workout, I can't believe I used to carry that weight around with me. During my time here I was selected as client of the month and last month I celebrated my one year anniversary at Get In Shape.

Regional dispatch getting closer to reality

Inter-municipal agreement to be signed soon

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

Cohasset and three of its neighboring towns are inching closer to an inter-municipal agreement that would make a regional dispatch center a reality.

For more than two years, the towns of Cohasset, Norwell, Hingham and Hull, have been working on the idea of combining their emergency dispatch centers into one centralized location.

A final draft of the agreement could be coming as soon as next week. Selectmen did not raise any concerns at their Monday night meeting.

The regional dispatch center is expected to yield some savings for the town as well as improve services for all residents. As this is one of the first such efforts in Massachusetts, the towns are receiving grant support for the effort.

The four towns have received more than $3.2 million from the State 911 Department to construct and equip the regional emergency communications center (RECC). A location in the Hingham Town Hall, next to the current police headquarters, has been targeted for the new center.

In addition, the state formula favors a regional approach and therefore will provide increased annual allocations for the dispatch center. Currently, the state provides approximately $130,000 to support the dispatch centers across the four towns. With the RECC, the state 911 Department will provide over $400,000 in offsets to support its operation.

The grant money kicks in once two towns sign the inter-municipal agreement. The 19-page agreement, which all four towns would sign, sets the stage for the RECC. It establishes a Board of Directors (made up of each of the town's town manager or administrator), essentially a policy board, and an Operations Board comprised of the fire and police chiefs.

"We're going to save some money, but it also means a safer service," said Cohasset Town Manager Bill Griffin.

Among the expectations for improved service are faster 911 response times, emergency medical dispatch service would be provided across all four towns; certified dispatchers would provide pre-arrival care instructions in accordance with national standards; and regional 24/7/365 coverage would be available.

Griffin is expecting the regional center to cost approximately 65 to 75 percent of what the town is currently expending for emergency dispatch service operation.

Based on the cost allocation formula set forth in the inter-municipal agreement, which is based on the population and annual 911 calls for each town, Cohasset will be responsible for 15 percent of the total net annual operations cost of the RECC. The towns will share equally the capital costs of the RECC.

The agreement also covers the procedure for expansion to include more towns; how a community might withdraw from the region; or how the region might terminate the membership of a community.

"If (the town) is going to move forward on this, it's important for us to move forward soon," Griffin said. He said a finalized agreement could be ready for approval as soon as this coming Monday, Nov. 16.

The regional dispatch center does not require the same amount of manpower as the individual dispatch centers, which is part of the reason there will be cost savings. Griffin said an initial meeting with the dispatchers' union has been held and "they had a lot of questions." Hingham will be the lead employer at the dispatch center.

Griffin also pointed out that with the RECC the Cohasset Police Station will essentially be unmanned and locked overnight.

"It will need to be discussed if that is a level of service this community is willing to accept," Griffin said.

Parking lot MVA

Police responded to a parking lot accident at a gym on King Street involving a 2005 Chevrolet SUV, operated by a 47-year-old Cohasset woman, and a 2006 Toyota Highlander SUV, operated by a 58-year-old Scituate woman.

Police said both vehicles were backing out of parking spaces opposite one another when they collided.

There was significant damage to the Toyota and minor damage to the Chevrolet, police said. No one was injured.

Plate seized

Police seized the plate on a 1998 Jeep Grand Cherokee that was parked at the St. Anthony's Church lot at 12:48 a.m. on Tuesday (Nov. 3) after a computer check revealed the registration was revoked for nonpayment of insurance. A 61-year-old Cohasset man owns the jeep, police said. Police left a note on the car for the owner.

NEWSY WEEK

Hello Cohasset. How is everyone these days? I want to change things up a bit and wish everyone a very HAPPY Friday the 13th today! I know that I am ready to change the stigma and celebrate this date and not dread when it comes. Thank you for all that you do and have done for all of us. I know that the CHS Football team is doing well and I can tell you that your parents, friends and community are so proud of you all on your win last week against Abington and your continued success at what you do. Keep up the great work. We have some great things to talk about in this week's column so here we go.

I wanted to take the time to look back to this past Wednesday, Veterans Day and let all of our men, women and families who have served and continue to serve our country and sadly, honor and remember all those who have lost their lives while doing so. Your work and efforts are thought about and remembered each day throughout the year as well as honored on Veterans Day.

Thank Heavens For Little Girls says it all for two families and their new additions!

NEW ARRIVAL

Ella Marie Montgomery was born to proud parents Tyler and Jenny (Figueiredo) Montgomery on Oct. 14, 2009. She weighed 5 pounds 14 ounces and was 19 inches long. Grandparents, Jim and Judy Figueiredo and Tim and Donna Montgomery, are thrilled. Mom, Dad, and baby are doing great. Congratulations to all on baby Ella, she is a sweet little girl who will bring love to you all each day.

BABY GIRL

Congratulations go out to Alexander Dippold and Jean (Healey) Dippold on the arrival of their daughter, Genevieve Fenlon Dippold, who was born on October 17, 2009. Genevieve's grandparents are Paul and Esther Healey of Hingham, and Ron and Janet Dippold of Skaneateles, New York. Happiness, love and of course, the color pink will be abundant in the days and months to come!

MEETING MILEY

Eleven-year-old Holly Maher of Cohasset had the chance of a lifetime this week! She was invited to meet Miley Cyrus at her sound check and rehearsal before the star's big concert Monday night at TD Garden in Boston.

The "meet and greet" was made possible through the generosity of the Boston Bruins' owners, Charlie and Kim Jacobs, who donated the item as part of Children's Hospital Boston's "Champions for Children's" fundraiser, which raised over $2.5 million for the hospital in its annual event earlier this month. Holly herself sings and plays guitar under the tutelage of Jim Armstrong. She is a student at Derby Academy.

COHASSET CAFÉ

The final Cohasset Café for this year will be held on Monday, Nov. 16th at the Lightkeepers House. All senior citizens are invited to this event for a holiday get together and a delicious breakfast will be served. If anyone would like or needs a ride to the Café, please contact the Elder Affairs office at 781-383-9112 and all look forward to seeing you there.

PHOTOGRAPHER

Photographer and Norwell resident Cary Wolinsky will offer a talk on Sunday, Nov. 15, at 3 p.m. at South Shore Art Center and all are invited to attend. Cary will discuss his 35-year career as a National Geographic photographer and his fascination with textiles and culture, which resulted in the dramatic exhibition "Fiber of Life," on exhibit at theArt Center through Dec. 23rd. The event is free to all however reservations are needed to attend. For more information please check out the website at www.ssac.org

OUR WORLD

The Our World Children's Museum, also found on the web at www.ourworldcgdm.org is having Mr. Dykas Days on Mondays here for ages 3-1/2 to 5 and 6-10. Also at that museum are weekly programs and classes that will continue to run through December and you may join them at any time. The cost will be prorated and Our World needs at least 24 hours notice for your child to attend and join us in a program. For more information, please send an email to ourworldprograms@comcast.net or, call 781-383-3198.

GOLD AWARD

Here is a story that I am so impressed and honored to be including in this week's column. Meghann Salerno, a member of Cohasset Girl Scout Troop 4784 and an 11th-grader at Cohasset High School is in the process of earning her Girl Scout Gold Award. She is requesting your assistance to "Help her Help Our Town." The Girl Scout Gold Award is the highest Girl Scout Honor (similar to an Eagle Scout) requiring hours of planning, and organization. The project must offer lasting benefit to the community.

Meghann's project is to assist the Cohasset Fire Department to acquire an Automated External Defibrillator (AED) for the Cohasset Recycling Center and to support training to town employees and residents for the use of AEDs. An AED provides help in the case of a heart attack or heart failure. The system reads a victim's heart rhythm and delivers a shock to regulate the heart. The response time from the Cohasset Fire Department to the Recycling Center is approximately six minutes. In a heart related emergency, every minute counts. An AED at the Recycling Center could save lives. The AED plus required accessories would be approximately $2,000. The cost for training will be additional. Meghann seeks donations on behalf of the Fire Department. She would be honored and grateful if you would consider a tax-deductible donation payable to: Cohasset Fire Department AED Fund, C/o 477 King Street, Cohasset, MA, 02025. Absolutely a must in our town and just think how this could help if ever needed for your family, friends or community members.

ON STAGE

I know that there are many of you out there wondering, "Hmmm, I wonder what I should do this weekend that would be funny, enjoyable, well worth the money and allow me to have a fantastic time either alone or, hopefully with the many others that you invite to come along with you?" Well, guess what? I have the solution and it is so worth the time and money to attend. This is the last weekend to attend the Cohasset Dramatic Club's production of the smash Broadway hit "Lend Me a Tenor!" The extremely funny and talented cast keeps you engaged in this production throughout the entire show and, warm tasty popcorn, drinks and candy treats are available for purchase to enjoy during the show! The show plays tonight and tomorrow night at 7:30 pm and on Sunday, at 2 pm at Town Hall.

Tickets are priced at $16 for general admission and $14 for seniors, students and groups. They can be purchased at Paperscapes Cohasset Village, Buttonwood Books CJC Hwy, or via reservation at 617-697-2115. Tickets may also be purchased the day of the show, one hour prior to the show at the box office. This will be a show well worth the money and the memories will be fantastic!

That is all the news for now Cohasset. PLEASE HELP me and remember that in order for me to include your news in the column for any given week, I need to have the information to me NO LATER than Tuesdays by 5 pm and, ALL EMAILS need to be sent to my Around Town email address. I am working so hard to include all that is given to me in the appropriate amounts of time etc. but if it is not sent in the proper way, I cannot guarantee anything.

his first venture into artisan carving he has carved more than 300 bird decoys.

After getting pecked, so to speak, by the bird decoy bug, Buckley had to also take on the challenge of learning about the birds he was carving. A successful bird decoy carver combines the talents of naturalists, sculptors and painters to create the life-like avian representations.

"Creating a realistic bird is more important than anything," Buckley says. "It's very critical to have the size and description correct…you can't have a feather out of place!"

Seasoned judges at competitions can tell right away if something isn't right on your bird, he says, whether it is the size of the bird or the painted detail in the feathers.

He recalls one of his entries not even getting looked at because it was "too small" of a representation of the bird. He told the judge it was a "young bird," but it didn't sway him to take a closer look. "I had spent 30 hours painting that bird!"

Buckley does not consider himself a birder, or a bird watcher, partly because it doesn't allow the close study his craft demands. Instead he turns to the next best thing: an extensive library of bird books. When he sets out to re-create, in full size or in miniature, he studies the books and their photos in order to most closely emulate the real thing.

Before touching the wood, he'll draw out the side and top view to give him a guide to work by.

"Then you just start to whittle it down," he says. "You start with a piece of wood and you create something out of it," Buckley said. Each bird starts out as a block of wood, typically basswood because of its grain, and slowly, but surely, turns into something more.

He carves, mostly in the afternoon and evenings, in his basement workshop. With classical music in the background and a saw, tiny paintbrush or other instrument in hand, he relaxes.

Buckley's specialty is decorative and miniature bird decoys, but does dabble in working style decoys.

"I like doing the miniatures rather than the full size because you move along faster," Buckley says. "I'm always searching to do something better."

Recently, he has taken forays into fish carving; a life-like bass currently hangs in his kitchen.

"It's a new challenge," Buckley says.

Over the years, Buckley's bird decoys have garnered ribbons at various regional, national and world competitions, but the awards have always come second to his love and passion for the craft.

He does get commissions for bird decoys, but he prefers enjoying the creative process on his own time.

In the time it takes to create one of his bird decoys – and some can take four months from wood block to final detail painting – he develops a fondness for them.

Buckley's Forest Avenue home is filled with samples of his work and each room (and sometimes multiples in one room) there are "favorites."

"It's hard to say goodbye to them," Buckley says with a smile.

Al Buckley holds up a sketch that he used to carve a striper for one of his pieces.

"It's been a wonderful thing for me, getting together with other people, swapping different ideas."

— Al Buckley

Another one of Buckley's favorite pieces is red-breasted mergansers feeding on fish which earned him second place in its category at the Ward World Championship Wildfowl Carving Competition at Ocean City, Md. in 2009.

Governor makes Cohasset stop

Patrick announces $450K grant for Jacob's Meadow culvert

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

There are 351 cities and towns to visit in the Commonwealth of Massachusetts — but Cohasset made it to the top of the list last Friday when Governor Deval Patrick came to town.

Shortly before 3:30p.m., residents, town officials, students, and merchants gathered in the village to meet and greet the governor. The governor was personable as he made his way through the village. He spent about an hour shaking hands, posing for photos, and talking with residents and shop owners.

The impetus for Patrick's visit was an announcement of a capital infrastructure improvement grant. Cohasset is set to receive $450,000 to repair and improve the Jacob's Meadow culvert and tide gates.

Standing on the sidewalk in front of Darilynn's, Patrick announced the grant to the crowd that came out to meet him.

"If we don't invest in the fundamentals of infrastructure, we won't be able to rebuild our economy," Patrick said. "Brick by brick is the way to build a strong community…this (grant) is as much of an investment in the community as it is in those bricks."

Patrick said the culvert work would help alleviate the flooding in the meadow and the surrounding homes.

"It is a critical project for the region as well as those residents inadvertently affected by the flooding," he said, adding the project was indicative of the small ways government can make a big difference. "It is symbolic of what we are trying to do in a simple and unglamorous way."

Patrick spent the better part of an hour going storefront to storefront greeting customers and business owners alike. In French Memories, a public school teacher thanked him for his support of education. Patrick, in turn, thanked her for doing what she does. When entering Darilynn's, state Senator Bob Hedlund teased the governor, "if you break it, you buy it!"

Inside Coastal Countryside, Patrick danced with a realtor. When exiting Pilgrim Bank, he asked how many banks there were in town and if they were mostly focused on local lending.

This was not the first time Patrick set foot in Cohasset, "I'm not a stranger to Cohasset," Patrick said in his opening remarks to the community explaining that while attending Milton Academy, he became close friends with (then and now) Cohasset resident Melissa Browne and would often visit her home.

Patrick also gave a "shout out" to the undefeated Cohasset High football team, which was scheduled to play the undefeated Abington Green Wave that night.

The stop in Cohasset was one of two local appearances by Patrick on Friday. Patrick also spent time in Hingham and announced a $2.4 million grant to redesign the rotary at Hingham Harbor.

State Rep. Garrett Bradley noted Patrick's involvement in getting Cohasset a $310,000 public works economic development (PWED) grant to improve the village area, particularly the parking lot.

Tom Gruber, town engineer who worked with the Town Manager on projects that received state funding, points out some of the fruits of their labor to Gov. Deval Patrick. Selectman Karen Quigley is at right.

"If we don't invest in the fundamentals of infrastructure, we won't be able to rebuild our economy."

Jacob's Meadow culvert and tide gates

The culvert next to the Legion Hall is the only means water from Jacob's Meadow is exchanged with water from Cohasset Harbor — and that pathway is in bad repair. The state of the channel and culvert has exacerbated the ongoing flooding issues in Jacob's Meadow.

The repair and redesign of this channel and culvert have been in the works and town engineers, Tom Gruber and Mark Brennan, have spent the past year working on getting the permitting for the project.

The James Brook/Jacob's Meadow watershed covers over 860 acres of town. The James Brook watershed begins at Sanctuary Pond spreads out to the MBTA right-of-way and the former Edison plant on North Main and ends at Jacob's Meadow, which flows into the harbor.

In recent years major storm events have caused severe flooding in Jacob's Meadow. The intense flow of stormwater has caused the wastewater treatment plant, located on Jacob's Meadow to overflow, and flooded basements and backyards on Elm Street properties abutting the meadow.

Right now, the channel leading into the culvert is in bad repair and a portion of the culvert has collapsed, said Gruber.

The new design of the tide gates and a smoother channel are expected to provide two benefits, according to Gruber: increased flood control by allowing more water to empty from Jacob's Meadow and salt marsh restoration by allowing more salt water into the meadow to control phragmite growth.

"We're doing two good things in one fell swoop," Gruber said.

The installation of a new tide gates – automated gates that can also be controlled manually – will give the town more precision when controlling the flow of water into and out of the meadow, said Gruber.

The project comes with a cost estimate of $450,000. Funding and approval for the project was given at the 2008 Special Town Meeting. With the grant from the state, the town will not longer have to bond the money.

Gruber expects the project would be completed in the dry season in August, September 2010.

REST YOUR HEAD

Since headrests were first mandated for passenger vehicles over four decades ago, the risk of neck injury following rear-end collisions has dropped by nearly 20%. The risk of whiplash and other neck injuries could be reduced even further if drivers and passengers simply took the time to properly adjust their headrests. The National Highway Traffic Safety Administration mandated that headrests in vehicles manufactured after September 1, 2008, be positioned higher and closer to the head than they were previously. Some manufacturers have gone a step further by introducing "active" headrests and seatbacks that move forward to restrain the head when rear-end impact is detected. One study shows that these active systems produced a 43% reduction in whiplash-associated insurance claims.

Of course, headrests are just one safety feature on your car. Together with air bags, windshield wipers, tires and seatbelts, they can help save your life in a crash. With winter's icy roads on the way, now is a great time to get your car checked from bumper to bumper to make sure that all your safety features are in top-notch order. At ATLANTIC TIRE & ALIGNMENT, our ASE-certified technicians can provide the regular maintenance that your car needs to stay in good condition - and a car in good condition is a safe car. Call 781-925-3200 or visit our shop today at 25 Atlantic House Rd. If you've gotten in an accident, be sure to check out our sister store, Cohasset Collision Center, 179 Chief Justice Cushing Hwy., Cohasset, 781-383-3001.

HINT: A headrest should be positioned about one inch from the middle of the back of the head.

OPINION

EDITORIAL

Brave hearts, strong arms

On the 11th hour of the 11th day of the 11th month in 1918, the Armistice ended the bloody saga of World War I.

This conflict was believed by contemporaries to be the Great War, the war to end all wars, the war to make the world safe for democracy.

Yet the Armistice did not end war, because the enemies of freedom continued to spawn in the fetid waters of tyranny and radicalism.

And every time this threat hunkers down on the horizon, the response of the sons and daughters of liberty is swift and sure.

If the price of liberty is eternal vigilance, the cost of liberty is eternal defense against the enemies of a free society.

Down through the years, this cost has been met by the brave hearts and strong arms of our men and women in the military.

On Veterans Day, which has its roots in Armistice Day, we honor and thank all our veterans.

We acknowledge the courage and stamina of our military families.

Like the soldiers on the front line, our military families back home face a fearsome battle.

Today, as our troops serve in Iraq, Afghanistan and myriad "hot spots" over the world, the response is no different than it was in 1776, 1914,World War II, the 1950s Korean War era, the 1960s Vietnam era or during the Cold War. Our military families, all of the United States, face these hardships with stamina and endurance.

The War on Terrorism may be generations long.

There are days when we feel like this war may never end.

As we at home bear the burden, tears, loneliness and sacrifice of war, the image of our military men and women, marching just as courageously today as in 1776, rises up before us.

This image renews our resolve.

We know that ultimately freedom will be the victor.

Nineteenth century composer William W. How once wrote, "And when the strife is fierce, the warfare long, steals on the ear the distant triumph song, hearts are brave again, and arms are strong."

On Veterans Day, we give thanks to the brave hearts and strong arms of our veterans of yesterday, today, and tomorrow.

On Veterans Day, we revere those who gave their lives in defense of our nation in all wars.

When the sound of "Taps" echoes through the sky this Veterans Day, the notes will be both a reverent goodbye and a tearful blessing to our servicemen and women who gave their lives for their country.

We also revere the men and women, strong and sure as arrows, who currently fight the eternal fight on foreign soil.

We can hardly begin to comprehend the hardships our troops face, or to remember that our men and women oversees miss so many precious things we take for granted. Only in their dreams do they take part in family celebrations and embrace loved ones at home.

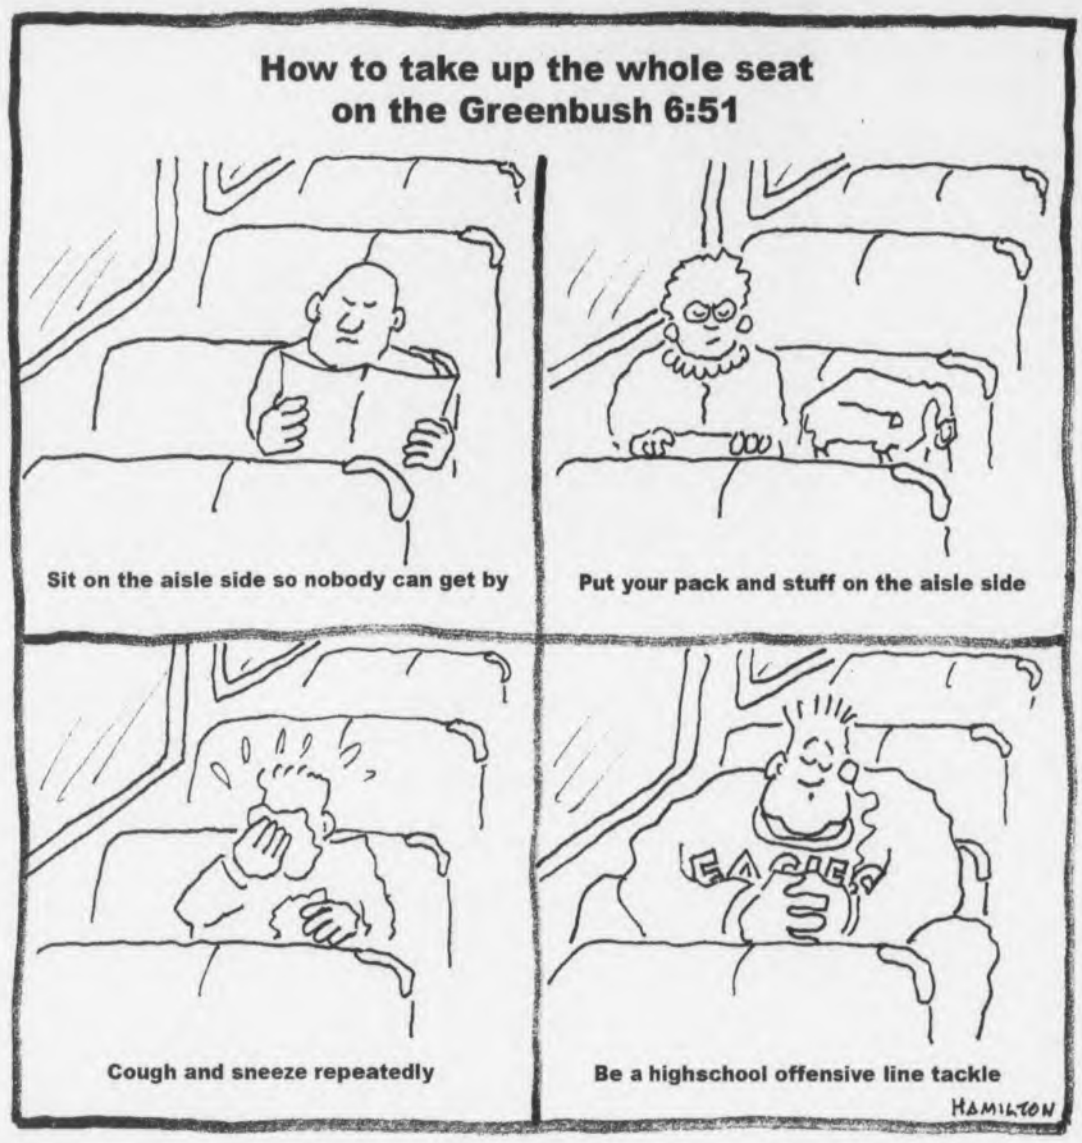
These are our veterans of tomorrow.

We owe a sacred debt to our veterans.

This is not a debt that can be paid in a single day. Let's resolve to carry our gratitude into action.

As Veterans Day ceremonies draw to a close, what will we do to support our troops as vigorously and selflessly as they defend us?

It's fitting that we should cheer and wave flags, and it is even more fitting that we do all we can to ensure our veterans have a hero's homecoming, quality health care when they return and all the benefits to which they are more than entitled.



It's fitting that we remember our neighbors with family members overseas with words of encouragement and friendly acts to help out when needed.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

No K-9s at Cohasset High

TO THE EDITOR:

I was reading the article about the proposed allowance of canine dogs possibly searching the schools for drugs and I must say, as a CHS alum, I strongly disagree with this being allowed. I graduated a few years ago from CHS and I loved it there. Police were present but not in a dominant way. More in the way that if you needed help, or if something bad happened, they were right there.

The idea of bringing in the dogs as another means of protection will not be seen that way by majority of students. This will only make students upset and will make them extremely distrust the police, if they don't already. I understand it's for the students' safety, but most students will not see it that way. The students at CHS are very safe but I know things can happen. I always felt safe at the school, even with all the threats against us while I was there. I never once thought anything bad would happen to me while I was there. Things happen and students/teenagers do things they shouldn't but bringing in a more severe search is not the way to change that.

Dispatcher, officer, ACO praised for kindness

TO THE EDITOR:

Board of Selectmen:

Editor's note: This letter was sent to Selectmen with a copy to the Mariner for publication.

This morning just before 8 a.m., I ran over my dog as I backed out of the driveway. I was alone and very upset. I called 911. Dispatcher Grant was very quick to reassure me that it was appropriate for me to have called and sent out Officer Wilson even though shifts were changing. Officer Wilson was very calming and helped me with the dog while we waited for Mr. Murphy to arrive.

Officer Wilson was able to get Luke into the car so that when Mr. Murphy arrived, we would be ready to go to the vet, Dr. Smith. Mr. Murphy stayed with me through the ordeal keeping me informed about Luke. Mr. Murphy helped me get Luke back in the car and then at home, he had to help get the dog out as well.

I want to thank these well-trained men for their assistance. I did not want to be alone since I was probably in shock myself. I don't have the words to tell you how grateful I am to the dispatcher Chris Grant, Officer Wilson and especially Paul Murphy! I feel very blessed knowing that we have such competent people to help in an emergency. Everyone responded so quickly and in a very caring way. Please commend them for the wonderful job they did helping me this morning. I applaud who ever it is that made the decision to bring these men onto the team of those who serve the citizens of Cohasset. That they were available and able to respond so quickly is of utmost importance to me.

Very gratefully yours,

Linda Snowdale

HEALTH NOTES

Adjusting to change in us, around us

By Steve Bobo
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

How can we go about keeping our minds and bodies fit?

A time for all things, one of the Beatitudes1, tells us that our world influences who and what we are. Our health, mental and otherwise is the result of conditions around us. The classics: heredity and environment — taught in earlier generations are supplemented by data from science, probability statistics, the weather and its many cycles and so many other things — it's impossible to list them all. The wave of environmental changes and the rate at which they are occurring all have an influence on each of us because each of us reacts differently to events that affect our lives. Even the way each individual brain processes data is vastly different. How then, can anyone, let alone a doctor, tell each of us all that's wrong if we don't feel well?

We are presently at the indifferent mercy of a great number of very strong factors: the financial system has taken a substantial drubbing with the collapse of the banking system. The shrinking value of money. specifically, the dollar, pressages hyperinflation. Global warming, a threat, if not a reality, worrys us; not to mention the plight of our political system. How can we go about keeping our minds and bodies fit?

Take time for recreational sports like tennis, swimming and others. It's not necessary to practice a variety of sports if you do enough to gain the recommended level of aerobic exercise as judged by expert doctors or trainers. Measures such as weight gain and perspiration; even smell, are measures for gaging aerobic exercise. Some exercise is to be used advisedly. Those that come to mind are contact sports and swordplay. Some of the less controversial sports are track, soccer. It's probably a good thing to seek advice on fencing , football and other contact sports.

Brain fitness is enhanced by repeatedly doing those things for which you wish to retain a capability. An example is driving. It's surprising how soon the ability to find the locations of discrete destinations once a driver has stopped regularly visiting them; particularly for older individuals. The problem is in part because of changes in the surroundings drivers use to identify routes. But often the driver forgets discrete scenes related to selected landmarks which no longer look the same. For example, repainting the color of a house along the route being taken can confuse a driver to the point that he becomes lost. An autumn or winter scene may be completely different from the same scene in summer. Keep your brain active by observing more carefully your surroundings and reflecting on their effect on those who see them.

'What a difference a week makes!'

MAKING TRACKS

TOM GRUBER & MARK BRENNAN

If you can read between the lines, there will be quite a few areas that just cannot be paved before winter sets in.

Paving, Paving and More Paving — As the saying goes, "What a difference a week makes." T L Edwards, our paving contractor, arrived in Town last Wednesday afternoon and began paving. The very first strip of asphalt was laid at the intersection of Highland Avenue and Robert Jason Road at the South East corner of the Common. By the end of last week, the entire Common area had been paved and North Main Street was essentially completed to about Ripley Road. It was great to actually see smiles on people's faces as they drove on the smoooooth new roadway. We agree that it was a long time coming.

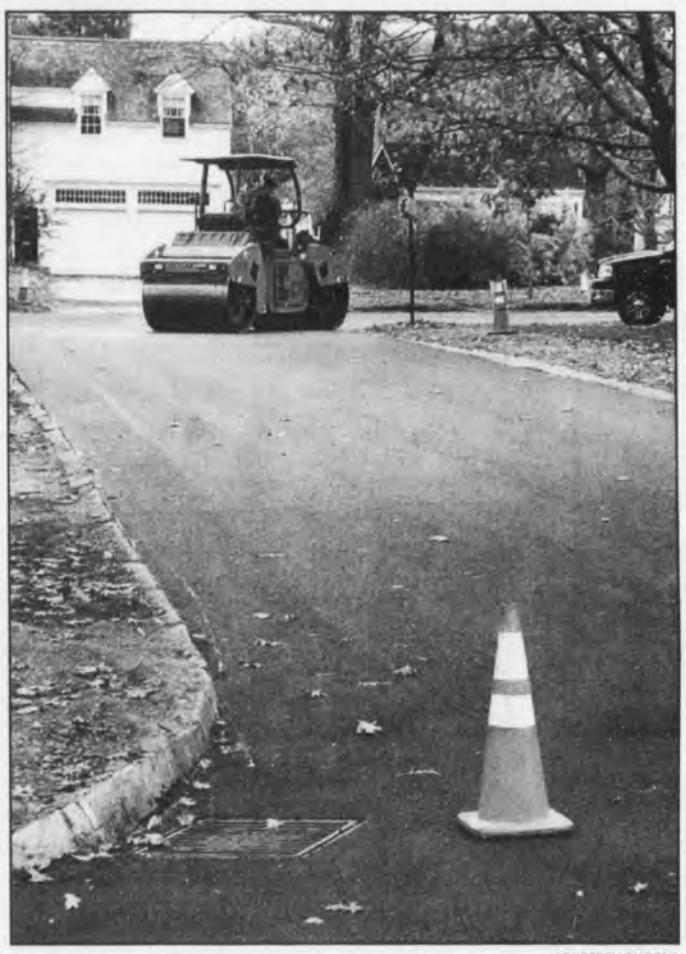
Early this week, North Main Street was paved to Red Gate Lane. This was followed by Red Gate Lane itself, including Fernway. From here Edwards moved to Joy Place and Gammons Road. As we have mentioned before, other roads prepped for paving are: the Logan Estate, the driveways on Jerusalem to the right and left of the Logan Estate. Sandy Beach Lane and Keene Way are also waiting for paving.

That's pretty much where we stand as we go to press. We are not sure how far we will get beyond the Joy / Red Gate area, before Edwards leaves for this week. We do plan to get them back and complete any of the above named roads before they start the next group of roads.

So where do we go from here? National Grid will be finished with their new gas main work on Atlantic Avenue. By mid-week they will have replaced all of the gas mains between Cunningham Bridge and Whitehead Road. It will be great to know that when this area is finally paved National Grid will not be digging it up to repair gas leaks. It would be our intent to then prepare all of the small roads on the water side of Atlantic Avenue from Whitehead to Hobart Lane for paving and to get them paved. We'll just have to see if we can pull this off before the snow flies.

If you can read between the lines, there will be quite a few areas that just cannot be paved before winter sets in. Among these are Jerusalem Road, itself, Beach Street and Atlantic Avenue. We do appreciate that these roads are rough and have some trouble spots. We will be patching and shim coating these roads in spots to improve them for the winter. Shim coating lays a thin layer of asphalt over the worst areas. It is not intended to be permanent, but just a temporary measure that will get us through the winter. Shimming and patching will not create a panacea, but will improve the roads for the winter resident usage and for plowing activities.

Last Friday — By now you probably learned of the surprise visit by our Governor, Deval Patrick, to our little community. The stated purpose of his visit was to see the results of the $310,000 grant that his administration awarded to Cohasset to complete Phase II of our village revitalization project. Governor Patrick was accompanied by Senator Hedlund and Representative Bradley as the Governor toured the village area. The Governor meandered through the commercial area and stopped and spoke warmly with almost all shopkeepers and business owners in the area.



However, the real reason for his visit was much larger than looking at the completion of Revitalization Project. The Governor announced that the Commonwealth was awarding our little Town $450,000 for the Jacobs Meadow outfall project. As you may know, storm water from a good portion of the Town ranging from Lower King Street nearly to Beechwood Street drains into Jacobs Meadow. From there its only path to the harbor is through the channel alongside the Legion building, under the Veteran's Memorial and through two flapper gates and one special tide gate. Over the years the Legion channel has partially collapsed and the tide gates have not proven to be a very effective flow control solution.

This project will replace the Legion channel and the gates with facilities that will not only provide more control over flow in either direction, but with increased flow capacity. This means that we will be able to get more salt water into Jacobs Meadow to create a healthier salt marsh and will be better able to let extreme storm water flows move to the harbor quicker. Better marsh health and less flooding sounds like a good thing to us!

A woman ahead of her time

FAMOUS BIRTHDAYS

MARY KENNEDY

Sor Juana Ines de la Cruz (Sister Jean of the Cross):

November 1648 – April 1695

One of the most important poets of the 17th century was a woman and a nun and a feminist.

Juana Ramirez, the illegitimate child of Spanish parents, begged her mother for permission to dress as a boy and attend the university in Mexico City. At age 12 she had already mastered Greek logic and Latin. Silly girl. Only men allowed. In the 17th century most Roman Catholic authorities considered educating girls nothing but the dark work of the devil.

As a teenager, Juana Ines, bright, beautiful and witty, became something between a curiosity and a prodigy. Presented at the Viceroy's court for questioning by 40 of Mexico's most learned scholars, she stunned them with her knowledge on literature, history, theology, philosophy, and science. The Viceroy was pleased, and his wife promptly appointed her as a maid-in-waiting. Some years later in Madrid, a Jesuit teacher in Madrid read the transcripts of her "interview." Astonished at the brilliance of her responses, he wrote: "This woman is a man in every respect." High praise indeed for a mere woman.

So strong is the appetite/For being loved, so definite,/That though we know it profitless,/We never learn to forfeit it.

Among the literate nobility of the Court, Juana Ines continued her quest for intellectual excellence, mastered several musical instruments, and wrote popular ballads and love sonnets. She was not always discreet. One of her poems openly pokes fun at men who condemn prostitutes in public, while using them in private: Who sins more, she who sins for pay? Or he who pays for sin? Curious by today's standards, but at that time while the dreaded Inquisition demanded piety and obedience, it also tolerated "unsanctified" sex and illegitimacy, including the bastard children of – supposedly – celibate priests.

A paradox of confinement and freedom marked her adult life. In the convent, a wise choice for a woman without proper name or dowry, she was cloistered for life, yet enjoyed economic security and social respectability. As a bride of Christ, she dedicated herself to poverty, chastity, and obedience. In her suite of comfortable rooms, however, (complete with servant), she amassed a library of some 4,500 volumes – the largest private collection in the Western Hemisphere. In her literary salon she entertained the leading intellects of the university and the cultured nobility of the royal court.

There is no obstacle to love/In gender or in absence/For souls, as you are well aware,/Transcend both sex and distance.

As for chastity. What about Sor Juana's romantic inclinations? Was she ever in love? With a man? With a woman? Was the new Viceroy's wife, the beautiful and educated Maria Luisa, more than just her benefactor? Do those poems reveal the ecstasy and torture of erotic love? Or do they simply reflect the complex patterns of Baroque poetry, full of allegory, sometimes impenetrable?

There in Egypt/all the sages/by a woman were convinced/ that gender is not of the essence/ in matters of intelligence.

To please the Church she wrote morality plays, carols and hymns – one of which, "Tocitin," connects the images of the Virgin Mary and the Aztec Earth Mother. For the entertainment of the Court she wrote worldly comedies and long philosophical poems. In a prolific outpouring of essays and letters – one of which has been hailed as the first feminist manifesto in the Americas – she passionately defended the rights of women to seek education and creative fulfillment. "Without logic," she asked, "how could I know the structure of the Holy Scripture?" Using biblical and historical evidence, including St. Catherine's triumph over the philosophers in Alexandria, she pointed out the advantages to a society that encourages the education of women.

In 1688, the Viceroy and his wife returned to Spain. Unprotected, fearing the wrath of the Inquisition, openly castigated by the new Archbishop, she signed documents of repentance "for having lived so long without religion in a religious community." A conscientious rejection of "sins" or merely a rote act of contrition? Her books, and musical and scientific instruments were confiscated.

As a teenager, Juana Ines, bright, beautiful and witty, became something between a curiosity and a prodigy.

When plague struck the city, Sor Juana cared for her convent "sisters" until she too contracted the sickness and died in 1695. Many of her writings were seized and burned by the Inquisition. Fortunately, many survived.

Her biographer, Nobel-prize winner Octavio Paz, believed that Sor Juana's poetic works were the most important produced in the Americas until the arrival of Emily Dickinson and Walt Whitman in the 19th century.

Teel's tales from the Cold War to Iraq

CALLING ALL VETERANS

RONALD WHEATLEY

COURTESY PHOTO

Sgt. Forrest Teel of Cohasset, middle, as a scout in Iraq during Operation Desert Storm.

"My team was flying combat search and rescue. If an aircraft went down we would secure the pilot and either destroy the aircraft and leave, or secure the aircraft and wait for it to be taken out. . . . I was sitting in the jump seat in the helicopter and I heard the order to change missions. I had five second to change the mission. We diverted to the new mission and captured the first POWs for the 82d Airborne Division during Operation Desert Storm," said retired Sgt. 1st Class Forrest G. Teel of Cohasset.

A 1975 high school graduate, Teel first joined the National Guard.

"I wanted to be a police officer," he said. "While I was in basic training at Fort Knox, Ky., I thought I liked the life. I saw an in-service recruiter and I joined the regular Army."

Originally assigned the clerk typist military occupational skill, Teel soon found himself training to be a cavalry scout for the armored cavalry.

"We trained in armored personnel carriers (APCs). There was a lot of weapons training involved — everything from M-16s, M-60 machine guns, and 50-caliber machine guns," he said.

When Teel finished his training, he was assigned to the 2nd Squadron, 1st Cavalry.

"Eighteen months later, they sent me to Germany, where I served from 1979 to 1982," he said. "We spent nine months of the year in the field training. I was part of the ground deployment of a mechanized infantry operation, the 1st of the 36th Infantry Battalion, Third Armored Division. At that time, the border between East and West Germany was still real. We had a mission to relieve the 11th Armored Cavalry in place, if the balloon ever went up in the Fulda Gap"

Teel explained that the Fulda Gap was where the border of East Germany penetrated deep into West Germany.

"So if they just broke through the border, there they could get like a 100 kilometers instant jump," he said.

Teel summarizes the Cold War exercises in Germany.

"It was always us watching them and them watching us," he said. "We always had no notice alerts with 3 a.m. calls. The scouts had 90 minutes to move out and occupy."

Teel and his men spent a lot of time camping in the woods and living in tents in the rain and snow.

"That's where I got to cross-train with NATO forces," he said. "I trained with the Belgians, the French, the Italians and the elite British Special Air Services (SAS) at that school and was picked to train at the Scottish Non-Commission Officers Academy."

When he returned to the United States, it was time for Teel to put his NCO skills to a test.

"I applied to drill sergeant's school. I was accepted to train at Fort Knox, Ky.," he said.

Of that experience Teel recalls, "There was a tough professional standard. It was like being on all the time."

Teel graduated with honors and was assigned to a new unit, the Sixth Cavalry for 12 more weeks training scouts.

"It was 24/7 and 12 to 16 hours a day," he said. "So one of us would be the early man and one would be the late man. The early man came at 4:30 a.m. and left at 8 p.m. The late man came at chow, around 8 a.m., and left at lights out."

"Where's my drill sergeant?" That's how every day of training at the Army's three-week intensive jump school began for Teel. It was the early morning call of the jump school cadre's drill sergeant. He had a special place in his heart for former drill sergeant Teel

"They had a thing called the gig pit," said Teel. "The gig pit was a big pit full of sawdust that was kept wet. They inspected you each morning. I'd pass inspection, but every day I went to the gig pit anyway. You had to crawl into the gig pit on your belly using your elbows and legs to push, but not up on the knees. Once in the gig pit, they made you do physical training, and then you joined the others for the rest of the day's training."

Teel had risen to platoon leader, but there was still more specialized training.

"We had to get the skills to be scouts for the 82nd, which required infantry tactics, airmobile tactics, among other things," he said.

Teel called this segment of his training the most physically tough in his life.

"The thing I'd like you to know is that those kids were the best soldiers, bar none, that I ever had the privileged to serve with," he said.

On Aug. 2, 1990, the Iraqi Republican Guard invaded Kuwait and seized control of that country. That triggered a United States response, Operation Desert Shield, to deter any invasion of Kuwait's oil-rich neighbor, Saudi Arabia. On Aug. 7, deployment of U.S. forces began as Desert Storm.

"We got the word to go; we were a follow on force for the 24th Mechanized Division," Teel said. "By then, we had our humvees and so we performed recon for the division. Because the 24th Mechanized was in front of us, it was a swath of destruction as we followed. We were ahead of the 82nd since we were its scouts. We went all the way to just south of the Euphrates. We wound up at a place to turn around, near Tallil Air Base in Iraq. We secured the airfield and we took hundreds of POWs out of there."

A hundred hours after the ground war began, President George H.W. Bush declared a cease-fire.

Teel completed his 20 years of service and retired. He went on to earn both bachelor's and master's degrees in computer science. He works for General Dynamics as a systems engineer in Taunton. Among his many military decorations is an Air Medal.

Ron Wheatley is a veteran and a Scituate resident.

HEALTH NOTES

Adjusting to change in us, around us

FROM HEALTH, PAGE 12

Use it or lose it — Remembering stuff. Your brain will wear down and grow old as does everything animate and inanimate. Nevertheless, it's necessary to keep all parts of it in use, since unused elements of the brain will degrade simply with the passage of time. Your brain has a special way of handling muscle actuators which with age may lose their tone. For example, a person's may lose the habit which allows the creation of an even smile.

Word Games — puzzles in the paper, acrostics cross word puzzles, etc. are good brain exercise and do much to keep one sharp and articulate and don't forget to read, which supplies a stream of new facts into your brain.

Remembering what you've forgotten — Old and new memories, visual and pictoral, sharp and dull, are a crazy quilt of impressions your mind uses as stimulants to influence your life style as well as your relationships with others.

Friends and pets are the beneficial balm in our in our associations with other living things. They are relationships that need care and are worthy of special attention in our busy lives. Always make time for pets and friends.

Twitter — The difference between friends and acquaintances is demonstrated by the mindless acquisition of electronically connected acquaintances represented by Twitter. Such activity and the effort required of it would be better spent by finding a few worthwhile acquaintances and cultivating them. Hopefully such systems are a passing fad.

Calling all fashionistas for Fashion Night

Cohasset Village If South Shore fashionistas missed Fashion Week in Boston and New York this fall, they can make up for it next Thursday night (Nov. 19) at Fashion Night in Cohasset, sponsored by Cohasset Village boutiques, Pink Tulip Clothes & Accessories, Ports & Co., and Wendys Closet.

The event, to be held at Focus Gallery, includes a fashion show featuring the latest fall and holiday styles. The evening continues after the fashion show, as all three stores will stay open until 9:30 p.m. and offer attendees special discounts, gifts and refreshments.

In addition, the night of the event, the boutique owners, along with Sullivan Garrity and Donnelly Insurance Agency, Inc., are collecting donations of women's suits for the non-profit Dress for Success. The Dress for Success organization promotes economic independence of disadvantaged women by providing professional attire, a network of support and the career development tools to help women thrive in work and in life.

Donations are welcomed to be dropped off at the office of Sullivan Garrity and Donnelly Insurance Agency, Inc., at 15 Depot Court (next to Focus Gallery) prior to the Fashion Night fashion show.

Rec Fair garners state award

Last March, Cohasset Recreation held the first annual Recreation Fair. Local sports organizations, health and fitness clubs, and representatives from many of the recreation programs set up tables to inform the public of what's available right in town.

Flash forward to months later, Recreation Director Ted Carroll told the Selectmen this week the Rec Fair received an award from the Massachusetts Recreation and Park Association. The fair was recognized for excellence in the field of Program Outreach. The award is given for a "program over and above regular programming that demonstrates a benefit to the community."

Carroll and Recreation Assistant Mike Barra are already working on the second annual Recreation Fair. The event will be held on Sunday, March 21, at the Deer Hill School.

Carroll also brought other news from the Recreation Department:

• The Golden Living Center of Cohasset awarded the Recreation Department three grants. They gave $300 to sponsor a summer concert, $500 to sponsor the summer program, and $1929 for a public address (PA) system.

• The South Shore Vocational Technical High School has chosen the Recreation Center (formerly the garage) as their HVAC project for the year. The students will be replacing the heating unit with a new heating and air conditioning system. Carroll said he estimates the town will save over $13,000 in labor costs.

• Cohasset Recreation is holding a Used Sports Equipment Yard Sale on Saturday, Nov. 21 from 10a.m. to 2p.m. at Cohasset Town Hall. The proceeds from the sale will help support recreation programs and donations are being accepted beginning on Monday, Nov. 16.

• Cohasset Recreation is partnering with the Clark Chatterton Memorial Fund to organize and execute the Thanksgiving Road Race. For more information, visit www.cohassetrec.com.

Register online up to one hour before each party. Popcorn, pizza, and beverage will be included. Activities will include billiards, ping pong, music, Nintendo Wii, air hockey, and other fun activities. Nov. 20, 6:30 to 8:30 p.m. at Cohasset Rec Center. Fee is $8.

GPS For Mariners – This course is a modern learning experience that focuses on GPS equipment typically owned by the recreational boater. This course is the result of an exciting synergy between textbook's publisher, the book's author, and the Auxiliary. Fee is $35.

Both courses take place at Cohasset Town Hall on Saturdays from 9 a.m. to 1 p.m. BS&S: Nov. 7, 14, 21. GPS: Jan. 9

Computer Explorers – Meets Tuesdays at Cohasset Recreation Center

Engineering: Those who like building with Legos will enjoy this class. Students use LEGO materials to build simple and complex machines as they learn about structures, forces, gear math, simple machines and motorized projects. Using teamwork and a series of challenges, groups will work together to create motorized systems and advanced challenges.

Junior Engineering: Nov. 17 through Dec. 22, 4:45 to 5:30 p.m. For ages 7 through 9. Cost of the six-week class is $90.

Kids Just Love Crafts – Join others for a jam filled program of ooey, gooey arts and crafts, stories and songs. Watch your 2 to 4 year-old child make a mess and have some fun as they create crafts that can be treasured for a lifetime. Space is limited to 10 children with a parent; Session 3: Jan. 7 through Feb. 11; Session 4: March 4 through April 8; Session 5: April 29 through June 3. Takes place at the Cohasset Recreation Center on Thursdays, from 10 to 10:45 a.m. Fee is $60.

Kitchen Kids

The Gingerbread Man – Get into the holiday season by creating your very own Gingerbread friends. Each child will decorate gingerbread cookies with royal icing and sweet treats galore. We will read the story "The Gingerbread Man." Care giver must attend. Ages 2-6. Fee is $15 per child. Sunday, Dec. 6 from 12:30 to 1:30 p.m.

Gingerbread House – Get into the holiday season by creating your very own mini mansion. The workshop includes festive fun, a pre assembled Gingerbread house, royal icing and sweet treats galore. Hot cocoa and cookies will be served. Sign up today. All ages. $35. Sunday, Dec. 13, from 12:30 to 2 p.m.

Babysitter Training Course – This one-day, three-hour course is designed to assist fifth through eighth graders to be better babysitters and to learn the do's and don'ts of being home alone. The course will cover information on child development, playing with younger children, basic first aid, fire safety and prevention and the overall responsibilities of babysitting. Instructor: Kim Cleary, nurse and mom. Each class is limited to 18 pre-registered students. Takes place at Paul Pratt Library, Saturday, Nov. 21, from 9 a.m. to noon. Fee is $18.

Happy Dog Obedience Training – A variety of dog training classes will be held at the Cohasset Recreation Center all fall and winter. For more information call 781-857-1239. happydogtraining.com

Good Manners for Beginners class offers beginner – level instructions in all of the dog obedience commands including heel work, and offers problem solving demos on issues like mouthing and jumping and helps you become "leader of the pack." Obedience and Distractions is for dogs who understand very basic concepts such as "sit, stay, come, and down" but who have trouble being consistent. The class teaches dogs to listen with greater distractions each week, less and less leash control, with the owner further and further away. Events listed below have no requirements other than a good temperament and up to date vaccinations. Every Wednesday for five weeks, Nov. 18 through Dec. 16. 6:30 p.m. Obedience with Distractions Class; 7:30 p.m. Good Manners for Beginners Class. Fee is $120.

Vacation Xtreme and December Stay-cation – Just because the kids have the time off from school doesn't mean you've got the time off work, so Cohasset Recreation is picking up the slack with vacation week programs for children of all ages.

Vacation Xtreme – For children in grades six, seven and eight, expanding upon the popular Summer Xtreme program, the Xtreme Team will be offering vacation week trips to all new destinations. More information to come. Call or check the Web site for details.

December Stay-cation: For children ages 6 through 10. A variety of arts, crafts, stories, and games will be enjoyed. Facilitated by recreation staff. It's the best way to spend your December vacation, right here in Cohasset. Dec. 28 through 31, from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. Fee: $80.

Play-Well TEKnologies LEGO Engineering – Pre-Engineering Ages: 5 to 7. Create, play, and learn. Build a town, city, or star base with houses, buildings, pyramids, bridges, tunnels, towers, and more. Build motorized cars, trains, buses, and trucks; race them; crash them; repair them. Explore the many possibilities of LEGO building systems while learning useful construction techniques. Four-day program. Monday through Thursday.

Engineering FUNdamentals – Ages: 8 to 12. Design and build motorized machines, catapults, pyramids, demolition derby cars, truss and suspension bridges, buildings, and other constructions. Explore concepts in physics, mechanical engineering, structural engineering, and architecture while playing with your favorite creations. This is a hands-on and minds-on class suitable for LEGO building system novices to "maniacs." Returning students will work on new projects and challenges. Four day program. Monday-Thursday at Cohasset Recreation Center. Session I: Dec. 28 through Dec. 31. Pre-Engineering: 9 a.m. to noon and FUNdamentals: 1 to 4 p.m. Fee: $144 per four day Monday-Thursday program.

As the game clocks winds down to zero, Cohasset players rejoice in their 14-0 shutout over Abington to remain undefeated and control their own destiny as far as a South Shore League title is concerned. A win tonight (Friday) against Norwell would clinch the league championship for the Skippers.

Cohasset blanks Abington in battle of unbeatens

By William Wassersug
WWASSERS@CNC.COM

All streaks come to an end and it did for previously unbeaten Abington High School last Friday night.

The Green Wave, winners of four consecutive South Shore League championships, lost a heart-breaking 14-0 decision to Cohasset at Alumni Field.

For Abington (8-1 overall, 4-1 in the league) to capture the 2009 South Shore League title, the Green Wave must beat Mashpee tonight and Cohasset must lose its final two games, against Norwell tonight and to Hull on Thanksgiving Day.

Football

Cohasset is the only unbeaten team in the SSL.

If Cohasset beats Norwell tonight, the Skippers will be the SSL champions. They will play in the MIAA Div. 3A semifinals on Dec. 1. "This means that we're 8-0," Cohasset coach Pete Afanasiw said. "It means that we have one more game to win in order to clinch a playoff berth. It's a great feeling, it's a wonderful experience, but we still have some unfinished business."

"This is unbelievable," Afanasiw said. "I'm still in awe with how well the defense played. They couldn't have given up more than 150 yards. We

Sci/Co Sharks give Marshfield the shivers

Advance to Super Bowl Sunday vs. Bridgewater

Q: What is a shiver of sharks?

A: A shiver of sharks is a group of sharks. It can also be called a school of sharks. This is similar to phrases like "pack of wolves" or "herd of sheep" or "flock of crows." (From Wikipedia Q&A.)

On a weekend of football on the local scene that saw the Cohasset High football team take a big step toward securing a berth in the Super Bowl with its exciting win over Abington on Friday night, the future stars of Cohasset High, the Scituate/Cohasset Mites Sharks fourth grade football team, comprised of many members of what will be the CHS Class of 2018, turned their own Super Bowl dreams into reality with an 18-8 triumph over the Marshfield Rams Sunday afternoon on the Hingham High football field.

Tough end to strong season

By Ryan Wood
RWOOD@CNC.COM

Girls' Soccer

After losing a bulk of its players from last year's Division 3 South Sectional championship team, the Lady Skippers put together a solid run this year and got into the postseason tournament as the No. 8 seed. After walloping No. 9 Nantucket, 10-0, in the first round, the Cohasset girls lost, 6-0, to an unbeaten Norwell squad that outscored its opponents 49-2 at home this season.

Norwell scored three goals in the first nine minutes, which wiped out Cohasset. The Lady Clippers went ahead, 5-0, by halftime before scoring the sixth goal in the 49th minute.

"It was absolutely deflating," Cohasset Head Coach Deb Beal said about going down 3-0 less than 10 minutes into the game. "It was tough to see them lose 6-0. It wasn't a matter of being unprepared, but it seemed like after every step we took forward, we took two back."

Missing junior forward Danielle Sookiasian due to an injury, the Lady Skipper did a little bit of shuffling around up front, but it was the team's back line that, unfortunately for made plays at crunch time and never broke. It was lights out defense."

Cohasset got on the board first, driving 29 yards in three plays capped by an 18-yard pass from quarterback Jeff Cavanaro to Doonan with 40 seconds left in the half.

Doonan pulled the ball down out of the hands of a pair of Abington defenders.

From there it was all Cohasset.

The Skippers held the ball the next 11 minutes, driving from their own 20 to the Abington 15 before turning it over on downs when Dylan Pietrasik popped Doonan, forcing a drop at the 10.

Abington went to the air on their next drive, but couldn't connect, setting up a punt and Cohasset's scoring drive.

Kristian LaPointe was held to just seven yards rushing in the first half on four carries, while Dana Valentine ran for 63 yards on eight carries in the half.

Valentine finished with with 110 yard on 16 carries.

LaPointe, the leading scorer in the league, meanwhile was held to 34 yards on 11 tries, with one catch for four yards.

"We kept LaPointe from scoring any points," Afanasiw said. "That was great. It's tough to lose when you don't give up points."

Abington had chances, especially in the first half, but couldn't capitalize.

The Green Wave had a scoring chance early after Rob Cornish blocked a Brendan Doonan punt on Cohasset's first drive, giving the Wave a first down at the Skipper 27, but Abington couldn't capitalize.

"We told the kids that there would be opportunities," said Abington coach Jim Kelliher. "We had them and we didn't capitalize. It was that simple. We played good defense at times, but didn't cash in. If you don't take care of opportunities, you don't win."

Abington moved the ball to the Cohasset 10 after a pair of runs by Ian Campbell, but two passes went incomplete and LaPointe missed a 25-yard field goal wide right with 2:55 left in the first quarter.

Cornish came up big again in the early part of the second half, recovering a fumbled pitch at the Cohasset 35.

That drive was stopped by an interception by Kyle Livingstone, who was making just his second career start.

Livingstone returned the pick 49 yards to the Abington 41, and four plays later Jake Kissick went 34 yards for a touchdown and a 14-0 Cohasset lead with 4:04 left to play.

"Kyle Livingstone stepped up," Afanasiw said. "He batted down passes and had the interception in crunch time. It was great defense."

Cohasset quarterback Jeff Cavanaro throws the ball into the end zone for Cohasset's opening touchdown against Abington.

Tough end to strong season

Cohasset, saw most of the action. The Lady Clippers (17-0-2) put two shots on goal in the first two minutes and pressured Cohasset's backs. The Norwell girls finally broke through when in the sixth minute freshman Bridget Conway scored the first of her three goals on the day. It came off a header on a cross from Allison DeBenedictis.

Two minutes later, Norwell went ahead, 2-0, on a goal by the South Shore League's leading scorer, Krista Prouty. And in the ninth minute, Conway scored, knocking in a shot that came off a corner kick from Kara O'Connell. In the 15th minute, Norwell made it 4-0 when DeBenedictis flicked in a header.

The Lady Clippers had a couple more chances to score before they netted their fifth goal of the half, which came in the 30th minute. Christine Coner hit a great corner kick to Mackenzie Hart, who ripped a shot off the crossbar. Two minutes later, Rachel Fredey lined a shot over the Norwell net.

Cohasset started building momentum late in the first half. Tori Lehr served a ball into the box in the 32nd minute, and Hart managed to get a head on the ball, but her deflection was saved by Norwell keeper Brooke Alman. Cohassett's best scoring opportunity in the first half came in the 34th minute when Carli Haggerty got up and tried ricocheting a header into the goal off a well-played free kick from Coner. Four minutes later, Haggerty put another shot on goal.

In the 46th minute of play, Caroline Fein made a great run down the left wing, beating two Norwell defenders before sending a cross to Rhiana Fitts, whose shot just sailed over the net.

Norwell scored its sixth and final goal in the 49th minute. It came from Prouty off an assist from DeBenedictis.

After the game, Beal, who won her 100th career game this season, reflected on the fall campaign.

"These nine seniors helped to build the program," Beal said. "We have a couple really big holes to fill, but the kids stepped up. We'll regroup."

South Coastal Hockey League Roundup

By Mark Ducharme
CORRESPONDENT

It was a "Ray" of sunshine as far as the Grizzlies were concerned in their South Coastal Men's Hockey League Master's Div. game with the Roadrunners.

Jeff Ray of Hanover scored two goals in the final six minutes of the game both assisted by Joe McCafferty as the Grizzlies rallied for a 4-3 win. Chuck Laubenstein and Joe Bevilacqua of Abington scored the other goals and goalie Joe Burke made two big saves for the Grizzlies in the final minute of the game.

Sean Parrell scored two goals and Matt Smith had one goal and Marshfield's Brian Kennedy had two assists for the Roadrunners.

The Masters Div. top team, the Thunder, got two goals from Tom Maguire and one from Ed McVeigh in the final three minutes to give them a 5-1 win over the Vipers. Mike Joy of Hanover and Bill Drolett added a goal each for the Thunder and Bob Sideropoulos scored for the Vipers.

John McDonough scored two goals and Pembroke's Josh Worrall added a goal and three assists as the Aeros rolled past the Wolves, 7-1 in a Masters Div. game.

Joe MacLeod and Sean Taylor both of Pembroke, Sean Noonan and Craig Solari had a goal each for the Aeros and Keith Smith of Marshfield scored the Wolves goal.

Paul Smyth scored two goals to lead the Stingers to a 2-1 Legends Div. win over the Crusaders. Art Caron scored the Crusaders goal.

Bill Spillane's second goal of the game with 49 seconds left gave the Fighting Saints a 4-4 tie with the Toros in Legends Div. contest. Bob Zerfoss of Scituate and Frank Elwood scored a goal each and James McNeill had three assists for the Saints.

Frank Brinkman of Pembroke scored two goals, Mark McGreenery of Norwell and Ray Deaguast added a goal each and Paul Brinkman had two assists for the Toros.

Mike Murphy of Hanover scored with 7:45 left in the game to give the Sharks a 1-1 tie with the Whalers in a Legends Div. matchup.

Jim O'Toole of Rockland scored the only goal in the shootout to give the Rangers a 2-1 win over the Maple Leafs in a Classics Div. game.

Mike Ryan gave the Leafs the lead, but the Rangers tied the game with a goal by Joe O'Connell with 1:08 left in regulation.

Marshfield's Tom Lema scored two goals, Kirk Souza, John Davey and Mike Martin of Pembroke had a goal each and Rockland's Mike Evans had two assists in the Canadiens' 5-1 win over the Bruins in a Classics Div. game.

A shiver of the Scituate/Cohasset Mites Sharks fourth grade team takes to the field at the start of Sunday's Division 1 playoff game against Marshfield. The Sharks won the contest 20-8 and now will compete against Bridgewater on Sunday in the D-1 Super Bowl.

FROM SHARKS, PAGE 19

Lights affair at Alumni Field to root on their older brethren (while also having fun sliding down the grassy hill at Alumni – hey, they're still 9-year-old boys!), now will meet Bridgewater in the Old Colony Youth Football League Super Bowl on Sunday to determine the 2009 Division 1 Mites champion. Game time is set for 11 a.m. at Bridgewater-Raynham High School.

The contest with Marshfield started out as if it would be nothing more challenging than a nice swim in a warm pool of shallow water for the Sharks and their fans, many of whom made the trek to Hingham in their SUVs festively decorated with shark fins and other Sci/Co adornments.

After Shark Luke Murphy made a nice return of the opening kickoff to the Marshfield 40, tailback Will Greer took the first handoff of the game from Shark quarterback Andrew Sullivan (who has filled the signal calling role ably in place of the injured Deven Varney, who broke his arm four weeks ago). Will G. turned the corner around right end, brushed off a few Ram tacklers, and sped 40 yards to paydirt for a 6-0 Sci/Co lead with just 16 seconds having elapsed off the clock.

The Sci/Co two-point attempt fell short, but the Shark defense swallowed up the Ram offense on the ensuing possession and forced a four-and-out, giving the ball back to Sci/Co at the Marshfield 47.

The Shark offense went back to work, chewing up big bites of turf with every chomp at the Marshfield defense. Great blocking by Matthew Dickey and Matthew Donahue gave the Sharks plenty of room for a 12-yard gain by Will Bowen for a first down to the 35. Offensive linemen John Bulman, Henry Snyder, and center Charlie Pyne opened huge holes for five yard pick ups by Greer and Bowen for a first down at the 25.

Kyle McFetridge sliced through the Marshfield line for a gain of 10 yards to the 15 to move the chains yet again. Greer then got the call on a pitchout from Sullivan and burst around right end for his second TD of the contest to give Sci/Co a 12-0 advantage with 3:01 still to play in the opening period.

Although the Sharks' PAT effort came up shy again, the Sci/Co defense continued to stifle the Rams. A booming kick pinned Marshfield back at its own 15. A sack of the Marshfield quarterback by Shark J.J. Jordan and great gang tackles by Andrew Blanchard, Cal Osten, Tommy Carrabes, Jackson Mansi,. Luke Murphy, Jason Dwight, Jack Hill, and Alex Defreitas all added up to Sci/Co taking over at the Marshfield 17 on four downs.

The Sharks seemed poised to move in for the kill with their third touchdown on three possessions. But the Rams refused to buckle, taking over on downs as a run by Bowen on fourth and five fell two yards shy of a first down at the Marshfield nine.

Still, the shivers of Sharks (see above) continued to swarm all over the Marshfield ball carriers, with Shark Will Thomas applying the coup de grace with a big tackle on fourth and eight at the Marshfield 12.

With the half winding down, Sci/Co had little time to try to punch the ball into the end zone to take what would have been a commanding three-touchdown advantage at the intermission. A fumble for no gain, a five-yard loss, and an incomplete pass from Sullivan to Chase Bomeisler left Cohasset with a fourth down from the 15 with 10 seconds left on the clock after a Sci/Co timeout.

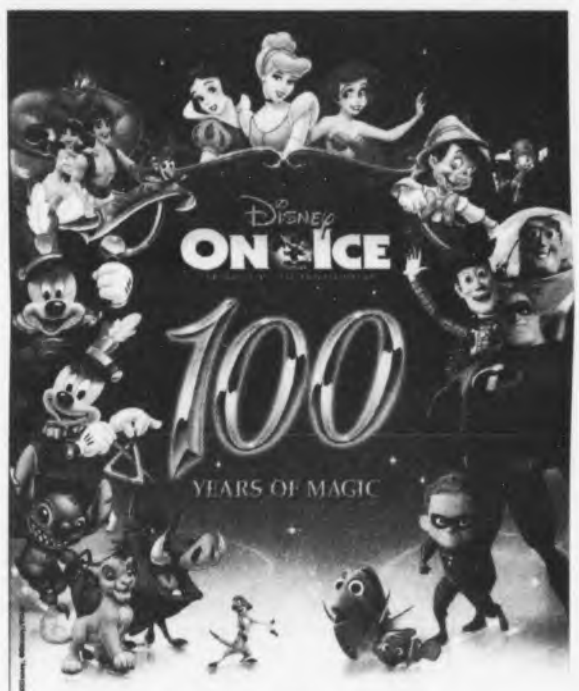
Greer punched through the Marshfield line for a good gain, but though Will G. carried a few Rams on his back, he got no closer than the five as the half ended.

The Rams, buoyed by a turnover, finally got some momentum on offense and drove in for the touchdown in five plays. With the successful two point conversion, the seemingly safe Sci/Co lead was now down to 12-8 with 1:10 remaining in the third period, giving many of the Sharks' fans sweaty palms and heart palpitations for the first time on the afternoon.

However, the hallmark of head coach Dan Varney's squad this season is that they know how to take care of business. Jackson Mansi, who plays middle linebacker, took the kickoff back 15 yards on a nice run to the Marshfield 46, from where Sci/Co began what would prove to be their march toward securing a Super Bowl berth.

A 12-yard gain by Greer as the third quarter ended gave Sci/Co a first down at the Ram 36. The double Ws then took turns slashing at the Ram defense, with Will B. making the biggest dent with a 21-yard gain on a second and 13 that moved the ball to the Marshfield eight.

A five-yard illegal procedure penalty set Sci/Co back to the 13, but a three-yard gain by Will B., a six-yarder by Will G., and a three-yard pick up by Will B. left Sci-Co inside the one yard line on fourth down.



Will B. got the call and he smashed over for the TD. Will G. then pranced into the end zone untouched for the conversion for a 20-8 Sci/Co edge with just 3:18 remaining on the clock.

Marshfield tried vainly to move the ball downfield in a hurry, but the Sci/Co defensive group of Dan Durkin, Ryan Lynch, Sean McNeil, James Krumsiek, Jack Forsythe, Jay Frederick, and Patrick Hagearty, plus some great open field tackles by Shark safety Brian Doyle, kept the Rams from getting close.

So, the long season that began amidst the heat, humidity, and mosquitoes of August will come down to a final Sunday of football in mid-November against a Bridgewater team whom Sci/Co defeated 14-0 in their regular season meeting in Week 3.

"Bridgewater is a very good team," said Shark head coach Varney, "but so are we. We've worked very hard to get where we are and we'll be ready for a good game in the Super Bowl."

SCHOOLS

Osgood Book Fair

The Joseph Osgood School Parent School Organization, PSO, will host a Scholastic Book Fair Fundraiser at the Osgood School, 210 Sohier St., from 2 pm - 7 pm on Wednesday, Nov. 18.

The Book Fair will offer specially priced books and educational products, including new releases, award-winning titles, children's classics, interactive software, adult books, and current bestsellers from more than 150 publishers.

Attendees can help the school build classroom libraries and the school library by purchasing books for teachers through the Classroom Wish List.

The PSO, which is a non-profit organization, acts as an advocate for public education. It is the official link between parents and schools. The PSO voices parental responses to school issues, and provides forums for administrators, teachers, and students to present their programs and policies to the public. Through fundraising efforts, like the upcoming Book Fair, the PSO provides programs and activities that enrich the school experience for students, teachers, and parents. Families, teachers, and all members of the community are invited to attend the Fair, which will feature a special theme: Book Fair Beach.

'Child Find' screenings

The Cohasset Public Schools, in accordance with Federal Law IDEA 2004 and Massachusetts Special Education Regulations 603 CMR 28.00, are in the process of conducting "Child Find." The school department is seeking children with suspected disabilities residing in Cohasset who may be in need of Special Education services.

The Cohasset Public Schools will evaluate students from age 3 through high school age who are unable to progress effectively in a regular education program due to a suspected disability in one of the following areas: developmental or intellectual delay, sensory, neurological, emotional, communication, physical, specific learning disability or health impairment. Cohasset Public Schools will also arrange for an evaluation of young people ages 16 21 who have not graduated from high school and who are not now attending school.

In addition, screenings for age 3 to 5-years olds are held the third Friday of each month at Osgood School. Call the Integrated Pre school Staff at 781-383-6117 for more information.

Cohasset provides all children with an opportunity to participate in the public school programs using a continuous and systematic process to identify students in need of special education. All programs and services are offered Without regard to color, race, sex, religion, national origin, sexual orientation or disability.

If you have a child who you suspect may have a disability or know a child with a disability who may be in need of special education services, call the Director of Student Services, Dr. Denise Messina, at 781-383-6104 for information regarding the referral process.

LIFE AT CHS

SEAN MACCARTHY

I always told you guys that food was the best incentive...next to money...that you use to buy more food!

Hello, hello. Looks like you have stumbled upon, or found, another edition of "Life at CHS". Well aren't you lucky. I would just like to start out with, not a joke, but a serious matter (I know that sounds weird coming from me). This Wednesday was Veterans Day. While having no school is great in all, a holiday in which we get to celebrate the lives and hard work of those that have fought for this country truly is awesome. Thank you veterans.

Now on to some odd humor thrown into a recap of the past week at Cohasset High School. So this past week, there was...hold that thought. This just in; Cohasset football is STILL undefeated. Yes that means there is a large round shape, a zero, in the loss column for Cohasset. And although Dana Valentine is still a gift at running back, it is no longer Valentines Day. It is now D-Day. D as in defense because the Cohasset Football defense is unreal. Coach A has had to buy the team pizza on four different occasions, one for each of Cohasset's shutouts. I always told you guys that food was the best incentive...next to money...that you use to buy more food!

Although it was a great week for Cohasset football, the all the other teams didn't have their best weeks as every other team's season has officially come to the end after they were all eliminated from the playoffs. Not all are mad though because they will not have to practice in below freezing weather and they don't have to travel to random towns two hours away to play there games in the below freezing weather. Yeah, they'll all be laughing at the football team when they are out on the back practice field in the freezing cold. Yeah those football guys will start regretting how good they are when the footballs are covered with frost.

In school, not a lot has changed, with the exception of the huge increase of kids staying after school. Why? So they don't get grounded by their parents when their report cards get sent home. It was one of those weeks, a week in which grades closed, which is one of the least favorite weeks for many in the school. As everyone was sucking up to their teachers and making up work they missed, all while being badgered by their parents, the morale around school wasn't so high. As stressful as it was, people just had to look forward to the day off on Wednesday and the Thanksgiving weekend (which is only two weeks away) to get a smile on their face.

Well that pretty much sums up the past week. It wasn't the most exciting week but it had its moments. You can't expect exciting things to pop up every week. Oh well, hope you enjoyed this article. See you next week.

Sean MacCarthy got on TV this past Friday, just like he promised.

HAPPENINGS

Volunteer for Make a Difference Day

You can get out and enjoy the beautiful fall weather with family and friends and Make a Difference at the same time. This year there are 20 elders in the community looking for assistance with cold weather preparation and fall clean-up over the weekend of Nov. 14-15.

A two-hour commitment to assist neighbors with general fall clean up (i.e. leaves, storage of lawn furniture, etc.) is suggested.

Leaf bags and dump transport provided. This is a wonderful opportunity to bring generations of the town together and make some new friends.

If you have any questions or are interested in volunteering please contact: Patty Cunningham at 781-383-1378 or Pamela Turpel at 781-923-1199.

Buttonwood birthday

Buttonwood Books & Toys, Shaw's Plaza, will celebrate its 20th birthday with an anniversary celebration party from noon to 5 p.m., on Sunday, Nov. 15.

Buttonwood first opened its doors in November 1989. In honor of the occasion, the store is inviting all its loyal customers and friends to drop in for birthday cake, balloons and lots of door prizes. As a gift to the community from Buttonwood, all purchases on Nov. 15 will receive a 20 percent discount. Come celebrate with Betsey Detwiler, owner, and members of the Buttonwood staff, as they mark this milestone in the store's history. Call Buttonwood at 781-383-2665 for more information.

World War II memories are subject of talk Nov. 18

Cohasset Historical Society will host its November Wednesday Night Lecture at 7:30 p.m., on Nov. 18. The topic will be "Memories" with Rosemarie Engel-Conn starting the evening reading from two of her essays from World War II. Engel-Conn will give a firsthand account of the bombing of Dresden, Germany, in 1945 and then goes on to talk about the importance of the BBC during the war.

This evening is a time for remembering and sharing memories of an unforgettable time. The audience is invited to participate in this interactive program. The program will take place in the Pratt Building, 106 South Main St. There is no charge for the program, all are invited and light refreshment will be served.

For more information, call the Historical Society at 781-383-1434.

Wine tasting

People can sample Chilean wines as well as a selection of d'oeuvres prepared by The Chef's Table in Pembroke from 5:30 to 7:30 p.m., on Saturday, Nov. 14, at Glastonbury Abbey Center, 16 Hull St., Hingham. In addition, there will be a cellist playing throughout the evening. Raffles will include many pieces of art done by local artist and gift packages donated by local merchants.

Tickets are $50 per person. Call Ann McCarthy-Egan at 781-749-9423 or Kay Trask at 781-749-0993 for more information.

'Lend Me a Tenor' continues this weekend

The Cohasset Dramatic Club (CDC) will present Ken Ludwig's smash Broadway hit "Lend Me a Tenor," through Nov. 15 at Town Hall. An outstanding cast of well-known South Shore actors will present this laugh-a-minute comedy, winner of three Tony Awards, and enjoyed by audiences here and abroad.

The show takes place in 1934, as cast and staff of the Cleveland Grand Opera Company prepare for the big opening night of Verdi's 'Otello' with famed (fictional) opera star Tito Merelli. Mistaken identity, slamming doors, high-strung characters and an uproarious series of mishaps combine to ensure non-stop laughter for the audience.

To highlight the show within the play aspect of "Lend Me a Tenor," CDC will present the incoming audience members with faux programs and posters from "Otello" and will recreate an opening night at the Opera experience for the first Saturday evening performance, complete with red carpet and formally dressed opera patrons.

Classical guitarist to perform Nov. 15

Guitarist Aaron Larget-Caplan will be performing a program called "Dance Bach Sleep" at First Parish Cohasset on North Main Street Sunday, Nov. 15 at 4 pm. Admission will be $15 for adults and $12 for seniors and children.

"Dance, Bach, Sleep" is a program of exotic dances from Spain and Latin America, works by Bach, and new lullabies. The new lullabies are a special feature of this program, and have been composed specifically for Aaron through his New Lullabies Project. This concert will include the Cohasset premiere by the young composer Joshua Hahn. At the end of 2006 Aaron began commissioning composers to write a brief lullabies for guitar solo. More information about the New Lullabies Project can be found at www.NewLullabyProject.com.

Frosty Frolic benefits ALS

For the second consecutive year, Hingham will play host to the "Frosty Frolic," a charity walk event benefiting the fight against ALS (Amyotrophic Lateral Sclerosis), more commonly known as Lou Gehrig's Disease.

Last year, walkers donned holiday attire while enjoying the sounds of local carolers, and the taste of hot chili and other delicious treats.

The second annual Frosty Frolic will take place on Saturday, Dec. 12, at the Hingham Community Center, 70 South St.. Check-in begins at 1 p.m., and the walk kicks off at 2 p.m. Last year, walkers donned holiday attire while enjoying the sounds of local carolers, and the taste of hot chili and other delicious treats.

All proceeds from the Frosty Frolic will benefit both ALS research efforts conducted worldwide, and patient services and programs offered throughout Massachusetts. For more information or to sign up for the Hingham Frosty Frolic, visit www.walktodefeatals.org, or call 888-CURE-ALS.

Norwell resident and National Geographic photographer, Cary Wolinsky, will give a talk Sunday at the South Shore Art Center.

Cary Wolinsky to talk about career with National Geographic Photographer and Norwell resident Cary Wolinsky will offer a talk at 3 p.m., on Sunday, Nov. 15, at South Shore Art Center, 119 Ripley Road.

Wolinsky will discuss his 35-year career as a National Geographic photographer and his fascination with textiles and culture that resulted in the exhibition "Fiber of Life," on exhibit at South Shore Art Center through Dec. 23. The Wolinsky talk is free, but reservations are required.

South Shore Art Center galleries are open seven days a week. For more information visit the website at ssac.org.

Eva is a petite, friendly, gray feline with the greenest eyes.

Green-eyed Eva wants to be an 'only' cat

A few spaces are still available in the shelter's low-cost spay/neuter clinic scheduled for Friday, Nov. 20.

Hull Seaside Animal Rescue is hoping to find a home for Eva. Eva is a petite, friendly, gray feline with the greenest eyes you've ever seen. She gave birth to a litter of adorable kittens, all of whom have been adopted. Eva would like to find a home with a person who would devote some much-needed attention to her. We think she would prefer to be an "only" cat although she does get along with her roommates.

HSAR is a "no kill" shelter, and is always looking for people willing to give felines a home who will promise to keep them inside and never have them declawed. Eva would make a welcome addition to any loving home.

A few spaces are still available in the shelter's low-cost spay/neuter clinic scheduled for Friday, Nov. 20. For an appointment, call 877-378-1195, leave name and phone number and someone will call with details.

The holidays are approaching, and the shelter has its Kittendale Calendars, which are a nice way of giving twice, once to the shelter (tax-deductible) and again to the recipient.

The shelter has four adorable black kittens who will be ready in mid-December. Let staff know if you're interested and we'll put you on our "waiting for kittens" list.

Shelter hours are 2 to 3 p.m., on Saturdays, and 6 to 7:30 p.m., on Mondays. The mailing address is P.O. Box 787 Hull, MA 02045 and the shelter is at 50 L St. Hull. For information, call 877-378-1195 or visit the website at hsar.org. People are encouraged to visit the website and vote for the Shelter Challenge and sign up at Shaw's Rewards. The shelter will also have a table at the Hull Holiday Showcase on Saturday, Nov. 28, at the Clarion Hotel. Volunteer applications will be available as well as the Kittendale Calendar, a silent auction, handmade cat toys and some lucky winner will take home the bountiful cat and dog baskets filled with treats for both animal and owner.

For adoption information, call Shirl at 781-925-3380 for an appointment.

Community Garden Club members attend environmental course

Each year, the National Garden Clubs, Inc. conducts an environmental study school for interested members. For the second year in a row, the course was offered locally at the Clarion Hotel in Hull.

This year's crop of students included garden club members from Maine, New Hampshire, Vermont as well as Massachusetts. Of the 36 students who attended, five were from the Community Garden Club of Cohasset. The Community Garden Club of Cohasset is a member of the Garden Club Federation of Massachusetts, Inc. and the National Garden Club, Inc.

Topics covered included sessions on renewable and non-renewable resources, pollution and how best to control it, organic farming, coastal management, sustainable land use, sustainable gardening and composting.

As part of the course, the participants toured Holly Hill Farm in Cohasset and the Weir River Estuary Center in Hull.

From left: Betsy Keefe, Adrienne duBois, Lelia Wienstein, Kathy Gray and Barbara Canney of the Community Garden Club of Cohasset, attended a two-day Environmental Studies course taught by The National Garden Clubs Inc.. This year's subject was "The Living Earth-Land and Related Issues." Here they are after a tour of Holly Hill Farm and a presentation about Organic Gardening.

Jingle Bell Walk is Nov. 27

The 15th Annual Jingle Bell Walk will be taking place this year on Friday, Nov. 27th.

Festivities begin at Cohasset Harbor at 2 p.m. when Santa, Mrs. Claus, Elves & friends arrive via fishing boat. They will then board a hayride wagon for a parade downtown, which ends at the South Shore Community Center on 3 North Main St.

All are welcome to join in the fun – there will be hot cocoa, coffee, juice, treats and delicious cookies baked by local Girl Scouts. Have a photo taken with Santa, enjoy a sing-a-long of holiday tunes, enjoy face-painting, and have a hayride around the Common! Tree-lighting will take place at dusk.

Please join the South Shore Community Center for this official kick-off to a wonderful Holiday Season!

SALOME'S STARS FOR RELEASE WEEK OF NOV. 23, 2009

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) While it seems that chaos is taking over, you get everything back to normal, even if it means being more than a little assertive with some people. Expect to hear more job-related news soon.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) Expect to be able to move ahead with your workplace plans now that you have a good idea of what you might have to face. You also can anticipate a welcome change on the home front.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) A quieter period settles in, giving you a chance to catch your breath, as well as allowing for more time to handle some important family matters. The arts dominate this weekend. Enjoy them.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) The frustrations of last week have pretty much played themselves out. You should find things going more smoothly, especially with those all-important personal matters.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) Once again, you find a creative way to resolve a pesky problem in short order. However, a matter involving a possible breach of confidence might need a bit more time to check out.

VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) Reuniting with an old friend could lead to the sharing of some great new experiences. But be careful you don't find yourself once again being super-critical or overly judgmental.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) You should be seeing some positive results following your move toward repairing that unraveling relationship. There might be some setbacks, but staying with it ultimately pays off.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) Encouraging a friendlier environment in the home could go a long way to help dissipate anger and resolve problems, especially those affecting children. It won't be easy, but you can do it.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) A recent act of kindness is beginning to show some unexpected (but very welcome) results. On another note, expect to hear more about a possible move to another locale.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) The good news is that the sure-footed Goat can rely on his or her skill to get around obstacles in the workplace. The not-so-good news is that new impediments could turn up later.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) A change of pace is welcome but also confusing. Before you make decisions one way or another, be sure you know precisely what it is you're being asked to do.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) Don't fret if you don't get the gratitude you think you're owed for doing a nice thing for someone. There might be a good reason for that. In any event, what's important is that you did it.

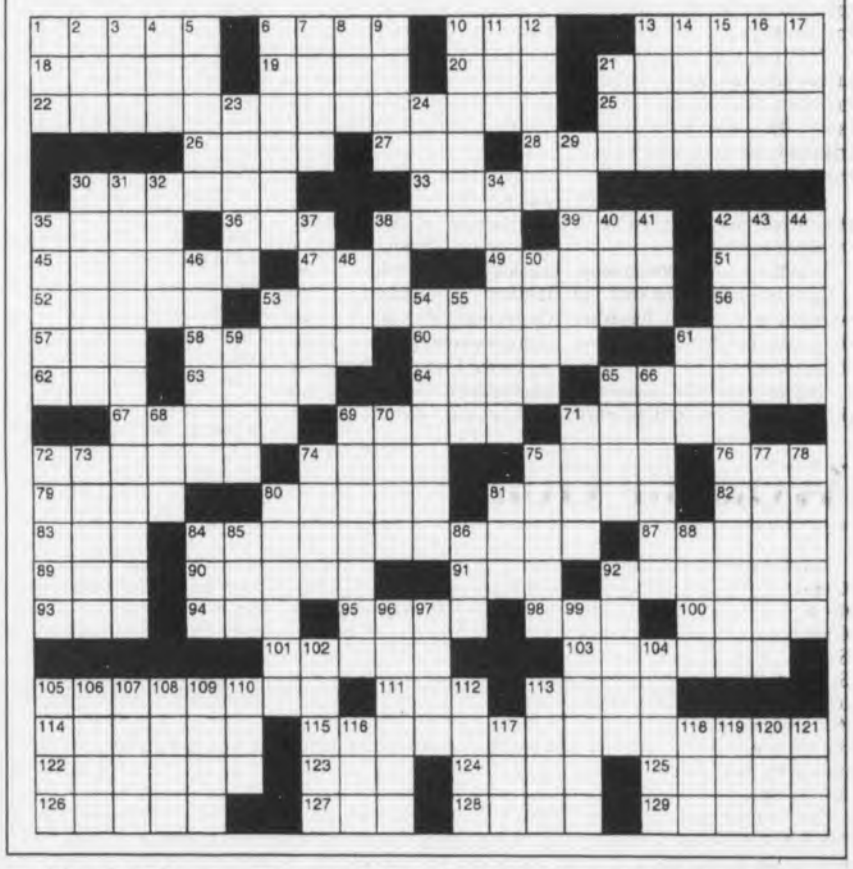
Fun By The Numbers

Like puzzles? Then you'll love sudoku. This mind-bending puzzle will have you hooked from the moment you square off, so sharpen your pencil and put your sudoku savvy to the test!



Here's How It Works:

Sudoku puzzles are formatted as a 9x9 grid, broken down into nine 3x3 boxes. To solve a sudoku, the numbers 1 through 9 must fill each row, column and box. Each number can appear only once in each row, column and box. You can figure out the order in which the numbers will appear by using the numeric clues already provided in the boxes. The more numbers you name, the easier it gets to solve the puzzle!

FitzGerald pulls double duty

Religious educator works in Cohasset and Scituate

By Brian P. Nanos
BNANOS@CNC.COM

Formerly a community educator with Planned Parenthood in upstate New York, Jim FitzGerald's new job — director of religious education for Unitarian Universalist congregations in both Scituate and Cohasset — kicked into high gear this fall, with the first classes at Scituate's First Parish Unitarian Universalist Church.

"The professional background (required) is very much the same," he said, comparing the two jobs, since they are both teaching jobs. "The content is different."

"I certainly have umpteen songs of praise for Jim. In whatever scenario Jim functions, he excels. People of all ages love him dearly."

— The Rev. Jan Carlsson-Bull

Jim FitzGerald is director of religious education for Unitarian Universalist congregations in both Scituate and Cohasset.

FitzGerald has been the interim director of religious education at First Parish Cohasset for the past two years. This year, the two congregations have decided to share FitzGerald, according to Scituate's minister the Rev. Richard Stower. Since Aug. 1, each of the congregations has been paying FitzGerald for 10 hours a week.

Stower said the decision to share FitzGerald was made after Cohasset minister the Rev. Jan Carlsson-Bull told him how pleased her congregation had been with FitzGerald's work.

"We got into a conversation about how beneficial it would be to share Jim's talents," Stower said. "He came highly recommended. He was well-received by parents and teachers."

According to Carlsson-Bull, FitzGerald has proven to be "a ready listener."

"I certainly have umpteen songs of praise for Jim," she said. "In whatever scenario Jim functions, he excels. People of all ages love him dearly."

Stower said that Carlsson-Bull's high praise for FitzGerald has so far proven an accurate description of his preparations for the year.

"His preparatory work has been very good," Stower said. "He's a very detail-oriented person. That's very helpful."

FitzGerald said that last summer's work of preparing the religious education programs at both congregations has been "a lot harder" than only working for the Cohasset church.

"It's a challenge to go from one to two," he said. "We try to overlap as much as we can."

With the rest of his time, FitzGerald works as executive director of Call to Action, a Catholic non-profit organization which, according to its mission statement, works to bring "equality and justice in the Church and society."

FitzGerald is a practicing Catholic with a master's degree in theology and ethics from Hartford Seminary in Connecticut. He said his own faith has served him well in working for the Unitarian Universalist congregations. The most difficult part, he said, was learning the terms and traditions of the Unitarian Universalist Church, which he said was made easier by the welcoming community at the Cohasset congregation.

"If you take Catholic social teaching and put it next to Unitarian Universalist history, there's a lot of common ground," he said.

Both Stower and FitzGerald pointed out that a goal of the Unitarian Universalist religious education program is to teach the students about multiple world religions.

"We approach religion from a very wide prospective," Stower said. "One of our core understandings about ourselves is we have respect for all world's religions."

According to Stower, the religious education program teaches students about world religions, ecology, what it means to be Unitarian Universalist and social justice.

"We lay the foundation and we do it in such a way that we encourage their own development," Stower said.

By the time students get to middle and high school ages, Stower said they start asking "less concrete questions."

"They're not going to be threatened by religious diversity," FitzGerald said of students coming out of the program.

The two congregations will share an Our Whole Lives (OWL) program that teaches about relationships and sexuality to adolescents.

In addition to his theology degree, Fitzgerald also has a master's degree in educational psychology. He said his original training was to be a social studies teacher — a position he never actually held. FitzGerald said he first began working with Unitarian Universalist congregations during his 10 years working as a sexuality educator at Planned Parenthood Mohawk Hudson in upstate New York. While in the seminary, he worked with local Unitarian Universalist congregations on sexuality and spirituality, he said.

Richard E.T. Brooks

COHASSET – Richard E.T. Brooks of Cohasset, Mass, passed away peacefully on Monday, November 9, 2009 at home with his family by his side.

Born July 19th, 1934 in Boston to Elmer and Eileen (Fay) Brooks, Dick graduated from Boston Latin School in 1952 and earned undergraduate and graduate degrees in Chemical Engineering/Management from Northeastern University. His honors there included top academic, athletic and ROTC awards. He was elected to the Northeastern University Hall of Fame in 1999 for his achievement in basketball and his long standing commitment to the University. In 1958 he served as a Lieutenant in the US Army stationed in New Jersey. He was honored with a Doctor of Humane Letters from Fitchburg State College in 1996.

For over 20 years Dick was a senior level engineer and executive with the Polaroid Corporation where he designed, built and managed the fine chemical manufacturing division. He then founded Fitchburg-based ChemDesign Corporation in 1982. Over the next twelve years he was awarded a number of honors including Small Business Person of the Year for Massachusetts (1989) and Entrepreneur of the Year (1987) from Venture Magazine. His 1989 SBA Award was presented to him by then President George Bush at a White House ceremony. At the time of its sale to Bayer Corporation in 1994, ChemDesign was a $100-plus million corporation.

Dick was very active in the community of Cohasset where he lived for the last ten years, devoting significant time and energy to many town issues including the sewer project of Little Harbor and the Cat Dam restoration and preservation. He was also an avid golfer and a member at Black Rock Country Club.

He is survived by his wife Linda A. (Counihan), children Matthew of Cohasset, Diane Brooks of Andover, Richard, Jr. of Cohasset, Susan Brooks Eldridge of Bedford, NH, Christopher of Westford, Tracy Brooks Poff of Charlotte, NC, sisters Pauline Ross Peck of Yarmouth Port and Beverly (Brooks) Donohue of Sandwich, and eight grandchildren. He was predeceased by his parents and a brother Robert A. Brooks of St. Louis, Missouri and a sister Virginia Davidson Regal of Falmouth. He is also survived by his first wife Joanne M. O'Neill of Florida.

A Funeral Mass will be celebrated on Saturday, Nov. 14, 2009 at 10 a.m. in St. Anthony Church, 10 Summer St., Cohasset, MA. 02025. Interment to follow at Woodside Cemetery, Cohasset. Visiting hours on Friday, Nov. 13 from 4-8 pm at McNamara-Sparrell Funeral Home, 1 Summer St. (across from St. Anthony Church), Cohasset. If desired, donations in Mr. Brooks' memory may be made to the Norwell VNA & Hospice, 91 Longwater Cir., Norwell, MA. 02061. For an online guestbook and directions, please visit www.mcnamara-sparrell.com.

Abbey

"Power of Hope"

Glastonbury Abbey's Inter-Religious Lecture Series Listening to Other Voices: Transformation and Renewal: The Power of Hope," will be presented at 7:15 p.m., on Thursday, Nov. 19. Jerry White will present a lecture titled "Getting Up When Life Knocks You Down."

In 1984, as a 20-year-old college student from Cohasset, White stepped on a landmine in northern Israel. He lost his leg and almost his life. Today he is a leader in the International Campaign to Ban Landmines. A co-recipient of the 1997 Prize for Peace, he is the founder and director of Survivor Corps, a global organization helping conflict survivors heal and rebuild their communities. White has worked with thousands of victims of tragedy. In his talk – based on his recent book, "Getting Up When Life Knocks You Down: Five Steps to Overcoming a Life Crisis" – he will share their stories as well as his own. He will describe the process for not only surviving crisis, but going on to thrive after the worst happens.

Lectures are free – donations welcome. The program will take place in the Conference Center at Glastonbury Abbey, 16 Hull St., Hingham. For information, visit the Web site at glastonburyabbey.org.

'Roof' brings down the House

"Fiddler on the Roof" will be at the Opera House, 539 Washington St., Boston, through Nov. 15.

According to insiders, there was pandemonium at the Boston Opera House last week when above-the-title star Chaim Topol missed the first performance of the current engagement of "Fiddler on the Roof." Any "Fiddler on the Roof" can bring a crowd to its feet, of course – the show is just that good – but a perfectly cast, beautifully rendered production like the one now on stage at the Opera House is a celebration of one of the truly great American musicals of all time. So when Topol returned for the show's official opening the next night, on what is being billed as his farewell tour, a full house was ready and waiting to show their love not only for the musical about a Russian milkman – based on "Tevye and His Daughters" and other stories by Sholem Aleichem – but also for the Tel-Aviv born performer who first played him in London's West End 42 years ago.

There are very few shows that, 45 years after their Broadway debut, have the enduring appeal of "Fiddler on the Roof." With a book by Joseph Stein, music by Jerry Bock, and lyrics by Sheldon Harnick, the Tony Award-winning"Fiddler" is the tale of Tevye, his five willful daughters, and his effort to hold firm to family and religious traditions as outside influences and a changing world threaten to overtake their lives. Set in 1905, "Fiddler on the Roof" also deals with the forced upending of a community of Russian Jews by an edict from the Tsar commanding that they sell their homes and leave the village.

Using his rich, booming voice to full effect on the scene-setting opener, "Tradition," Topol commands the stage from his first entrance. Save for one or two brief moments, Topol is on stage for the next three hours at the center of a large and talented cast that includes Susan Cella as his longtime wife, Golde, and Mary Stout as Yente, the meddlesome matchmaker who, despite her best efforts, never seems able to find the right husbands for Tevye's daughters. The three older daughters are played winningly by Rena Strober as Tzeitel, Jamie Davis as Hodel, Deborah Grausman as Chava.

Beginning with Zero Mostel on Broadway, many notable performers – including Paul Lipson, Herschel Bernardi, Alfred Molina, and Harvey Fierstein – have donned Tevye's now-familiar prayer shawl, but few have played it any better or over as many years as Topol, whose starring role in the 1971 feature film adaptation won him a Golden Globe as well as an Academy Award nomination for Best Actor. Now 74, Topol continues to imbue the character with just the right blend of strength, wisdom, pride, and humor.

Director Sammy Dallas Bayes once again reproduces Jerome Robbins's original choreography – as he did for the 1990 Broadway revival top-lined by Topol and for the national tour with Theodore Bikel that came through Boston several times in the mid-1990s – and makes sure the current cast faithfully recreates the impressive physicality and precision of the Bottle Dance and the plaintive drama of act two's Chava Sequence.

Like all the best musicals, "Fiddler" has not only a very strong book but a soaring, splendid score. Act one alone features "Matchmaker, Matchmaker," "If I Were a Rich Man," "To Life," "Miracle of Miracles," and, of course, "Sunrise, Sunset." Act two's "Now I Have Everything" and "Do You Love Me?" are clever lyrical odes to young love and mature marriage, and the wistful "Anatevka" provides the perfect end to what just may be a perfect show.

"Fiddler on the Roof" will be at the Opera House, 539 Washington St., Boston, through Nov. 15. For tickets and information, call 1-800-982-2787 or go online at BroadwayAcrossAmerica.com.

Police caught off guard

Cohasset Police officers wait to speak with Selectmen Monday evening prior to special Town Meeting about a proposed regionalization of dispatch services that would close the Cohasset station at night.

Seek audience with selectmen to discuss regionalizing service

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

For more than two years, the town managers and fire and police chiefs of the towns of Cohasset, Norwell, Hingham and Hull, have been working on the idea of combining their emergency dispatch centers into one centralized location.

Last week, Town Manager Bill Griffin told the Board of Selectmen the intermunicipal agreement was nearly ready for signatures. At the meeting, the board members did not raise any concerns.

But, this week the Cohasset Police Association, which includes members of the Cohasset Police Patrolman's Association and the Cohasset Police Superior Officers Association, has come forward with concerns regarding the regional dispatch center and the changes to emergency services that may come with it.

Several police officers and dispatchers were in attendance at Monday night's Special Town Meeting in the hope of

No funding for Housing Trust

Advisory Committee wants specific projects for CPC funds

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

Voters were treated, as Town Moderator Dan Evans described it, to an "intimate" Town Meeting on Monday night.

A sparse crowd of 113 registered voters gathered to take a stance on nine articles ranging from community preservation spending to an easement over conservation land to the demolition of a house on Hull Street. A quorum was reached shortly after 7:30 p.m. and voters plodded through the warrant for the next two hours.

Voters at Special Town Meeting narrowly defeated a recommendation to allocate $50,000 in Community Preservation funds to the Affordable Housing Trust.

The vote, which was 45 in favor and 50 opposed, leaves the Affordable Housing Trust, a committee created at the 2008 Annual Town Meeting, without any available funds to pursue their charge of finding and enabling affordable housing in Cohasset.

Selectman Ralph Dormitzer, who also sits on the Community Preservation Committee, said there had been two compromises between the CPC and the Housing Trust during the deliberation process. First, the housing trust initially was looking for all the monies in the CPC affordable housing sub-account, approximately $180,000. As a compromise, the CPC and the Housing Trust agreed to start with a $50,000 allocation. Second, any expenditure from that $50,000 allocation would need prior consent from the Board of Selectmen.

Cohasset native and CMI introduce boat building program

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

A tradition that has long been a part of Cohasset's history is poised to return to its coast.

In January, the Cohasset Maritime Institute is unveiling wooden boatbuilding workshops to its already well-established rowing programs.

Overseeing the boatbuilding program is one of Cohasset's own, Richard Wilmore, who has returned to town after a long career as a shipwright and teacher on the west coast.

After spending the last 34 years in Washington, Wilmore, now 58, has landed back in his old stomping ground to, in part, share the wealth of knowledge he gained.

"I wanted to come back to share what I've learned where I started out," Wilmore said. "Wooden boatbuilding is a tradition that should survive."

Wilmore's passion for boatbuilding was first ignited through a boatbuilding class on the North River.

"It's the aesthetic of the boat, they have a lot going for them," Wilmore said recently at the CMI boathouse. Wilmore has built and worked on over 100 wooden boats

Group has its say about pay

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

On Tuesday night, members of the School Committee heard directly from the paraprofessionals, a group of school employees that received a pay cut at the start of the school year.

"We have a pile of contracts going back 31 years saying we are salaried employees."
— Pearl Smith, paraprofessional

Armed with paperwork and their perspective, about 20 school staff — paraprofessionals and teachers — came out to participate and hear the discussion. By and large the meeting was an information-sharing exercise between the employees and member of the School Committee, which met as the budget and finance sub-committee.

Grad Day stays as is

A proposal to change the date of Cohasset High's graduation was turned down by the School Committee recently.

Cohasset High School Principal Joel Antolini suggested the graduation date, which has for the past few years been on the first Saturday afternoon of June, be changed to the first Sunday in June. In recent years, there has been a conflict between graduation and the state track and field championship forcing those students, who have earned a spot to compete in the state-wide competition, to choose.

Antolini said it was likely at least one student, if not more, could be impacted this year.

In preparation to the change, Antolini sent a letter to parents, clergy and teachers to get a sense of how the community would feel about the change.

"The overwhelming majority was not participatory," Antolini said. However, at least one parent was opposed to the change for fear it would cause a precedent if another major event should pop up down the line.

School Committee member Paul Schubert said he felt graduation, as the culmination of a student's academic career, should be placed ahead of an athletic achievement.

"This is a fairly big thing to change," Schubert said.

School Committee chair Adrienne MacCarthy concurred with Schubert, "there are always going to be choices to be made."

MacCarthy said at this point in the school year many parents have already begun planning for out-of-state family to come in for the event. She asked Antolini if it was possible for the state championship could be moved before or after the three-week period where most schools hold their graduation.

"Why is the state track meet held on such a day?" MacCarthy said.

Antolini said the state championship meet has been held on this day for about a decade and no matter where they moved it, it would likely affect a participating school.

Although the school committee did not support the change for this year, there seemed to be consensus that if the change was brought to them in the spring when they set the school calendar for the following year they could re-visit the issue again.

Cohasset High Commencement for the Class of 2010 will be held on June 5, 2010 at 1:30p.m. at the South Shore Music Circus.

Police Beat

Cohasset police part of MetroLEC

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

Crime is nothing new to police officers on the South Shore whether they serve in a small town like Cohasset or a city like Weymouth.

But police also know when faced with a major incident — whether terrorist-related; an act of God, such a as tornado; or a plane crash — they can't go it alone.

Cohasset police are part of MetroLEC (Metropolitan Law Enforcement Council), a regional, mutual-aid organization that stretches across about 43 towns from Westwood to Duxbury and over to Wrentham on the Rhode Island border through which police can tap the additional resources needed to handle a large-scale emergency.

Member police departments pay a yearly fee, based on population, and provide trained officers, who can respond to a crisis situation in another member town.

Cohasset, which has three officers assigned to MetroLEC, pays about $2,500-$3,000 a year.

Detective Lieutenant Gregory Lennon serves as executive officer and relief commander of both the Child Abduction Response Team (CART) and the Investigative Support Unit (ISU). The CART team is comprised of detectives from every MetroLEC community with advanced training who are ready to respond to child abduction.

The ISU is comprised of 13 detectives from MetroLEC communities who provide investigative support to the Regional Response Team and Special Weapons and Tactics team during missing person searches and hostage/barricade incidents.

Cohasset Police Officer Regen Steverman serves on the regional computer crime unit and Detective Garrett Hunt also serves on the CART team.

Lt. William Quigley described MetroLEC as "a great service and an efficient way to get upwards of 50 police officers to your jurisdiction in about one-half hour.

"We used them before for the reported glider down on Route 3A two-years ago," he said. "Officers from all over responded and conducted a massive ground search in the woods for the downed plane."

Member police departments pay a yearly fee, based on population, and provide trained officers, who can respond to a crisis situation in another member town.

Squirrel bite

A caller on Deep Run called police about a squirrel caught in the hockey net outside. He said his Dad was on his way to the hospital after he had tried to free the squirrel and it bit him, police said. The call came in at 4:10 p.m. on Thursday (Nov. 12).

The Animal Control Officer, using proper equipment, removed the squirrel that had to be euthanized and tested for rabies. The squirrel was not rabid, police said. However, any mammal can contract rabies. If the squirrel had run off and had not been caught, the homeowner would have had to have the series of rabies shots, police said.

Summonsed

• A 21-year-old Boston man is being summonsed to court for speeding and unlicensed operation after being stopped at Chief Justice Cushing Highway and Beechwood Street for speeding. Police said the 1995 Volvo the man was driving was traveling 47 in a 35 m.p.h. zone at 2:39 p.m. on Friday (Nov. 13).

A registry check showed the man was unlicensed and driving on an expired learner's permit. His 29-year-old female passenger was able to drive the car.

• A 25-year-old Weymouth woman is being summonsed to court following a traffic stop at 1:27 p.m. on Friday (Nov. 13) at Chief Justice Cushing Highway and King Street for having a brake light out on the Dodge Neon she was driving. A registry check revealed she did not have a driver's license. She is being summonsed for unlicensed operation and speeding. Her car was towed.

• A 22-year-old Hanover man is being summonsed for an uninsured motor vehicle and operating with a suspended registration following an officer checking on two suspicious people behind the Blackstone Tavern on King Street at 12:43 a.m. on Sunday (Nov. 15). The two men in the 1996 Saab said they had just gotten out of work at the restaurant. But a registry check revealed the car was uninsured and registration revoked for nonpayment of insurance. The Hanover man is being summonsed for allowing an uninsured, unregistered motor vehicle on a "way." Because there is an ATM in the small shopping plaza, the public has the right of access there at all hours.

Bounced check

A local retail business reported a bounced check to police last week and was referred to small claims court. Police said most of the time, bounced checks are an accounting error on the part of the customer. However, if a person were writing several bounced checks police would look into it. Police also get involved if checks are being written on a closed account.

Minor damage

A 2005 Nissan Altima, operated by a 41-year-old Hull man, and a 2005 Toyota pickup, operated by a 79-year-old Cohasset woman, collided in the parking lot at Stop & Shop at about 10:30 a.m. on Monday (Nov. 9), causing minor damage. No police report was needed; the two motorists exchanged papers, police said.

Asleep

A couple that was sleeping in their 1994 Subaru at the MBTA parking lot was moved along by police at about 1:30 a.m. on Saturday (Nov. 14). Police said the couple had taken the last train at 11:30 p.m., were tired and thought it was a good idea to take a nap before heading to Onset, Mass.

Police check on people sleeping because of a concern about possible carbon monoxide poisoning if the windows are rolled up. The couple agreed they had had enough sleep and headed home.

Pumpkin thefts

Police responded to a call from Old Pasture Road about a group of four or five stealing pumpkins last Tuesday (Nov. 10) at about 10:30 p.m. Upon arrival, police found no subjects and no pumpkins.

Pumpkin tossed

A Howe Road resident reported a pumpkin had been thrown at his vehicle on Wednesday (Nov. 11). There was no damage and the caller wanted the incident logged.

Police have no suspects in a rash of pumpkin-caused vandalism to cars – some of which were on Howe Road – and occurring on Oct. 30 and 31. In the incidents, pumpkins were thrown from passing cars, causing damage. In one incident on S. Main Street, police said the pumpkin was thrown with such force that it broke the rear window and traveled through the inside of the car smashing the front windshield from the inside.

It is not clear if the latest incident (Nov. 11) is related.

Scituate also had similar incidents in the Arborway area, police said.

Leaves

A caller complained about leaves being raked onto the sidewalk last week that would impede pedestrians.

Police said it is illegal to shovel snow onto sidewalks but there is no current law about leaves.

Fifty three year old already down 30 pounds!

BEFORE
Before starting at Get in Shape, it was something I had thought about for awhile. I was looking for a program which would improve my overall health status. Going to a large gym did not fit my comfort zone. I began to notice ads for Get in Shape and began reading testimonials. I noticed a branch had opened in my town. It was a big step for me to walk through those doors. I started training that week. So far I am down 30 lbs! The training is challenging and ever changing. My blood pressure and cholesterol levels have gone down also. All these changes have encouraged me to stay the course, and I look forward to continuing my training and seeing further positive results!

Special Town Meeting

Cohasset residents indicate their votes during Monday's special Town Meeting at Cohasset High School.

No funding for Housing Trust

Dormitzer said this offered the process some checks and balances and gave the affordable housing opportunity, whatever it might be, to be considered in a "political context."

However, the Advisory Committee did not support the article. They heard from representatives of the Housing Trust in a meeting before Town Meeting where they voted on their recommendation.

"In the past CPC funding has been for specific projects," said Advisory Committee member Ed Lappen. This allocation was for a future project as opportunities arise in the real estate market. Lappen also requested that the Housing Trust find a new purpose for a $20,000 allocation previously given to them to do perc tests on town land. After receiving the allocation it was discovered perc tests were previously done.

Affordable Housing Trust chairman Jim Hamilton said the one area where Community Preservation hasn't dedicated a lot of funding is affordability. The Housing Trust could provide the expertise to specifically look for affordable housing opportunities.

The vote leaves the Affordable Housing Trust without any available funds to pursue their charge of finding and enabling affordable housing in Cohasset.

The Housing Partnership Committee, which has morphed into the Affordable Housing Trust Committee, has been working since 2006 to identify affordable housing opportunities and develop zoning bylaws. The Affordable Housing Trust was established by a majority vote at the 2008 annual Town Meeting and was expected to assume many of the same duties — plus some new ones — performed by the housing partnership over the last few years.

The housing trust model was developed in a response to the state's Chapter 40B affordable housing law in order to be proactive in the housing market. It is designed to have funding at its disposal in order to actively seek projects and not be rigidly tied to the Town Meeting cycle.

"Real estate deals come up virtually overnight and right now we have to wait six months for a town meeting…it's like saying let's create a bank and you go down to the vault and there's not $1 in there," Hamilton said. "We're going to find some housing, I promise, but we need that flexibility."

There was no discussion on the article from the floor of Town Meeting, so the motion moved to a vote.

After calling for a voice vote twice, Town Moderator Dan Evans said he couldn't clearly hear the vote. A hand count was called for and the return was extremely close – 45 voted in favor of the expenditure, 50 voted against.

Other CPC recommendations

Town Meeting support the other three recommended CPC allocations:

- Meetinghouse Pond: A total of $10,000 was given for the town to hire a professional engineer to complete the final plans and prepare the bid documents for the future project. CPC vice chair Jeff Waal said the CPC felt the complete restoration of the pond was too much money at this time although they supported the project. Waal said he expected the project to come back in the spring for the full amount, which is estimated at $210,000. The motion was passed with a majority vote.
- Open space: Town Meeting voted unanimously to set aside $40,000 to go toward retiring the debt incurred in the purchase of several open space lots in order to protect Lily Pond, the town's primary water source. The 20-year bond can be paid off in 2015 (after 10 years have elapsed).
- Beechwood Ballpark: The CPC previously recommended a $35,000 allocation to fund infield drainage improvements and additional fencing for safety reasons. However, Town Counsel Paul DeRensis gave the article and recommendation a "thumbs down" as it did not fit into the purposes of the Community Preservation Act. The article was indefinitely postponed.

Town Meeting Notebook

Fiscal 2011 will be tough year

The current town's best guesstimate for fiscal 2011 leaves the municipality with a $1 million shortfall, Advisory Committee chair Sam Wakeman said on the floor of Town Meeting.

"We were very lucky to finish fiscal 2009 with money to cover the snow and ice deficit. It is going to be a very difficult year for us to experience the same situation," Wakeman said.

Wakeman said the town is going to have to find ways to increase revenues or face reductions in services.

Wakeman and representatives from the Board of Selectmen, School Committee, Advisory Committee and Capital Budget Committee that make up the newly created Budget Planning Group have been reviewing different fiscal scenarios for the upcoming budget season and beyond.

"We want to hear opinions from all of you…and make this as open and transparent a process as possible," Wakeman said.

Planning Board associate member

The town election this year will have a new position on the ballot — Planning Board associate member. Town Meeting passed an article creating an elected three-year Planning Board associate member position to sit in (and potentially vote) on special permit applications.

Planning Board member Clark Brewer described the associate member as a working member of the board and a voting member under certain circumstances. Because of the complexities of special permit applications, the public hearings can span months — and elections.

The associate member would vote on projects if a regular Planning Board member were ineligible to vote due to absence from one of the public hearings, inability to act or conflict of interest, or in the event of a vacancy or an application that crosses an election.

The thought behind the associate member is it could help maintain a full five-member Planning Board vote in the case of special permits application under the following bylaws: wind energy conversion, transit-oriented district, cluster development and the village business district bylaw. Special permits are unique because they require a "super majority" with four out of five members voting to approve the project.

An amendment was proposed and accepted by Town Meeting allowing the associate member's participation to be automatic when it came to a special permit application, rather than at the Planning Board chairman's discretion. Brewer and Town Counsel Paul DeRensis did not agree with the amendment because the article as it was written was taken from the state zoning act.

However, Pat Waters of the Advisory Committee proposed the amendment and it received the necessary majority vote.

"Giving discretion to the chair to seat or not seat the associate member unnecessarily politicizes the practice," Waters said. "There's no need for (the chairman) to have undue discretion."

The amended article was adopted by a two-thirds majority vote.

Demolition of house approved

Town Meeting gave their approval for the town to move forward with the demolition of a house on Hull Street. The Board of Health sought a $20,000 appropriation to demolition the rapidly deteriorating house.

Board of Health chair Peggy Chapman said the house has been uninhabitable and not entered for over two years.

"It has reached a point of dangerousness," Chapman said, adding this was a serious issue and the first time a motion was on the floor for demolition to her knowledge.

The owner of the property was evicted in 2007 and is now living in another town. Efforts to contact her and her sister have not been returned. A lien will be placed on the property to allow the town to recover all the expenses incurred.

The $20,000 appropriation includes a contingency in case there is a need for lead paint or asbestos removal.

Both the Selectmen and the Advisory Committee recommended approval of the article.

The article passed with a majority vote.

The Board of Health will seek to a court order to ensure the town has not exposure or liability.

Busy professional and mom drops three jean sizes!

BEFORE

For over eight years I only talked about cutting back in my dietary habits and working out. I have always struggled with having self-discipline to go to the gym. After one last failed and frustrating shopping experience, I was now motivated; not to mention I was approaching fifty years old.

I walked into Get In-Shape for Women and quickly realized this is exactly what I needed. The workouts are scheduled, divided by time with a trainer and time on your own, as well as having bi-weekly weigh-ins and motivational personnel. All of these things fit my need to be held accountable.

I set my goals to lose twenty pounds and to get in shape in six months. I kept this promise to myself by committing to a healthy food plan as well as devoting three hours a week to solid workouts. Due to my varying work schedule, my weekly commitment changed constantly, and my trainers were always accommodating.

AFTER

I am very proud that my recent shopping spree with my daughter was a pleasant experience. In six months I lost twenty pounds, ten percent of my body fat and three jean sizes. I have lots of energy and have never been in better shape. Thank you, Get In-Shape for Women.

Special Town Meeting

Easement not granted

Town Meeting votes down Cook Estate easement

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

Town Meeting voters did not act favorably on a proposed easement for the Cook Estate developers.

Concerns were raised about the size of the easement and what the purpose would be for that easement, if granted.

The article (article 8) requested voters to give the Board of Selectmen the authorization to grant an easement for approximately one-acre of conservation restriction town land to Abbott Homes, the developers of the Cook Estate.

The details of the easement would have been worked out in a separate document, but according to the article it was for the purposes of surface drainage of water from a point source discharge pipe and for access to provide erosion control, to prune vegetation and to remove related debris related to water discharge.

Selectman Fred Koed, speaking on behalf of the Selectmen, said his board felt the easement was in the town's interest. "It provides that any damage (to town property) from water from the Cook Estate that they have to pay (to fix it)," Koed said.

Richard Henderson, attorney for Abbott Homes, said this easement was a requirement of the special permit granted to the Cook Estate cluster development. It was a suggestion by the town's consulting engineer.

Henderson said there is a possibility in an extreme storm a retention basin could overflow and damage the town's land.

"In order to enter the property if there is destruction we need an easement," Henderson said, describing the easement as an "administerial act."

Bernadette Crawford of Old Pasture Road questioned the need for an easement over such a large swath of land (approximately an acre) as well as the purpose for the easement.

"This is very unclear to me what the developer will be able to do on the land," Crawford said.

Koed said it was the engineers who determined the appropriate size for the easement and it would be the Conservation Commission who would instruct the developer as to how to correct any damage.

"This easement is creating more commotion than necessary," said Ken Ingber of Woodland Drive, suggesting the town could always grant a license to the developer without a town meeting vote.

Tom Gruber of Pratt Court asked what the enforcement provisions were in the easement to ensure the town has recourse in the event water washed onto the conservation land.

Town Counsel Paul DeRensis said the easement language was still being worked on, but in the latest draft there was an indemnification provision.

Selectmen vice chair Karen Quigley was not in favor of the easement. She said was among those who fought for the conservation restriction to be placed on the town land in question four years ago.

She proposed the town find another way to protect the town's interest, rather than a permanent easement.

"The Planning Board may have goné a little too far (in its request)," Quigley said, adding there should have been some consultation with the Selectmen and the Conservation Commission.

Jim McAuliffe, one of the principals of Abbott Development, said his company was willing to work with the town to find a solution.

"Sometimes a small problem can blow up to something big," McAuliffe said. "We'd never go on the land except at the direction of the town."

When Town Moderator Dan Evans called for a vote, it was too close to call. A two-thirds majority vote was needed for approval.

After a hand count, the second of the evening, there were 59 in favor and 36 opposed. The vote failed to garner the two-third majority, which would have been 64 votes.

Cohasset Town Manager Bill Griffith speaks during Monday evening's special Town Meeting.

Santa cruises into Cohasset next Friday

Jolly Old Elf, Mrs. Claus and elves arrive by boat

The South Shore Community Center in Cohasset invites families and friends to its 15th Annual Jingle Bell Walk to be held on Friday, Nov. 27.

Come to Cohasset Harbor at 2 pm and watch Santa and Mrs. Claus and their many elf assistants arrive by boat. Santa and the elves pass out jingle bells and then they board a horse-drawn wagon.

Everyone is invited to follow the parade to the Community Center for hot cocoa, punch and cookies. Enjoy the community sing-along of traditional holiday favorites sung by Mrs. Claus and Santa with Frosty, Rudolph and the merry Elves. There will be photos with Santa, open bowling, face painting, a Turkey Trot and Hayrides on Cohasset Common. Rusty Skippers Band will entertain at the end of the day and the Christmas tree is lighted on Cohasset Common. This is a wonderful community event that is sure to put everyone in the Holiday Spirit.

Cohasset Harbor is off Border Street. Santa arrives on the Town Dock on Government Island. Government Island is the first left over the bridge after passing Atlantica restaurant.

For more information, call the community center at 781-383-0088.

Flaherty - Wolfe

Peter Flaherty and Carol Graham of Cohasset announce the engagement of their daughter, Catherine Elizabeth Flaherty, to James David Wolfe, son of Christine Wolfe of Scituate and David Wolfe of Humarock.

The bride-to-be is currently employed as a project manager at JMG Construction Corp. in Cohasset. Her fiancé owns McLaughlin and Wolfe Painting Co. servicing clients throughout the South Shore.

The couple will be married on Aug. 28, 2010, at the First Trinitarian Congregational Church in Scituate. A reception will follow at The Pine Hills in Plymouth.

GIMME SHELTER

Chablis is buff-colored, medium-haired and quite the beauty.

Chablis is looking for loving home

Chablis is about 3 years young. She was surrendered by a woman who became ill and could no longer care for her.

This week, Hull Seaside Animal Rescue would like to try to find a home for Chablis. Chablis is about 3 years young. She was surrendered by a woman who became ill and could no longer care for her. She had a very loving home as an only cat and is looking for a similar situation. She is buff-colored, medium-haired and quite the beauty. Please stop by and meet her and our many adoptable cats and, yes, we will have kittens soon.

People who are interested in adoption and would like to make an appointment can call Shirl at 781 925 3380.

HSAR is a no kill shelter. If you do decide to adopt from us we ask that you will promise to never de-claw the cat and to keep it as an inside only cat. Cats that are kept indoors live an average of 10 years longer than cats that are indoors/out-doors cats.

Open hours at the shelter are 2 to 3 p.m., on Saturdays, and 6:30 to 7:30 p.m., on Mondays. For information, call 877-378-1195, or visit the website at hsar.org. The mailing address is P.O. Box 787, Hull, MA 02045. The actual address is 50 L St. Hull.

Alex Shandley and Dan Toomey take a break from raking leaves on a perfect Fall day in Cohasset.

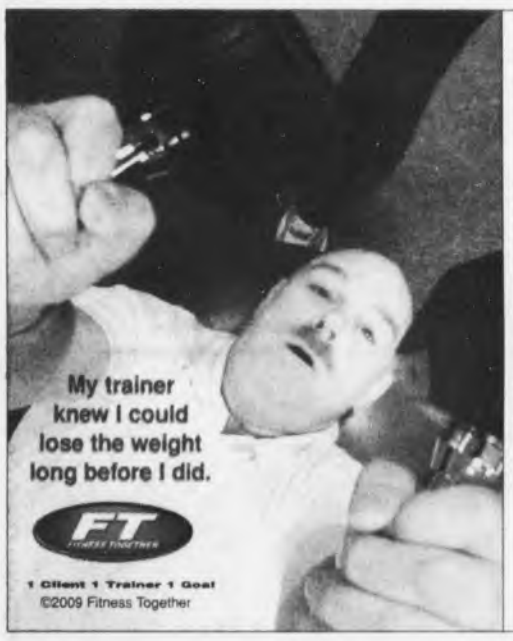
Thanksgiving Day run for two great causes

Thanks-for-Giving 5k Road Race is Thursday, Nov. 26, at 7:30 a.m. at Cohasset Town Hall.

The "Thanks-for-giving 5k Road Race" will be held on Thanksgiving morning at 7:30 a.m. The race begins and ends at Cohasset Town Hall and will follow Jerusalem Road, Nichols Road, Atlantic Avenue and back up Beach Street to the finish.

The family run is a great way to start your day and show your support to two great causes the Cohasset Recreation Department and the Clark Chatterton Memorial Fund. Take advantage of the pre-registration discounts by registering by Nov. 24.

Cohasset Recreation Center is at 41 Highland Ave. For more information or to sign up for activities, stop by the office, or visit www.cohassetrec.com or call 781-383-4109.



New alternative art group forming

Attention alternative artists – those who love to create collage, assemblage, art journaling, paper projects, mixed media and more – a new group is forming to offer community, sharing of techniques and possible collaborative projects. Those who read "Somerset Studio, Paper, Cloth & Scissors," know who Teesha Moore is, what ATCs are, have participated in a fat book, have attended an art retreat or would like to learn more, then this group may be the place. An exploratory meeting will take place at 7 p.m., on Wednesday, Dec. 9, in the Whiton Room at Hingham Public Library, 66 Leavitt St. Regular meetings will start in January.

Boat builder and Cohasset native, Richard Wilmore, sits inside an old wooden boat that will be restored by Cohasset High School students next summer.

Boat builder Richard Wilmore stands in the doorway of the Cohasset Maritime Boathouse, which is being renovated into a boat building workshop.

The introduction of a boatbuilding program to CMI is the realization of a long-standing desire for the club, said CMI co-founder Jack Buckley.

"CMI chose its name carefully. We could have called ourselves Cohasset Community Rowing. In some ways, that's what we are and why we exist – to promote recreational and competitive rowing opportunities for people of all ages in and around the town of Cohasset. But we chose to call ourselves an 'institute' and one with a maritime focus," Buckley said in an e-mail.

"What could be more central to maritime education and more central to Cohasset's history than to offer classes and opportunities to learn the traditional arts and skills of wooden boat building?"

Buckley said boatbuilding programs for youth and adults is a way to honor the past, especially the history of the boathouse, which once served as lifesaving station.

Wilmore, who can aptly be described as a man of the sea, has been involved in a variety of maritime activities. From salmon fishing in Alaska to wooden boatbuilding to navigating the open sea on boat deliveries, Wilmore is a maritime renaissance man.

Out west Wilmore started a shipwrights co-operative and for the past 11 years worked at the Northwest School of Boatbuilding, which is a associate's degree program.

"Boatbuilding is a challenge over normal carpentry – and you can use them after you build them," Wilmore said. "It takes a lot of patience and skill."

Wilmore said he is hoping to be part of keeping the long tradition of wooden boat building alive, "it is becoming lost with all the plastic molding boats. I'm trying to preserve that skill and carry it on."

For kids and youth especially, Wilmore said learning the skill of traditional boat building can be a satisfying and rewarding experience. He said the tangible result of a working (and floating!) boat has stuck with many of the kids he's worked with though the years.

"It's a way to re-new their connection with the water and the world around them," Wilmore said. "There's a lot of great adventures out there."

Buckley, who is also a social studies teacher at Cohasset High, is optimistic traditional boat building will appeal to the town's youth and adults.

"People of all ages relish opportunities to be actively engaged in hands-on learning that is intellectually challenging and aesthetically pleasing. Boat building is such an activity," Buckley said.

CMI boathouse renovation

Cohasset Maritime Institute's boathouse is getting a facelift.

Last week, the project, which has been nearly two years in the making, got its start. At Annual Town Meeting in 2007 voters allocated $50,000 in Community Preservation funding to renovate the Cohasset Maritime Institute's boathouse.

George Baumgarten, president of CMI, said they expect the renovations to be complete before the new year.

"It's in full swing right now, the roof is ripped off and they are in the middle of construction," Baumgarten said in a phone interview.

The project scope included the hiring of a historical architect, the installation of a new roof, new windows, insulation and an update to the electrical system. What Baumgarten describes as a "historically-minded renovation" sticks to the historical look of the boathouse, but makes the space more useable on a year-round basis. The renovations will enable the boat-building classes to take place nearly year-round fulfilling the mission of CMI to be a maritime institute, not just a rowing club.

In addition to the $50,000, CMI has plans to make renovations to the interior of the boathouse with about $15,000 of their own funding gathered from fundraising, grants and their reserves. They will also purcharse and install the wooden boat building tools.

The project bidding process and selecting the architectural firm took time, Baumgarten said, which is why the actual construction is just getting underway now.

CMI's rowing programs have grown exponentially since its inception in 1994. The organization has a thriving youth and adult rowing program.

"We're a community-based program for rowing – and now boatbuilding," Baumgarten said.

The boathouse, which is located at the end of Parker Ave. on Cohasset Harbor, is owned by the town and is leased to CMI. It was built in 1855 as a maritime life saving outpost and later was used to build Fran Hagerty's racing shells.

Regionalized dispatch

We applaud Selectman Fred Koed for suggesting an agenda item at the Selectmen's meeting on Monday (Nov. 30) to hear concerns from police officers, dispatchers, firefighters, and the public-at-large about regionalizing dispatch service with other towns.

"Regionalization" has such a nice ring to it today because most of us believe it translates into more efficiency and cost savings.

With regionalized dispatch, that could be the case. But before signing on the dotted line, we think the town needs to hear from those who deliver public safety services to our citizens.

Police officers, firefighters and our civilian dispatchers are on the front lines.

When someone calls for help – it is nice to hear a voice at the other end of the line that is intimately familiar with our small town. It is comforting and reassuring.

Planning Board Chairman Al Moore frequently warns about "unintended consequences." He often says that at Planning Board meetings when zoning changes are being proposed.

The phrase, however, can pertain to a lot of different things, including regionalized dispatch service.

Here are some of the questions our police officers and dispatchers are seeking answers to:

- Are core police services going to be affected?
- Will the town seek to reduce safe manning on police shifts?
- When dispatch is outsourced to Hingham, who will cover the window in Cohasset or answer non-emergency calls? Will Cohasset hire "greeters" to do this or will the third officer be pulled off the road to handle the situation?
- Cohasset has paid more than $1/4 million over the past decade to upgrade its fire and police radio infrastructure. Does Cohasset's radio infrastructure become the property of Hingham or the consortium? If the town leaves the consortium does it get the equipment back?
- If the police station is closed at night and the midnight to 8 a.m. shift is reduced to two officers, who will guard the station, the evidence and officers' personal vehicles?
- Booking a prisoner requires two officers be present, three if a drunk driver is involved. If the midnight shift is reduced to two officers, who will cover the town during the two-hour booking process?
- What real benefits does a regional dispatch center offer? Do those outweigh giving up full local control of one of the most important services that Cohasset offers to its residents? Would it be wise to take a wait-and-see position to let the kinks be worked out?
- Will grant money be available to cover legal expenses association with potential union grievances?

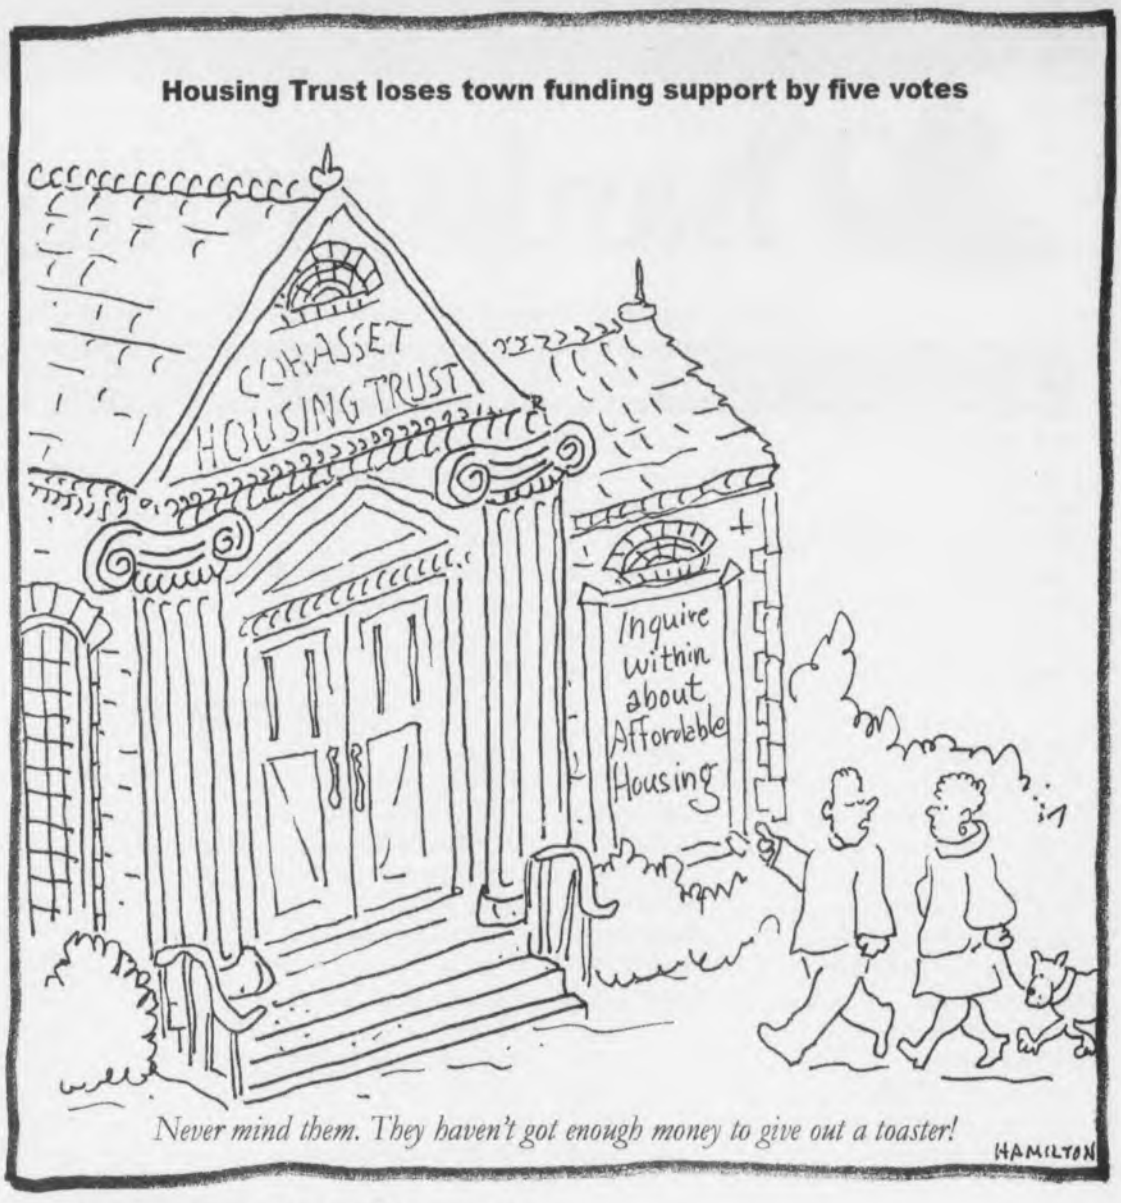
We urge residents to read Officer James McLean's commentary on page 13. Contact the selectmen and Town Manager and let them know what you think. Also, plan to attend the Selectmen's meeting on Nov. 30 when these and other questions should be addressed.

Noon, Tuesday

Next Thursday is Thanksgiving. Due to the holiday, the Cohasset Mariner will go to press a day early but the paper will still arrive in your mailboxes and at the newsstands on Friday.

That means that all copy and photographs for next's week edition must arrive by noon Tuesday (Nov. 24).

Coverage of the Thanksgiving Day football game will appear the following Friday (Dec, 4). Check www.wickedlocalcohasset.com for news and sports updates between newspaper editions.



We want to serve you the best we can. Please try to honor our early deadline next week.

MEETINGS

The following meetings are posted at Town Hall:

CMHS School Council, Dec. 2 and Jan. 6, 2:30 p.m. at the high school.
Council on Elder Affairs, Dec. 14, 9 a.m. at 3 N. Main St.
Harbor Committee, Dec. 8, 8 p.m. & Jan. 12, 7p.m.

Library Trustees, Dec. 10, 7p.m. at the library.
Planning Board, Nov. 24, 7p.m. & Dec. 2, 7p.m.
Recreation Commisson, Dec. 1, 6:30 p.m.
Sewer Commission, Nov. 24, 6 p.m.

All meetings take place at Town Hall unless otherwise noted. Call the Town Clerk's office at 781-383-4100 for updates and additions.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Making a difference around town

TO THE EDITOR:

Although faced with rainy weather, our volunteers came through making a difference this past weekend. Many families and high-schoolers rescheduled to Sunday to take advantage of the drier weather to go out and assist many of our elderly neighbors with the raking and disposal of leaves strewn about their lawns. Some families rescheduled to after-school hours this week or even next weekend.

The commitment made by these families and high-schoolers is extraordinary and so appreciated by those whom are helped, as well as by Pam Turpel and myself as co-chairs of the Make-A-Difference-Day committee. Feedback from both volunteers and homeowners has been positive and it is a pleasure to see the generations of the town come together to help one another out.

A huge THANK YOU and hats off to all who participated! A very Happy Thanksgiving to you all.

UNICEF drive a success!

TO THE EDITOR

On behalf of the Cohasset Teens for UNICEF club, we would like to thank the children in Cohasset that participated in the "Trick or Treat for UNICEF" campaign. In particular, we appreciate the efforts of Saint Anthony's CCD classes and the South Shore Community Center Nursery School classes.

Also, we would like to thank everyone who gave donations to the children who came knocking on their doors on Halloween night to "trick or Treat for UNICEF." This year we raised $342.68. Thank you again to everyone who helped bring "Trick or Treat for UNICEF" back to Cohasset. We will be back again next year.

Overdue thank you to Cohasset Police

TO THE EDITOR:

In this season of Thanksgiving, I would like to extend a long overdue "thank you" to the Cohasset Police for proactively working with a witness who saw a truck badly damage my car mirror while parked on the Cohasset Common on September 15th.

The police officer was able to radio the Hingham police who were able to pull over the truck heading north on Route 3A. With the truck driver's information, I was able to pursue an insurance claim through his insurance company. Thanks to the quick thinking and initiative of the Cohasset Police, I saved $300 getting my mirror fixed.

Town Meeting like a box of chocolates

COMMENTARY

EILEEN HART

The 100th person arrives and the box of chocolates is opened. Plain chocolates, budget items, preservation fund, the pond, the ball field, let's see white chocolate? Do I want to indulge? Can I afford too? Article 8.

Oh, Article 8 may be caramel? Give the developer of the Cook Estate a 19-acre parcel/27 home project an acre of town land as a permanent easement. We get to this one, the developer wants this chocolate. "We will not touch a blade of grass unless you want us too." The Selectman or four Selectman want this chocolate. "It's not that big of a deal, our town boards in the permitting process promised them the land, so just vote yes to give it to developer. The easement hasn't really been written, just vote yes." The citizens and one selectman want this chocolate too. In 2005 this land was voted on at town meeting to be put into conservation/open space to protect the wetlands and Peppermint Brook a tributary to our water.

Imagine giving the chocolate to a developer and asking him not to touch it, let alone eat it? More banter, why give away chocolate? Will we give all the developers in town chocolate? Conservation weighs in, the chocolate didn't look like this when presented to our committee. (The plans were different.)

The vote…The chocolate goes to the citizens and the land remains to protect the wetlands and Peppermint Brook. Every citizen's man, woman and child have a piece and we collectively taste the chocolate. Some chatter at the selectman table, Article 9? No, the selectman talk about giving the land away under licensing at their next Selectman meeting. Give me a napkin the center of my chocolate is rancid. Everyone get a glass of water rinse out the taste. The citizens bring the cup to their lips, but the water is brown.

Absentee ballots for the special state primary

Absentee ballots for the Special State Primary on Dec. 8 are now available at the Town Clerk's office. Absentee voting may be done during normal office hours until noontime on Monday, Dec. 7, at which time the office will be closed to prepare for the election. You should vote in person on Election Day if you are in town and able to come to the polls. You may vote absentee for the following reasons only:

- Absence from the town during the hours the polls is open.
- Physical disability.
- Religious beliefs, which prevent voting at the polls on Election Day.

The applicant must request an absentee ballot. Applications are available in the Town Clerk's office or a written, signed request can be sent by mail, or hand delivered by the voter or any other person. The application should include the legal voting address of the voter, which ballot is requested, Democrat, Republican, or Libertarian, where the ballot is to be mailed, and the signature of the applicant. If a voter is Unenrolled (Independent) he needs to choose a ballot and will remain un-enrolled after the primary.

Returned ballots should be mailed or can be delivered by an immediate member of the family to the Town Clerk's office by Dec. 8, 2009 to be counted.

How many pounds of asphalt were used?

MAKING TRACKS

TOM GRUBER & MARK BRENNAN

Cohasset Paving, Lots of It – Wonders of all wonders! We actually had a continuous six and one-half days of paving work accomplished over the last two weeks. The weather was excellent. The paving contractor worked their magic in the best possible way. We started paving Wednesday afternoon Nov. 4th and finished late Thursday afternoon on Nov. 12th. Every road we had on our list to be paved was paved. We know that it was a temporary inconvenience to some residents as we paved near their homes, but most residents were very understanding. This was especially true for those on dead-end roads where the asphalt supply trucks had to back down the full length of the road to feed the paving machine. We thank you for your patience.

The photo shows Ian Linhart of Red Gate Lane, who came out to help and give us a hand directing the paving operations. Thanks to Ian, Red Gate Lane really looks great! We couldn't have done it without him.

While we were paving the roads on our list, we took a bit of extra asphalt and, as we mentioned last week, laid a shim coat over the roughest spots of Jerusalem Road near Holly Hill Farm. This was a part of our plan to make the roads a bit better before the snow flies. We also plan to do some patching where other bad spots exist. This week we had our routine bimonthly meeting with National Grid (gas) and they have agreed to help by "freshening up" their trenches where their patches have settled. All of these actions will be a help for not only the public who use our roads, but for the Department of Public Works who has to plow when the winter brings its snow storms

A Quick, Fun Contest for Our Readers — The Greenbush guys were sitting in the office tabulating the statistics about the paving that was just completed. Just to make things interesting and to have a bit of fun, we'd decided to have a little contest for our readers. Just guess the actual pounds of asphalt that we placed on our streets during these 6-1/2 days of paving. The closest guess will win a prize. There will be only one winner, and only one entry is allowed per email address. In the event of a tie, the winner will be chosen by lot. Entries will be accepted by email only and must state your name and address, and phone number. Town employees and their families are not eligible to win. Please submit your guesses to cgbaffairs@townofcohasset.org. No email entries will be accepted after 4:30 p.m. on Wednesday, Nov. 25th (the day before Thanksgiving). The winner, at a time convenient to him or her, must be present at the award ceremony in our office at Town Hall.

COURTESY PHOTO

Ian Linhart directs the paving operation.

Entries will be accepted by email only and must state your name and address, and phone number.

We can tell you that the prize is truly a very limited production item that relates to the Greenbush Railroad and could be a true collector's item as time goes on. Other than that, we have been sworn to absolute secrecy by higher authorities.

Little Harbor Sewer Project – The information packages have been sent out to the residents in Group A. This group consists of Deep Run, Rust Way and a few Jerusalem Road residents in proximity to those two roads. The information packages consist of a booklet detailing the connection process, as well as two copies of a site plan, unique to each home. The site plan is very important since it will be used to mark the locations of all utilities in the site, which may interfere with your sewer connection as well as where the sewer line will be run on your property.

Included in the information package will also be a second brochure detailing the procedures that may be employed for installing a new water line. You may ask, "Why would I want to add a new water line?" Well, if you consider that a number of homes in the Little Harbor area are older, some may have undersized water service lines, or lines that may have narrowed over the years from mineral deposits. Since one of the major costs in a new water or sewer service is the trench, it makes sense from a cost standpoint to take advantage of the opportunity to put a second pipe in the same trench. Also, if you redo the water and sewer services at the same time, you may want to run the new sewer line in the existing water trench. This approach may be particularly cost advantageous if you have a lot of ledge on your property. But, keep in mind that whenever water and sewer lines are in the same trench, each line must be encased in a secondary pipe.

In the sewer information package, is a list of Drain Layers that are registered with the Town. We are told that selecting a Drain Layer will be a key component to the sewer installation. It is the Drain Layer who will guide you through the application process and assist you in completing the forms, selecting a route for the line to your home as well as the specific grinder pump that may best suit your needs. If you intend to upgrade your water line at the same time, make sure that the Drain Layer you choose is also qualified to install water lines as well. Once you get the information package, it is probably best to interview Drain Layers and get quotes from them so they can assist you with the steps necessary to complete the hook-up. Setting up your contract with a Drain Layer will probably be one of your first steps.

After Group A, the Groups B, C & D will be sent sewer connection information packages. To add a bit of geography to these alphabetic designations, Group B is generally the Common and North Main St., Red Gate Lane, Gammons Road and Joy Place as well as the abutting portion of Jerusalem Road. Group C is Beach Street and the side roads off of Beach St. Group D is the middle part of Jerusalem Road from Steep Rocks to Nichols and Nichols areas, and the associated side roads.

When you make your application to the Sewer Commission be prepared for the application fee of $1,000. This covers technical review of your application, Conservation Commission inspections, Sewer Department inspections and initial pressure testing of the newly installed lines. Note, that if the pressure test fails, an additional test will be required at extra cost. You may want to think about this liability when you set-up your contract with the Drain Layer. Other expenses include the grinder pump and associated controls and finally the betterment charge for the project as set by the Sewer Commission. The grinder pump equipment that you select must be paid for in a payment made directly to the Town.

As a parting comment each homeowner should probably start by selecting a Drain Layer. As we mentioned earlier, they will be your partner in guiding you through the installation process. And, Diane Hindley in the Sewer Commission office at 781-383-4108 would be glad to answer any questions you may have or refer you to someone who can answer them.

Regional dispatch has dangerous side effects

COMMENTARY

OFFICER JAMES MCLEAN

To this point the stakeholders in this proposal, residents, police officers, firefighters, and dispatchers, have not been invited to participate in this process...

The Cohasset Police Association (CPA) is comprised of members of the Cohasset Police Patrolman's Association and the Cohasset Police Superior Officers Association. We are some of the people that you entrust with your safety and security.

Members of the CPA want to shed light on a situation that is currently unfolding. The Town of Cohasset is contemplating entering into an agreement with the towns of Hingham, Hull, and Norwell, to outsource its police and fire dispatch services. When you call 911 or 383-1212 from your Cohasset home, a dispatcher at the Hingham town hall would answer your call. These out-of-town dispatchers would take your information and then dispatch Cohasset emergency personnel to the location of your emergency.

Likely side effects to this move would include the closing of the Cohasset Police Station during evening hours or the removal of a Cohasset Police Officer from patrol to cover the police station's front desk. As it stands now, there are only two police officers and one police supervisor to handle calls in Cohasset — a total of three officers to handle a population of 7,617 people, which incidentally is slated to grow by 15 percent with the development of Avalon, Cedarmere, The Cook Estate, and the Transit Oriented Development on Route. 3A.

We will likely be faced with a situation where there are only two cops on patrol to handle emergency calls in Cohasset if the station is closed. If those two officers are tied up with an accident on Route 3A, which is not an uncommon event, and a resident calls for the police, nobody will be available to respond to your emergency call. This is the reality and sad truth that has not been told.

Under the new plan, persons seeking help at the Cohasset Police station, including our elderly neighbors at 60 Elm St., would use a telephone located at the station to call the Hingham town hall to request that a Cohasset Police Officer be sent to help them at the front door of the closed police station. In turn, Cohasset would pay a prorated fee to the Town of Hingham for dispatch services, not much less than what you pay now. Cohasset would lose the full control over the way vital dispatch services are offered.

To this point the stakeholders in this proposal, residents, police officers, firefighters, and dispatchers, have not been invited to participate in this process — it has be shrouded in secrecy by the Town Managers in Hingham, Norwell, Hull, and Cohasset. Dispatchers have asked to be involved, only to receive a terse letter from the town manager stating that the regional dispatch meetings are closed to the public.

We think that Cohasset residents deserve better! We urge you to call or write the Board of Selectman and demand transparency and a full vetting of this proposal before it is too late. This is too important to not get involved in!

HEALTH NOTES

Making safe holiday meals

By Steve Bobo
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

Turkeys are in the news these days. Their abundance in suburban settings may not be a good thing. It seems that the increasing numbers of turkey farms, as in so many farm produced products, may be causing the thinning out of the natural geographic distribution of turkeys and thus the opportunity for those inclined to wander to find a mate having substantial genetic differences. Lack of genetic diversity thus could weaken turkeys for the environment they will encounter. However, other different factors may make the holiday meal remembered as either a great gastronomic delight or a gastrointestinal nightmare.

Cross-contamination may occur when you stuff the turkey and do not properly wash hands or cutting utensils before slicing vegetables for a snack or appetizer.

The turkey that you serve can be risky if you are not careful selecting and preparing it. Poultry products such as turkey and chicken are primary sources of the bacteria Salmonella and Campylobacter, two most commonly reported causes of illness, according to the Massachusetts Department of Public Health.

Symptoms, such as stomach cramps, vomiting, diarrhea and fever, usually occur one to five days after eating foods with high levels of bacteria. Usually bacteria are not harmful at levels typically found in most food sources. However, under favorable conditions, microorganisms can grow to harmful levels and make people sick. The moist, high protein content of turkey provides needed nutrients for bacteria to multiply. With warm temperatures (from 40°F to 140°F) and with enough time (usually two to four hours), bacteria can multiply rapidly from hundreds to thousands per bite! Thus, it is vital to keep foods out of the Danger Zone, the temperature range of 40°F to 140°F.

While turkey may be the original source of bacteria, these organisms can spread to other foods. Cross-contamination may occur when you stuff the turkey and do not properly wash hands or cutting utensils before slicing vegetables for a snack or appetizer. The cutting board and/or knife are contaminated by bacteria and, without thoroughly cleaning can spread harmful bacteria to the uncooked vegetables. Your hands may also be the source of other bacteria.

The Department of Public Health recommends that you protect yourself, your family and friends by the following safe turkey tips:

Separate Foods - Don't cross-contaminate!

- When you shop, keep the turkey away from other foods in your shopping cart.
- Place the turkey below other foods in your refrigerator to prevent them from becoming contaminated with turkey juices.
- Use separate cutting boards for cooked foods and raw foods.
- Never put the cooked turkey on the unwashed plate that previously held the uncooked turkey.
- Clean your hands and food surfaces often.
- Wash your hands with hot soapy water before touching the turkey and after you use the bathroom, change diapers and play with pets.
- Wash all cutting boards, dishes, kitchen tools and counter tops with hot soapy water after you finish fixing the turkey.

COOK foods to safe temperatures.

- Cook the turkey thoroughly. Use a food thermometer to check for doneness.
- Cook whole turkey unstuffed (or dark meat only) to 180°F
- Cook a turkey breast to 170°F

CHILL foods promptly.

- It is best to thaw the turkey in the refrigerator, NOT at room temperature.

THAW a whole turkey in the refrigerator.

- 8 to 12 pounds, one to two days
- 12 to 16 pounds, two to three days
- 16 to 20 pounds, three to four days
- 24 pounds, four to five days

Try thawing by setting the turkey on a plain aluminum-baking sheet. Check often and cook the thawed turkey immediately.

- Put prepared foods and leftover turkey in the refrigerator within two hours.
- Split large amounts of leftovers into small bowls and cool them in the refrigerator.

Rik Tinory sands by his Steinway and Sons Piano in his home off Pond Street. Tinory, a composer, producer, musician and singer, continues to have a storied career in the music industry.

Rik Tinory still going strong

Long-time music producer as busy as ever

By Matt Whorf
CORRESPONDENT

Rik Tinory might be reflective after more than 50 years in the recording and music business, but that doesn't mean he's any less busy.

"I've got so many different projects on my plate these days, from both past and present ventures, that there's hardly time to look back and think about where I've been or past moments, memories or brushes with fame or whatever.

"All this has simply been what I do for a career and profession for over 50 years, and I don't look at it as anything unusual," said Tinory during a recent interview inside the office of his home recording studio on Pond Street.

Tinory has had more than a few brushes with fame that he can recollect, and he does find time to reminisce a bit, but he can mix that with business as usual. Specifically, with two recent anniversaries observed last month by the longtime musician, composer, producer and studio owner.

One is the planned, re-mastered, re-packaged CD reissue in early 2010 of Pope John Paul II, On Boston Common, Oct. 1, 1979. This was Tinory's live recording of the late Pope's historic visit on the title date and location, marking its 30th anniversary and which Tinory originally released in a self-produced, limited edition vinyl LP back in 1979.

The historic event was described at the time by Tinory as an emotional and intense experience — sentiments which the producer still echoes today. Tinory had been commissioned by the Archdiocese of Boston to make an exclusive recording of the Pope's visit with his equipment setup from atop a subway kiosk.

The recording of the Pope has been called the largest on-location live recording in history, with attendance estimates ranging from 400,000 to more than 600,000, though Tinory himself weighs in his crowd count at over 1.2 million. Like the masses in attendance, Tinory braved the pouring rain and biting winds on Boston Common, which at one point ripped off the plastic canopy covering him, allowing water to pour into his two Ampex reel-to-reel tape recorders as well as raising serious concerns that all his tapes would be ruined.

The producer dried the tapes slowly with a hair dryer and they played perfectly — the wind and rain heard adding feeling to the recording.

"I'm hoping to reissue Pope John Paul II live on the Common early in 2010, and make it available again for the fourth of July festivities nationwide. The opening rendition of 'America the Beautiful,' with Pope John Paul's thundering voice heard throughout, will give you goose bumps it is so uplifting," Tinory said. "I think Americans struggling with hard times in our current economics will feel hope, love and a special bonding when they hear this."

The other anniversary was also in October, for the infamous wreck of the Brig St. John, which crashed and sank off the coast of Cohasset in October, 1849, killing 45 Irish emigrants and over 50 others. Tinory memorialized the tragedy in 2002 by writing the song, "Mother of Ireland," which he recorded for his production company with singer Stacy Rock, a Montana-born actress-vocalist whose style is compared to singers from Tom Waits to Tori Amos.

Rik Tinory Productions is the producer's 24-track Analog-Digital home studio that is down an unmarked driveway off Pond Street, surrounded by woods. First opened by Tinory in 1956, he proudly notes that RTP is now the oldest singularly owned recording company in the United States, officially since none other than the late, legendary Sam Phillips of Sun Studios in Memphis — where Elvis Presley, Jerry Lee Lewis and Johnny Cash among others made their first recordings — passed away in 2003.

The studio's history runs parallel with Tinory's own storied music career, which has spanned the generations from big band jazz to rock, pop and R&B in the MTV age and right up to the current IPod era. As a singer and/drummer, Tinory remembers working at such long-gone but not forgotten venues as Boston's The Hi-Hat, The Savoy and Storyville as well as being the house singer at New York's famed Copacabana and Grossingers Resort in the Catskill Mountains.

boxing champ Joe Louis invited him to be the first American performer to join him in Havana for the anniversary of the Cuban Revolution. Attending that event was Fidel Castro, Che Guevera, Ernest Hemingway and legendary Spanish dancer Esperanza Galan, who Tinory composed a song for at the famed Tropicana.

An equally rich show-biz history of famous names and collaborators highlights Tinory's long career as well, such as George Burns, Bob Hope, Don Costa for Frank Sinatra, Tom Jones, Henny Youngman, Dean Martin and Jerry Lewis. And, into recent times with Aerosmith, which took up a well-publicized 18-month residency at Tinory's home and studio for the making of the band's Grammy winning Pump album beginning in 1988, and returned for another nine months to make "Get A Grip." Norwell singer Susan Tedeschi cut her first CD — the independent Better Days — with Tinory at the Cohasset Studio

Other current promotions for Tinory include the reissue of another featured Stacy Rock vocal spot, "Christmas Angels," a 1990 recording that was a featured holiday-song pick in Billboard Magazine in 2007 as well as #1 on Armed Forces radio during the Gulf War.

Also, a long lost and obscure soul/R&B recording made by Tinory at his studio in 1968 has suddenly become a massive recent cult hit on European Internet radio. The song is "Baby You're A Jive Cat," a funky slice of horn-powered, late-60s EuroSoul, by Sheila Wilkerson, an aspiring, make-or-break R&B singer of the time who went on to record with Stevie Wonder, most notably playing percussion on his 1973 hit, "Don't You Worry 'Bout a Thing."

Tinory said that about three years ago, he received an e-mail from Gerald Short, the owner of an independent retro-music record label Jazzman Records in London, England. Short told him that 45 RPM-vinyl copies of "Jive Cat" plus another Wilkerson song co-written with Tinory, "Can You Do It," had recently been selling for up to $200 each throughout Europe and Asia by record collectors.

Short also requested licensing rights for the songs, owned by Tinory through his publishing company, Old Boston Publishing — BMI (Broadcast Music Inc.) for use on his then in-production Jazzman 60s-70s soul/pop compilation discs, Welcome to the Party and Sister Funk, Volume 2. Tinory granted the requests and, more than 40 years later, his productions with Wilkerson have taken on brisk new life in the European and Asian markets.

All of Tinory's current reissue disc or audio projects are available on the retail website www.bostonpete.com, or through the producer's own studio contacts at www.riktinory.com or 781 383-9494. (e-mail: riktinory@aol.com).

Said Tinory, "I take a certain pride in having worked with many famous musicians and performers over the years. But you don't want to dwell on stuff like that too much. It only tends to distract from the projects you're up to now. My direction today is geared towards younger artists, the demand today is for young, fresh, original. Actually nothing has changed, it's always been that way."

House passes legislation to support veterans

YOUR REP

GARRETT BRADLEY

I am pleased to inform you that the Massachusetts House of Representatives and Senate passed legislation that will help thousands of Veterans and their families. The legislation, an Act Providing Benefits to Veterans and Service Members, was signed by Governor Deval Patrick on Veterans Day. There are three pieces of this comprehensive bill that I filed this session that are part of this legislation. Many of these ideas were brought to my attention by Hingham residents Pete Shaw, and Keith Jermyn, a Navy Sea Bee who recently finished his second tour in Iraq.

The Massachusetts Medal of Liberty will recognize the ultimate sacrifice of Massachusetts service members and will be presented to the next of kin of service men and women killed in action.

After Keith's second tour in Iraq he applied for the Welcome Home Bonus, which was created by the legislature in 2005, and was denied because he had already received this benefit after his first tour. Currently, the Welcome Home Bonus program is administered by the State Treasurer and provides a onetime $1000 tax-free payment to Massachusetts service members activated since Sept. 11, 2001. Upon hearing of this, I filed legislation that would allow our soldiers to receive at least 50 percent of this benefit for each deployment. These funds help soldiers transition back into everyday life and allows the Commonwealth to provide information on various programs they may also be eligible for. This new provision does not allocate any new funds and will draw from the existing account since some 8,000 eligible service members have not sought these funds from the first deployment.

Also, last session I was approached by Pete Shaw, a Hingham Veteran, to file legislation to establish the Massachusetts Medal of Liberty. The Massachusetts Medal of Liberty will recognize the ultimate sacrifice of Massachusetts service members and will be presented to the next of kin of service men and women killed in action. I believe it is important that the Commonwealth formally recognizes these heroes who made the ultimate sacrifice for our Country. This legislation will allow the Commonwealth to do this through a medal presentation.

Keith Jermyn of Hingham is pictured with Rep. Bradley and Veterans Committee Chairman Harold Naughton. Keith is presenting the Commonwealth flag, which Bradley sent to him while he was deployed to Iraq.

Another component of this legislation, that was modeled after legislation I originally filed, will create "state homes" that will provide long-term care facilities for Veterans and their family members. The "state homes" will fund themselves through federal monies for veteran housing and private donations. This legislation will allow the Department of Veterans Services, in consultation with the secretary of administration and finance, to issue a request for proposal for one or more private entities to construct, purchase and operate public homes for veterans.

Establishing "state homes" is critical to the long-term care for our veterans. The population in the country and the Commonwealth is rapidly aging and the "gray tsunami" will hit in 2011 when the first Baby Boomer turns 65. This will create an even greater demand for services than currently exists. This is especially germane to veterans who have incurred injuries and illnesses as a result of their military service. Currently, there are approximately 200,000 veterans in Massachusetts who are over the age of 65. Like their civilian counterparts this aging veteran population will continue to grow. If only 5 percent of those veterans over the age of 65 require long-term care, that equates to 10,000 beds. Under the existing federal formula, the state qualifies for federal reimbursement for up to approximately 1300 beds. However, since state matching funds are limited, we only have 550 beds. This bill will not use state funds but will allow non-profits that receive the "state home" designation to apply for federal funds and raise remaining necessary matching funds privately.

Other highlights of this legislation include:

- Allows town clerks to provide the list of veterans residing in their city or town to the Executive Office of Veteran Affairs and local veterans' services.
- Makes it easier for veterans who are oversees to cast absentee ballots. Will allow service member to transmit their ballots by email or fax.
- Honorably discharged veterans would be given the opportunity to substitute appropriate military training and experience in occupational specialties in lieu of current state permitting, licensing and certification requirements.
- Calls for a disparity study to examine the history of discrimination toward service disabled veterans in the Commonwealth.
- Calls for a study to examine the capacity and health care services currently being provided by the Commonwealth's Soldiers Homes.
- Creates a feasible study and commission for the establishment of a Massachusetts Veterans Hall of Fame.
- Calls for a commission to study the feasibility and cost of creating a neuropsychological cognitive testing program for all military forces and an MRI screening programming for all service members.
- Allows qualified service members who meet eligibility requirements to receive a bonus for participation in Desert Shield or Desert Storm, this bonus would draw on existing funds only.

I am proud of this legislation and am thankful to all of our veterans for their service to our country. Should you have any questions, please do not hesitate to contact me.

State Rep. Garrett Bradley, D-Hingham, represents the Third Plymouth District of Hingham, Cohasset, Hull and one precinct in Scituate.

Police caught off guard speaking to Selectmen at their meeting before the start of Town Meeting. Griffin said last week he would be bringing the inter-municipal agreement forward at that time.

However, the issue was not discussed in detail on Monday and has been scheduled for discussion at the Monday, Nov. 30 Selectmen's meeting.

"In fairness to everybody, let's set a new date and set a meeting aside for it," said Selectman Fred Koed, citing concerns the public was not involved, it was not on television and it was difficult for people to hear inside the gymnasium.

Cohasset Police Dispatcher and Union President Kerri McCarthy places flyers on cars parked at Cohasset High School during special Town Meeting Monday evening following a brief meeting with the board of selectmen on the possible regionalization of dispatch services and closing the Cohasset Police Station in the evening hours.

Officer Jim McLean, president of the Cohasset Police Association, said last Friday's Mariner article about the potential signing of the inter-municipal agreement for the regional dispatch center before Town Meeting on Monday, was the first time they had heard the effort was going through and of the potential of the station being closed at night. McLean said they were not involved in the planning for the regional dispatch center.

"Our concerns are for our citizens if the station is closed," McLean said in a phone interview, adding Cohasset small size necessitates a community-based approach to police services. He believed the closing of the police station during the evening hours was a "backwards step" for the department.

"A police station should be a safe haven for all, 24 hours a day, seven days a week, 365 days a year," McLean said.

Many people do walk into the police station looking for emergency services whether it is medical attention or to report a problem or crime, McLean said.

"It only takes one person in dire need and no one's there for it to be a mistake. It just takes one," McLean said. "Emergency situations necessitate the police station be manned at all times."

McLean and the unions are also concerned the change in dispatch services will affect safe manning levels. Currently there is a minimum of three officers on duty at all times — two patrol officers and one supervisor. With no dispatcher to handle the calls or respond to walk-ins, McLean questions who will cover the window or answer the non-emergency calls.

Under the plan, a telephone with a direct link to the regional dispatch center, slated to be in Hingham Town Hall, will be installed outside of the station.

"It is not good for the people of this town and pay high taxes to live in this town," McLean said.

McLean said he and other union representatives would be at the Nov. 30 meeting to air their concerns. At Special Town Meeting the Cohasset Police Association left flyers on all the cars in the parking lot. The text of the flyer runs as a letter to the editor this week (see Opinions page).

Selectmen Chairman Paul Carlson said he would come to the table on Nov. 30 with "an open mind," but right now said for him the benefits outweighed the disadvantages.

"The town is under pressure from the state and the townspeople to regionalize services. We're set to receive a great deal of state money, which will save the town in the near-term and long-term," Carlson said. "I will listen with an open mind and be willing to reconsider."

According to Town Manager Bill Griffin, the regional dispatch center is expected to yield budget savings for the town as well as improve services for all residents. As this is one of the first such efforts in Massachusetts, the towns are receiving grant support for the effort.

The four towns have received more than $3.2 million from the State 911 Department to construct and equip the regional emergency communications center (RECC). A location in the Hingham Town Hall, next to the current police headquarters, has been targeted for the new center.

In addition, the state formula favors a regional approach and therefore will provide increased annual allocations for the dispatch center. Currently, the state provides approximately $130,000 to support the dispatch centers across the four towns. With the RECC, the state 911 Department will provide over $400,000 in offsets to support its operation.

Hingham's Board of Selectmen signed the inter-municipal agreement on Tuesday night. They are the first community to sign the agreement. At least two communities need to sign onto the agreement in order to trigger the state grant funding.

The discussion on the regional dispatch center is set for Monday, Nov. 30. Call the Selectmen's Office, 781-383-4105, for exact time.

Group has its say about pay

In September the paraprofessionals, a small group of employees that provides support to teachers and students during the school day, were shifted from salaried to hourly payroll. The payroll adjustment resulted in a significant loss of pay and a change to benefits.

To open the discussion, School Committee vice chair Alfred Slanetz gave his understanding of the situation.

"In every surrounding town and historically in the town of Cohasset you are hourly employees," Slanetz said to set the stage for discussion, also adding the schools will be facing a budget shortfall in the upcoming fiscal year.

"In this situation we want consistency, we want to treat people well, but we want to be consistent," Slanetz said.

School Committee member Paul Schubert recognized the poor timing of the notification of the pay change to the paraprofessionals (they were notified by memo of the change two days before school started).

However, Slanetz and the other school committee members' understanding of the issue seemed to change over the course of the meeting. The paraprofessionals produced several contracts, or letters notifying them of employment, where it clearly stated they were salaried employees, not hourly.

Pearl Smith, a paraprofessional at the middle school, was quick to correct the perception that their pay had always been hourly.

"We have a pile of contracts going back 31 years saying we are salaried employees," Smith said. At least one contract was presented to the members of the School Committee stating they are salaried employees and their yearly salary.

Superintendent of Schools Denise Walsh said somewhere along the way the set hourly rate was rolled up into a yearly salary for the 180 days worked. School business manager Dave DeGennaro said his best guess for the payroll change was to make it easier for the employees to pay their health insurance premiums.

However, the paraprofessionals said that did not change the fact that they have always been led to believe that they were salary employees and this payroll change was a huge change for them, Smith said.

Slanetz agreed, "In fairness, (this contract) does say their annual salary is ('x')."

Collette McElhinney, a paraprofessional at Deer Hill and the employee who requested the meeting, said the paraprofessionals were already budgeted for this year under the old payroll system and pay rate.

"It is not the cost here, we want to talk about what may be right," Slanetz said, offering the School Committee could consider returning to an annual salary this year with the understanding next year it would change to hourly pay.

To give the situation a human side, one paraprofessional said with the pay cut one of her coworkers was eligible for food stamps. Other paraprofessionals experienced difficulty paying their mortgages or had to go out and find a second job.

"It really has had a huge impact on us," one of the paraprofessionals explained, adding it was defeating to have worked for seven or more years in the school system and watch your salary slowly increase by 2 percent each year to "all of a sudden all of that wiped out…we're back to where we started on day one."

Sick benefits

Smith also brought up the issue of a loss of sick benefits. With the change in the way they were paid also came changes in their benefits. Each paraprofessional could only accrue up to seven sick days. Long-time employees who had accumulated scores of sick days (some have over 100) were no longer entitled to new sick days each year. They would not receive sick day benefits until the number of sick days fell below seven.

"I truly feel I have been discriminated against because I am a long-term employee," said Smith, who has been working for Cohasset Schools for 15 years.

Walsh said because the paraprofessionals are year-to-year employees they "never should have accrued sick days."

McElhinney said she didn't see what the harm was in accruing the sick days. Smith saw it as "insurance" in case one of them did get sick or be otherwise unable to work due to health reasons.

The paraprofessionals said they have been asking about how they will be able to pay for their health insurance over the holidays when they will not be working and therefore not receive a regular paycheck in early January. Right now, they pay for their health insurance each month in two installments, one from the first check of the month and one from the second.

"Are we going to have to write a check to the town for that month?" McElhinney asked. "If that's the case then December is going to be a hard month for some."

MacCarthy said before those issues are addressed, the school committee should decide what, if anything, they are doing to rectify the situation.

Several teachers spoke to the importance of the paraprofessionals in the classroom.

"We need to make this right, honor them and step up to the plate for them," said Judy Ritts, a teacher at the middle school.

As the discussion neared a close, MacCarthy said the meeting had been fruitful.

"We've gone over a lot of this, we were told (the paraprofessionals) had been on an annual salary, but seeing the paperwork makes a difference," MacCarthy said.

Slanetz seconded MacCarthy's sentiments and thanked the paraprofessionals for what they do for the schools and in the classroom.

"Hopefully we'll have good news for the holidays," said Slanetz.

The next school committee meeting is scheduled for Wednesday, Dec. 2 at 7p.m. According to discussion at Tuesday night's meeting, school committee members said the discussion would be done in executive session. If a decision is made regarding the pay and/or benefits for the paraprofessionals they would return to open session for the announcement.

Cohasset's Dana Valentine helped lead Cohasset to the South Shore League title with two touchdowns and a two-point conversion in the Skippers' clinching win over Norwell.

Cohasset clinches league crown

By Rick Seto
GATEHOUSE NEWS SERVICE

It's difficult to play at a high level an entire season, and the Cohasset High School football team appeared to have been caught in a trap game.

One week after winning a pivotal showdown over four-time defending South Shore League champion Abington, the Skippers needed a victory at Norwell on Friday night to clinch the league title. Midway through the third quarter, Cohasset clung to just a 20-14 lead.

However, the Skippers got the stops they needed and rode workhorse back Dana Valentine to a 34-14 triumph.

Improving to 9-0 overall and 5-0 in league play, Cohasset earned a berth in the Eastern Mass. Division 3A playoffs, regardless of its outcome at Hull on Thanksgiving.

"We're league champs!" Valentine said. "It feels great.

"Norwell's a good team, but this is a game we should have won. We came out and executed (even though) we came out a little slow in the first half."

Norwell (6-4, 2-4) closed to within 20-14 by scoring on the opening drive of the second half. Dan Regan connected with Colin Duffney over the middle for 48 yards with 6:02 left. Paul Donovan ran in on the two-point conversion.

Valentine (25 carries, 166 yards) then fumbled the ball away at the Norwell 21, but Cohasset forced a punt. The senior tailback got the ball on seven plays in the ensuing drive, the last being a 33-yard burst for the score. His two-point conversion run increased the score to 28-14 with 4:46 left.

Football

"After that missed exchange (on the fumble), I kind of lost my cool on the sidelines," Valentine said, "but I bounced back. It's how you recover from things.

"The offensive line does a great job every game. Without them, I'm nothing."

Jeff Cavanaro (6 of 19 passing, 100 yards) closed out the scoring with a 32-yard TD strike to Jack Carrier with 2:23 left.

Asked about his team responding when Norwell crept close, Cohasset coach Peter Afanasiw said, "They know what's on the line. They wanted this game. ... I just think it's difficult to keep that whole level up for an entire season, but they knew they had the talent and the faith in each other. When the offense wasn't clicking, the defense stepped up. When the defense was hurting, the offense put up some points."

Cohasset benefited in the first half after Norwell turned the ball over three times in four plays. Senior left end Nick Lieberman returned one fumble for a Cohasset TD with 1:34 left in the first quarter.

The Clippers' first play after the ensuing kickoff was a Dan Regan interception by cornerback Robert Jones. Cohasset, facing fourth-and-6 from the Norwell 35, turned the ball over when Valentine gained only 2 yards.

Another Cohasset INT placed the ball at the Norwell 29. Two plays later, junior fullback Thomas Flibotte rambled 24 yards for the score with 8:14 remaining in the half. Valentine's two-point conversion was good for a 14-0 lead.

Norwell, which had gained only 10 yards at that point, then marched 80 yards for a touchdown. Regan hit Dom Wooten for gains of 32 and 38 yards, the last for the score on third-and-6 to cut the deficit to 14-6. The PAT was blocked.

The Clippers were dealt by a blow on the next possession when A.J. DeBenedictis, the team's middle linebacker, went down with a leg injury that halted the contest for 15 minutes.

Skippers ready to board Pirate ship on Turkey Day

This year's Thanksgiving game between Hull and Cohasset looks to be a good one for the Skippers if they continue to show the focus and determination they've shown all season, a season that will be remembered as one of the best in school history.

Hull is 6-3 so far, but has played well defensively, holding teams to one touchdown or fewer five times this season.

Football

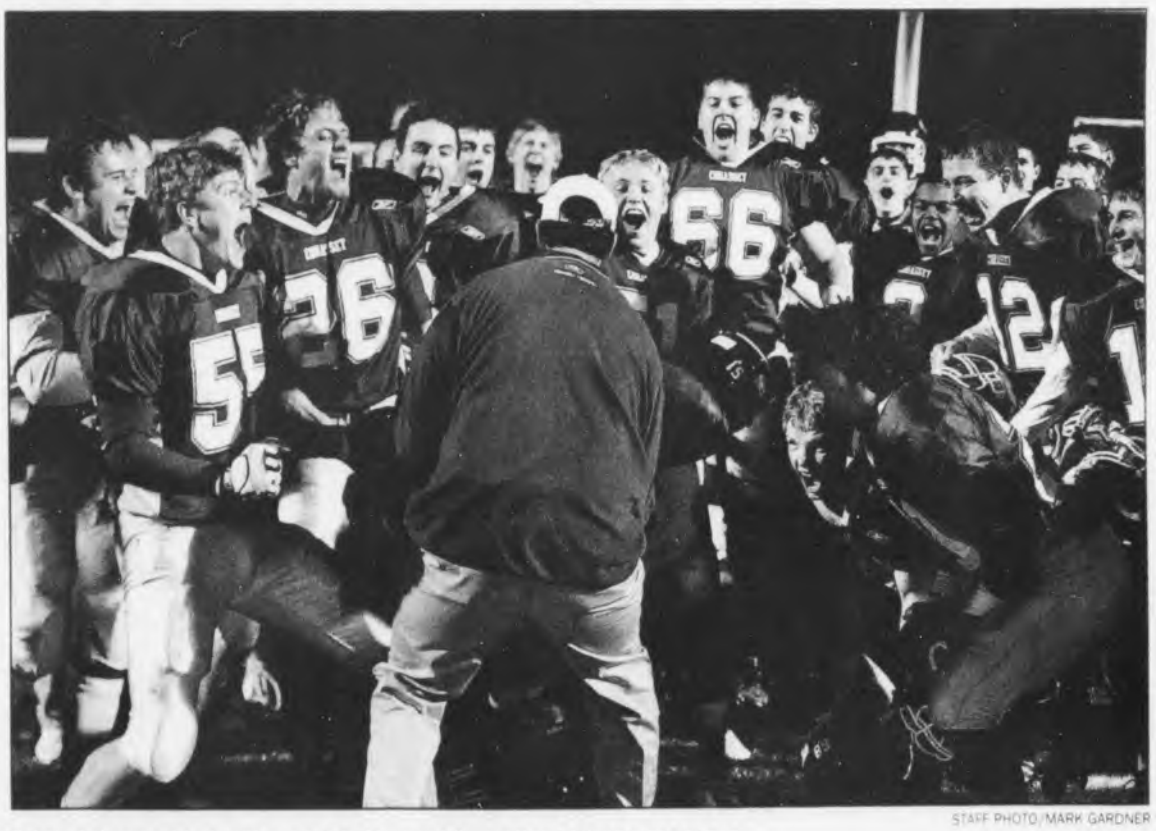
They have four shutouts (Pembroke, SSVT, Nauset and Carver).

Of their three losses, two were to Abington (21-7) and Mashpee (29-7).

In the Abington game, it was a 7-7 game in the middle of the third quarter. Abington took the lead midway through the fourth and added a late insurance score for the final score.

The Skippers come into the game with a perfect record, a South Shore League title and a playoff spot secured.

That doesn't mean Cohasset won't go all out.



For any team, the lure of a perfect regular season, capped by a win on Thanksgiving Day is too much to pass up for the sake of saving it for the playoffs.

"Going undefeated has come up in conversation in regards to the opportunity," Cohasset coach Pete Afanasiw said. "Most schools don't get a chance to do it. Cohasset has only done it twice, in 1957 and 2004. I mentioned that to the kids today. This game is my focus. The playoffs are a bonus and we're fortunate to have that, but we're not there yet. That's a separate season. We still need to take care of business against Hull. No matter what happens in the playoffs, I want the kids to have a positive Thanksgiving memory in a game with a close rival. The closeness between the towns makes it special. Everyone knows each other. We're close knit. That gets lost in the playoffs. You usually don't know the other team as well."

The series has been close, with Hull leading 11-10-1, but Cohasset has been in the driver's seat in more recent years.

The Skippers have won the past two games, and five of the last six games.

Scituate/Cohasset Youth Football play in Super Bowls

Mite Sharks drop 6-0 heartbreaker

If ifs and buts were candy and nuts, every day would be Christmas. (Unattributed)

If there had been one less key penalty....

If there had been one less turnover....

But for a 77 yard Bridgewater pass play with 10 seconds left in the first half.....

If Bill Belichick had punted.....

Ooops, we're mixing up our Sunday football.

But actually, we aren't. Because just like the Patriots on Sunday night, the Scituate Cohasset Mite Sharks football team outplayed their opponents in almost every respect on Sunday morning in the Division 1 Super Bowl.

But alas, just like the Pats, the Sharks fell had the smaller number on the one place where it counts, and that of course is on the scoreboard, as the local 4th grade team came up on the short end of a hard-fought 6-0 decision to the Bridgewater Badgers at the beautiful Bridgewater-Raynham High School athletic complex at the new B-R high school.

The contest had all the trappings of a classic battle between the two top teams in the league: A beautiful day at a great facility, with each side's cheerleaders, fans, and vehicles festively adorned for their heroes, who came charging onto the field from the opposite end zones in true Super Bowl fashion.

The Shark defense asserted itself at the outset, with Victor Najjar, Alex DeFreitas, and Will Bowen making key stops to force a four and out on the opening Bridgewater drive at the Sci/Co 46. Indeed, the Sci/Co defense was immense all day, limiting Bridgewater to an unofficial net of 32 yards for all but one Badger play.

The Shark D was back on the field quickly however, when a Sci/Co fumble gave the ball back to the Badgers at the Sci/Co 48. But the Shark defense was at its Jaw-inspiring best once again, forcing Bridgewater to turn the ball over on downs after Andrew Blanchard smothered a Badger ballcarrier for a four yard loss on fourth and 10 at the Sci/Co 37.

The Sharks appeared to have some offensive momentum when, after moving into Bridgewater territory on runs by Will Greer (five yards), Will

Stingrays win third straight Super Bowl

The Scituate/Cohasset (SciCo) seventh grade Stingrays football team won the District 5 Super Bowl with an exciting and hard played 30-28 win against Hanover on Sunday, November 15.

The Stingrays have won the Super Bowl in their league for the third time in as many years.

Led by head coach Frank Gaziano and his staff, this group of seventh graders have now appeared in the Super Bowl every year since they started as third graders.

Their first year (third grade) they tied Hingham, as fourth graders they lost to Bridgewater and have since taken home the trophy beating Hanover (fifth grade), Plymouth(sixth grade) and now Hanover again as seventh graders.

Despite an injury ridden season, the Stingrays finished in first place during regular season play with a 7-1 league record. They then won the semifinal game against Hingham 14-8.

This was the third time this season the Stingrays faced the Hingham team and emerged victorious.

Facing a Hanover team coming into the Super Bowl with two wins over Bridgewater, hanover scored first for an 8-0 lead, but the Sci/Coh team got on the board with a quarterback sneak by Christian Brady, set up by a deep pass from Brady to Michael Schwartz.

The two teams then fought to a 22-22 tie in the first half of the game.

Offensively, Scituate was lead by Chris Bearce, who bulled his way to two first half touchdowns. Schwartz who found himself on the end of many Brady spirals and Stephen Payne filling in for the injured Geoffrey Stillman. Hanover countered with a duo of Colin White and Ryan Earle taking turns running over around and through the Scituate defense.

Bearce scored a touchdown and extra point to put the Stingrays ahead 14-8 but Hanover came back with two touchdowns to lead 22-14.

The lead changed three times before Sci/Co tied the game with less than two minutes remaining in the half on another touchdown by Bearce and extra point by Schwartz.

The second half turned into a

Facing fourth-and-10 from the Norwell 42, Afanasiw chose not to punt, and it worked, as Cavanaro threw an 18-yard completion to Doonan. On the next play, Valentine hit pay dirt untouched from 24 yards out with 1:27 left. A two-point play out of the Wildcat formation failed.

"We were confident in our defense, even though we had some breakdowns," Afanasiw said of the gamble. We felt they weren't able to move the ball with any kind of consistency. It made it easier to go for it when we can play good defense."

FROM PREVIEW, PAGE 19

Last year Cohasset rolled to a 37-15 victory.

Outside of a 14-14 tie in 1999, the closest game in the series was a 7-6 Skipper victory in 2003.

The most lopsided game was in 1997 when Hull closed out a series of six blowouts with a 50-6 win.

The Pirates won that six game stretch of the series by a combined score of 211-27.

At that time, the Pirates were a powerhouse, making the Super Bowl twice, winning in 1996. Cohasset ended the futility with a 14-0 win in 1998.

More recently, Cohasset was a playoff team in 2001, 2003 and 2004.

The Skippers won the Thanksgiving game in all those years.

There have been some interesting battles, some of them having to do with Hull's unpredictable weather.

"Two years ago it was a beautiful day, sunny, 38 or 40 degrees when we started," Afanasiw said. "It was in the 50's in the fourth quarter. Then the fog rolled in and you couldn't even see across the field. It was almost surreal. You can't plan for that."

There was another game in 2005 that the Skippers won 3-0.

"That day the wind averaged 40 m.p.h," Afanasiw said. "Cohasset drove to the 3-yard line. They had an exchange student with a tremendous leg. He was a rugby player. It was just a chip shot. He kicked it, the ball just crossed the goal post good, then it blew left 90 degrees and flew out of bounds. That's how bad it was."

Afanasiw said he's hoping for a quiet day on the weather front for more than one reason.

"I know Hull would appreciate a nice day," Afanasiw said. "They could use a good gate. I think if it's a good day we'll bring a lot of fans. The die hards, the parents, they'll come out either way. If it's a good day, I'm sure our town will come out in droves."

On the field, Cohasset will look to their stalwarts to get the job done.

Dana Valentine has more than 1,500 yards and 16 touchdowns this season. Cohasset can throw the ball as well, with Jeff Cavanaro throwing to a host of receivers, including Brendan Doonan, who hauled in huge touchdown catches against Abington and Mashpee.

Defensively, Cohasset has been outstanding all season.

The Skippers have notched four shutouts and have allowed seven points or less six times.

In fact, Cohasset has only given up more than 20 points in a game once, to Hingham.

Afanasiw said his defense will have to play smart to do it again.

"They have three good runners," he said. "Mark Mainini, Ethan Hanks and Dan Shea. They've put some points on the board. They run a spread/wildcat offense. They put pressure on defenses. They find space in the field. For defenses it's a demanding responsibility. You have to handle spacing well, don't get caught looking in the backfield. You have to stay with your man."

Open field tackles are also at a premium with that style of offense.

Afanasiw has nothing but respect for the opponent.

"I give them a lot of credit," he said. "They lost a lot of seniors, and have a lot of sophomores playing. They almost didn't have a team this year because of budget cuts. They've done a great job staying focused and they've produced. Their coach (Jerry McGrath) has done a great job."

Thursday's kickoff is 10 a.m.

Admission is $7 for adults and $5 for students and senior citizens.

In other local action, the junior varsity will play Hull at 5 p.m. on Monday at Alumni Field.

Tickets are $5 for adults, $3 for students and senior citizens.

Wednesday at noon will be the Powder Puff game at Alumni Stadium.

Cohasset Youth Lacrosse registration begins Nov. 19

Cohasset Youth Lacrosse will open its on-line registration for the Spring 2010 season Nov 19. To register go to our website www.cohassetlacrosse.com_and click on the registration link.

Registrations will be accepted for both boys and girls at U15 (seventh and eighth grade), U13 (fifth and sixth grade) and U11 (third and fourth grade). We will also be accepting registrations for our first and second grade clinic. All youth players are welcome, regardless of experience.

Registration will continue until January 31. The program is committed to accepting every player who signs up during open registration. Once that sign-up period is completed the program will establish its ideal roster sizes and take late registrants on a first-come, first-served basis only until the rosters are filled. At that point a waiting list will be established, or players may be turned away.

Fees for grades 3-8 in 2010 are $150 per player, with family pricing of $100 for each additional family member. The fee for the first and second grade clinic is $75. Scholarships are available for families facing unusual circumstances or financial difficulty. Please check the appropriate box on the on-line form.

If you have any issues with on-line access, or registration related questions you may contact Joe Fitzgerald at fitzpj8@aol.com.

Winter Sports Sign-up Meeting

The winter sports preseason sign-up meeting will take place on Tuesday, November 24 at 6:45 pm in the High School Auditorium. There will be a change in format. Athletic Director Ron Ford and Athletic Trainer Steve Budrick will address health issues and answer any questions you may have regarding the upcoming winter season. Individual teams will then meet with the coaching staff.

Winter sports physicals will be held on Fri. Nov 20 at 2 p.m. in the nurse's office.

Students are asked to bring their $250 user fee and to attend with a parent or guardian.

Cohasset's Cambi wins wrestling crown

The Roger Williams University wrestling team posted a sixth-place finish Sunday at the Ithaca College Invitational, totaling 83.5 points while three nationally-ranked teams took the top three spots. Junior tri-captain Nick Cambi (Cohasset, Mass.) led RWU, going 4-0 to win the 197 championship.

Cambi sent the field a message in his first match of the tournament, needing just 34 seconds to pin his opponent and advance into the quarterfinals.

There he met Johnston & Wales' Bill Mulligan and earned the 6-1 victory before defeating Cortland's third-ranked Carl Korpi, 11-6.

In a tight championship match, Cambi held NYU's top-ranked James Myers scoreless, while securing three points for the win.

Cambi's win marked just the third time a Roger Williams University wrestler has won a weight class championship at the Ithica Invitational.

Cambi graduated from Cohasset High School in 2007 and wrestled for coaches Torin Sweeney and Pete Buckley.

Bowen (nine yards), and Liam Maguire (four yards), a beautifully executed pass play from quarterback Andrew Sullivan to Bowen moved the ball 15 yards for an apparent first down to the Badger 35.

But a penalty for an illegal block brought the play back and essentially ended the Sci/Co drive, with Bridgewater taking over at its own 48. The Badgers put together a drive of their own and got as far as the Sci/Co 17. However, the Sharks' jaws clamped down hard and, with Will Thomas sacking the Badger QB for a big loss on third down, Sci/Co took over at its own 42 (that was a net loss of 25 yards for the Badgers on those four downs) as the second quarter was winding down.

Bowen ran wide for 16 yards and Greer followed with a burst for four more to the Badger 38. After Bowen picked up three more, Greer burst through to the Badger 25 for an apparent first down. But the three Bridgewater defenders who finally managed to catch up to Will pulled the ball loose and the Badgers took over at their own 25.

Thomas hurled a Badger for another loss, of two yards on first down, with the clock ticking down. But then Bridgewater went to the air for a deep pass that the Badger receiver caught in full stride near midfield and raced all the way to the end zone with 10 seconds left on the clock.

That would prove to be the lone lapse by the Sci/Co defense on the day. The Sharks stopped the Badger PAT attempt, but the damage had been done.

Greer opened the second half with a 22-yard kickoff return to the Bridgewater 46. Will G. then took off on first down and almost made it all the way to the end zone with a 32-yard gain to the Bridgewater 14.

However, the Badgers dug deep and the Sci/Co drive ended at the Bridgewater 11.

The teams then traded possessions, with the Badgers gaining field advantage and were able to get the ball up to their own 43 as the third period ended. However, an alert Luke Murphy pounced on a Badger fumble on the first play of the final frame and Sci/Co was in business at the Bridgewater 46.

After a one yard gain by Greer and a pass from Sullivan to Bowen for two more yards, a deflected Sci/Co aerial was picked off by the Badgers, who took over at their own 31. But the Shark D once again held firm, with James Krumsiek and Murphy making key stops to force a Badger punt, with Sci/Co taking over at its own 44 with less than 4:00 left in the game.

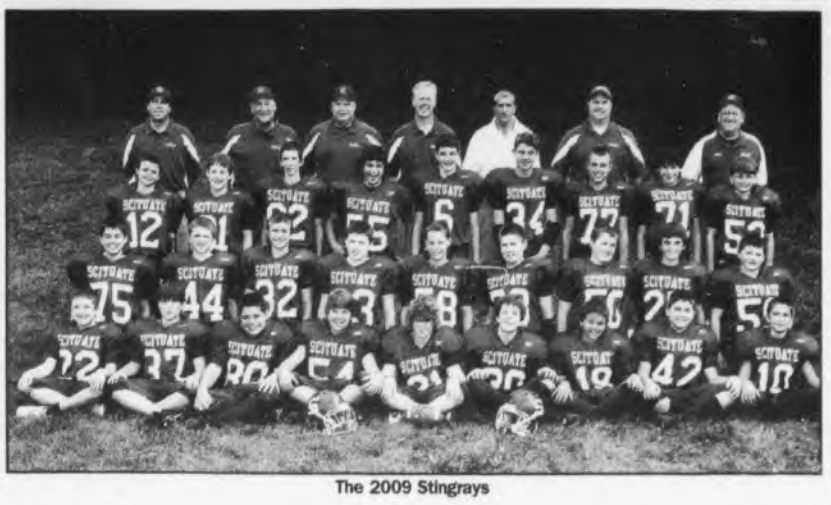
In front are head coach Dan Varney and sons Dan and Deven holding the runner up trophy. First row (kneeling) are: Victor Najjar, Jack Forsythe, Patrick Hagearty, Andrew Blanchard, Liam Maguire, Coach Varney, Dan Varney Jr., Kevin Callahan, Deven Varney, Ryan Lynch, Michael Legge, David Burke, Jack Fechtor, and James Krumsiek. Second row are: Nick Slamp,Will Thomas, Alex DeFreitas, Jason Dwight, Luke Murphy, John Svenson, Sean McNeil, Henry Snyder, Kevin Long, Jake Konclus, J.J. Jordan, Jack Hill, Jackson Mansi, J.P. Johnston, and Jack Osten. In the third row are Will Greer, Tommy Carrabes, Matthew Donahue, Charlie Pyne, Brian Doyle, Matthew Dickey, Chase Bomeisler, George Bulman, Andrew Sullivan, Kyle McFetridge, and Matt Thomas. In the rear are: Coaches Ken Greer, Chris Pyne, Andrew Blanchard, Mike Fechtor, John Osten, Kevin Callahan, Neil Sullivan, Paul Bowen, Bob Donahue, Fred Maguire, and Tom Konclus. Team members not pictured are Will Bowen, Cal Osten, and Jay Fredericks.



A three yard pick up by Greer and eight yards by Bowen moved the chains to the Badger 45. However, two successive procedural penalties halted the Sci/Co momentum and put the Sci/Co offense in a hole. Eventually, the Sharks were faced with a fourth and 11, but another successful Sullivan to Bowen connection fell short of a first down at the Badger 37.

That proved to be the Sharks' last gasp. By that time, less than two minutes were left to play and the Badgers were able to run out the clock to claim the victory and the Super Bowl title.

And yes, there were some tears on the field (and some in the stands). But as we all know, success often comes at the price of a defeat, a lesson that no doubt will serve these young Sharks well in their athletic years ahead. As General Douglas MacArthur once told his Cadets at West Point, "On the fields of friendly strife are sown the seeds which in later years and on other fields will bear the fruits of victory."

And quarterback Sullivan no doubt echoed the thoughts of his Shark teammates with his declaration afterwards, "We'll get'em next year."

Shark head coach Dan Varney put the game, and the season, into perspective. "We had 41 individual 4th graders show up in August and in November, we had one unified team finish the season in the Super Bowl. The coaches and I are very pleased with the way the season went. The boys supported each other and worked really hard. All season long the coaches made sure that every player who came to play, played. We aren't just developing football players, we are shaping the hearts and minds of our boys who will be young men in a few short years. Our team motto: If everyone plays we all win."

defensive battle with Hanover scoring after a 32-yard pass to Earle at the two in the fourth quarter to go ahead 28-22. Brett Dooley thwarted the extra point attempt to keep the game within reach.

The Stingrays got the ball back with less than four minutes remaining and marched downfield toward their end zone with time running out.

With 36 seconds left on the clock, Bearce scored again on a great second effort run behind strong blocking by Pat O'Brien, Joey Gaz, Jake O'Donoghue, Fran Donovan, Brain James, Tanner Gildea, Tucker Meehan and Ryan Finneran to tie the game and then Bearce ran in the extra point to go ahead by two. The Stingray defense then shut down the volatile Hanover offense on the last drive of the game to emerge victorious.

The defense really came up big in the second half of this game, holding the potent Hanover offense to only one score.

This year's defense was led by linebackers Joe Gaziano, Matt Froio and Pat O'Brien, a secondary of Kyle Medici and Tim Giuggio at corners and Brett Dooley and Ryan Finneran at safety and the workhorses up front, Connor Doherty, Michael Coscia, Brian Cochran, Tyler Murphy and PJ Kent who were supported by their two defensive ends Jack Chamberlain and Chris Bearce.

SEAN MACCARTHY

Not only do I, Sean MacCarthy, think donating is cool, Robin Hood does.

"Seriously (insert high school kids name), its time to get up! You're going to be late for school!" That one quote has probably been used more this week alone than all days of school before combined. Why? Well I'll tell you why. There is frost on the ground outside. That means us kids are even less motivated to get out of our comfy beds to go to school. Frost on the ground means we have to sprint outside and turn on the heat in our car unless we want to freeze to death while driving. A little suggestion to parents, instead of nagging us kids to go run outside into the below freezing weather, you should use that time to run outside into the below freezing weather and turn the car and heat on for us. Thanks. We love you.

Another little suggestion to parents, and everyone else in the town; donate food for the Cohasset High School food drive. A recent statistic came out saying that 49,000,000 Americans go hungry on a daily basis. Therefore, the student council took the opportunity to run a food drive. We have a quota of 1,000 items of food that we desperately want to reach. It sounds big but if you do the math, if each kid just brings in 3 items of food, we will exceed the quota. If helping those less fortunate isn't a good motivator, the grade that donates the most food items wins free ice cream. I always told you food was the best motivator! But seriously, if you are reading this, give your kid at least three items of food to donate to help feed those that want to be fed, because no one should go hungry on Thanksgiving. If you are reading this and you have no kids in high school or you are not in high school, you are also greatly encouraged to donate food…just be sure you drop it off in the box labeled "SENIORS"…

Another thing the student council has been trying to set up is a blood drive. What's a blood drive? Well this is what Dictionary.com has entered for the definition of a blood drive:

Blood Drive

Pronunciation: bluhd drahyv

Language of origin: Latin

Definition: An event where mortal humans use the technology of immortal vampires to extract blood from humans for good use.

Okay, so maybe that isn't entirely true, but whose splitting hairs right? Really, a blood drive is a great event in which nurses extract about a pint of blood from your body and then that blood is then transfused into the body of an ill patient that needs it. Blood drives save countless lives and our very important to hospitals. To participate in the blood drive, you have to be at least 17 and over 110 pounds. You can also be 16 and donate blood but you need a parents note for that. Everyone is encouraged to do it because lives will be saved. We only have 40 spots though so sign up quickly!

What's that on the turf field? Girls playing football??? Yeah, that's right. Both Junior and Senior girls have been intensely practicing some football so they are ready to play come Nov. 25th, the Wednesday before Thanksgiving. The class of 2010 girls are looking to bounce back after a tough loss last year…oh I'm sorry, did I say loss? I meant to say after an official, Coach A, kept them from defeating the class of 2009 girls. Their eyes are on the prize and all Junior girls have been warned. This will be fun.

Finally, this Wednesday was a half-day! That means classes were only an hour long, as opposed to an hour and a half long classes. Also, this means the students got lunch on their own terms. Nothing against our cafeteria, there food just can't compete with the Fat Chicken from Victoria's. It can't compete with the buffalo chicken calzone from CHOPS (that's an acronym for Cohasset House of Pizza for all you non-teenagers). It can't compete with the Mike's Special from the deli. You get what I'm getting at. Food in school — whatever. Food outside of school — two thumbs up and a mile wide smile.

That concludes this article. Once again, it was a pleasure writing for y'all. I hope you all listen to me and are very generous in donating food and blood. Not only do I, Sean MacCarthy, think donating is cool, Robin Hood does. Yeah, that's right, Sean MacCarthy and Robin Hood, two of the most important and coolest figures in history think that donating food and blood (not combined) is wicked cool. 'Nuff said!

Sean MacCarthy is happy to be walking without crutches.

Middle-schoolers learn about dangers of smoking

Each year during the Great American Smokeout, the American Cancer Society promotes local and nationwide activities that focus in a light-hearted way on the benefits of not smoking.

On Monday, Nov. 16 the Cohasset Middle School students attended an assembly from the Anti-Tobacco Smoking Program titled "Smoking Don't Go There".

Cohasset resident Dr. Gerri Goodman discussed the use of various tobacco products and the physical effects someone may get.

FOCUS ON HIGHER EDUCATION

MBA program encourages career options

By Evan Lips
DAILY NEWS STAFF

FRAMINGHAM – Luther Harvey's alarm clock blares from his bedside table each workday morning at 5:30 a.m.

About an hour and a half later, he arrives at Staples' Framingham headquarters following a shower, breakfast and a jaunt down the Massachusetts Turnpike from his home in Worcester. He leaves work at around 6 p.m., fighting rush hour traffic like everyone else.

If any of that sounds familiar, consider the fact that Harvey, 34, then spends three hours at night pursuing his master of business administration degree.

"We have students who have decided they will not settle for anything less than their dreams, and we strive to be as passionate as they are at making that happen."

Lynn Davis, enrollment and marketing director at Clark University's Graduate School of Management

"The hardest part for me is time management," said Harvey, who works as a senior product development specialist during the day. "But I knew I was not going to be able to go where I want to go without an MBA."

Harvey is enrolled as a part-time student at Clark University's Graduate School of Management (GSOM), although he is the first one to say that a graduate business degree does not guarantee him an edge over other professionals.

"Right now, it's an absolute necessity for people like me," he said, noting that possessing an MBA is more of a requirement.

"Again, the time commitment is so tough," he added. "While I usually only have class two nights a week, my other nights are spent participating in group projects, studying and going to meetings."

For his last team project at GSOM, Harvey and four other students spent three weeks dissecting the Hasbro Company, a leading toy manufacturer.

"Clark doesn't let you slack off just because you have a day job," he said.

But, he also points out there are others enrolled in his program who would love to have a day job.

Any job.

With that in mind, he believes that the networking opportunities for students enrolled at a business school are priceless.

"That's where you get the true edge, in networking, whether it's with other classmates, faculty or speakers that come in to help guide a class," said Harvey.

Lynn Davis, GSOM's enrollment and marketing director, agrees.

"We've heard that our part-time MBA program has been a great networking tool for our students," she said. "They get the chance to meet people who work for different companies and students are always telling classmates of other jobs they've heard about."

Davis believes the necessity of an MBA – coupled with networking opportunities – are the main reasons why enrollment at GSOM has remained steady despite a poor economic climate.

But statistics show that GSOM's enrollment figures might be the exception to the national norm. According to a study conducted by BusinessWeek, applications to the top-10 part-time MBA programs fell by an average of 9 percent compared with 2008.

To explain GSOM's ability to maintain enrollment and interest in its programs, Davis points to the program's low class sizes. Part-time enrollment at GSOM topped out at 126 this year, she said.

Another nearby school that boasts a low student-to-professor ratio is Worcester Polytechnic Institute. Its graduate part-time MBA program includes fewer than 200 students. This year, BusinessWeek named Worcester's program the top part-time MBA outfit in the Northeast.

"We've definitely received a lot of attention from big-name companies," said Harvey. "We've had Fortune 500 CEOs come to speak to us and have had industry leaders come in to conduct workshops."

Michael Bennett, a fellow GSOM part-time student, said the last time he had a college experience was in 1984.

"The year the Mac came out, so I am kind of dating myself," he joked.

"I could not believe I was going back (to school), but when I got here, I now think it's definitely worth it," said Beckett, who commutes to class from his home in Reading. "For me, this is the culmination of a long process of self-exploration, the answer to that trite-but-true midlife question, 'What do I want to do in my next life?' "

Davis says students like Beckett and Harvey represent GSOM's target audience.

"We have students who have decided they will not settle for anything less than their dreams, and we strive to be as passionate as they are at making that happen," she said.

DAILY NEWS PHOTO BY KEN McGAGH

Luther Harvey of Worcester, a senior product development specialist at Staples in Framingham, is enrolled in a part-time MBA program at Clark University's Graduate School of Management.

Moreover, as more students balk at the cost of a full-time MBA, Davis argues that part-time MBAs have gained more attention despite the down economy.

A degree at a top-tier full-time school like the Wharton School at the University of Pennsylvania costs over $70,000 in tuition alone. When adding other costs, that number can easily double during the time it takes to complete the degree.

In a part-time program, the cost is more evenly spread out over a longer time span. Davis points out that the total cost of an MBA at Clark equals roughly $50,000, but tuition assistance and student loans are readily available and participants like Harvey can maintain a full-time job at the same time.

"Also, a lot of times we hear about students who are using their severance packages to pay for their education," added Davis.

Harvey said he's lucky that Staples is helping to pay for a large portion of his tuition. He also appreciates knowing that if faced with financial uncertainty or if work requires him to travel, he's free to postpone his completion to another date.

Both Harvey and Beckett estimate they will be finished in 2011, and as a freelance business and marketing writer, Beckett said he is fortunate to have the freedom, both financially and socially, to pursue an MBA.

"I am in awe of the people in my classes who work 9-to-5, those who have kids, the way they can fit something like this in to their schedule is amazing," he said.

In the end, Davis said that the key to GSOM's future lies in its ability to adapt to the career needs of the students. One important item that has helped boost interest in the program is the availability of career counselors and life coaches. Davis defines their roles as crucial to the program.

"It's included with tuition, and these counselors help students identify where they want to ultimately end up, career-wise," she said.

But Harvey said he has yet to seek their help.

"I think I already know what I want out of my MBA," he said, noting that part of his career plans involve global business strategies for his current employer, Staples. "There's no place I'd rather work, and I know I won't be able to do what I want without an MBA."

Happy Dog Obedience Training – A variety of dog training classes will be held at the Cohasset Recreation Center all fall and winter. For more information call 781-857-1239. happydogtraining.com

Good Manners for Beginners class offers beginner – level instructions in all of the dog obedience commands including heel work, and offers problem solving demos on issues like mouthing and jumping and helps you become "leader of the pack." Obedience and Distractions is for dogs who understand very basic concepts such as "sit, stay, come, and down" but who have trouble being consistent. The class teaches dogs to listen with greater distractions each week, less and less leash control, with the owner further and further away. Events listed below have no requirements other than a good temperament and up to date vaccinations. Every Wednesday for five weeks, Nov. 18 through Dec. 16. 6:30 p.m. Obedience with Distractions Class; 7:30 p.m. Good Manners for Beginners Class. Fee is $120.

Vacation Xtreme and December Stay-cation – Just because the kids have the time off from school doesn't mean you've got the time off work, so Cohasset Recreation is picking up the slack with vacation week programs for children of all ages.

Vacation Xtreme – For children in grades six, seven and eight, expanding upon the popular Summer Xtreme program, the Xtreme Team will be offering vacation week trips to all new destinations. More information to come. Call or check the Web site for details.

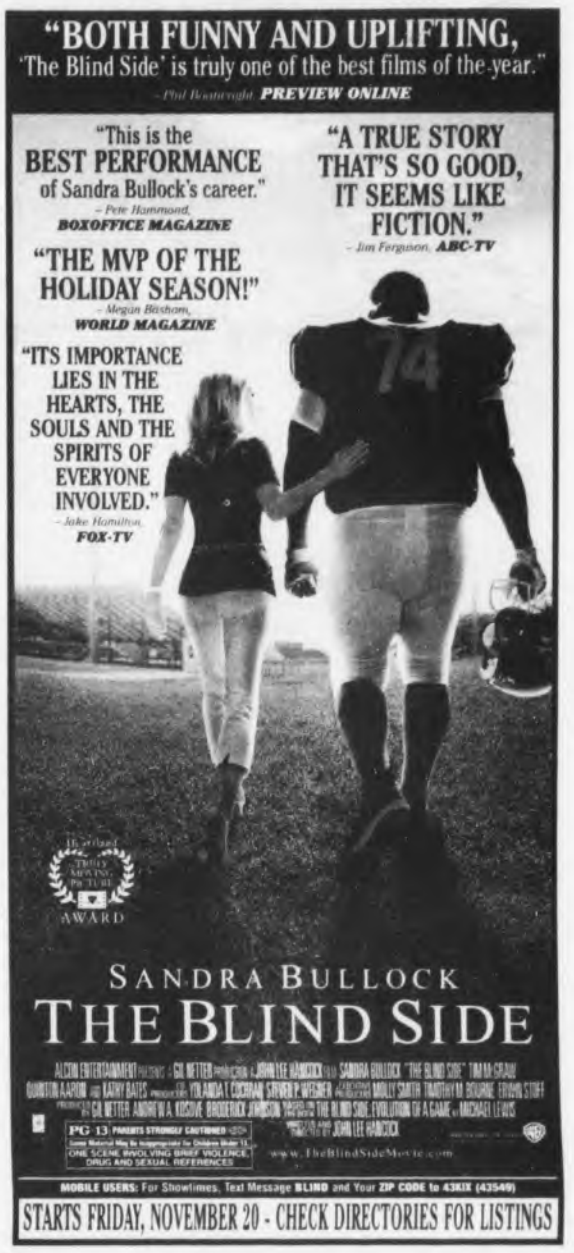
December Stay-cation: For children ages 6 through 10. A variety of arts, crafts, stories, and games will be enjoyed. Facilitated by recreation staff. It's the best way to spend your December vacation, right here in Cohasset. Dec. 28 through 31, from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. Fee: $80.

Play-Well TEKnologies LEGO Engineering – Pre-Engineering Ages: 5 to 7. Create, play, and learn. Build a town, city, or star base with houses, buildings, pyramids, bridges, tunnels, towers, and more. Build motorized cars, trains, buses, and trucks; race them; crash them; repair them. Explore the many possibilities of LEGO building systems while learning useful construction techniques. Four-day program. Monday through Thursday.



Engineering FUNdamentals – Ages: 8 to 12. Design and build motorized machines, catapults, pyramids, demolition derby cars, truss and suspension bridges, buildings, and other constructions. Explore concepts in physics, mechanical engineering, structural engineering, and architecture while playing with your favorite creations. This is a hands-on and minds-on class suitable for LEGO building system novices to "maniacs." Returning students will work on new projects and challenges. Four day program. Monday-Thursday at Cohasset Recreation Center. Session I: Dec. 28 through Dec. 31. Pre-Engineering: 9 a.m. to noon and FUNdamentals: 1 to 4 p.m. Fee: $144 per four day Monday-Thursday program.

Ski & Snowboard Lessons – Cohasset Recreation will be offering ski and snowboard lessons at Blue Hills. Children from Kindergarten through sixth grade will be eligible. Buses will leave from Cohasset Town Hall at 3:15 p.m. on Thursday afternoons. Five 90-minute lessons will begin at 4:15 p.m., Busses will depart from Blue Hills at 6 p.m. and arrive in Cohasset by 7 p.m. Children can choose to bring or rent equipment. Helmets are not a requirement however they are strongly suggested and can be rented for a small additional fee. Pick-up Location is at Cohasset Town Hall. Thursdays, Jan. 7 through Feb. 4. Five-week program. Times: 3:15 to 7 p.m. Fee: Without rental: $220; With rental: $295.

Ed2Go – Online Continuing Education through www.cohassetrec.com. Cohasset Recreation recognizes the fact that not everyone's schedule allows for the attendance of classes in person. Based on this fact, we're proud to offer online classes in partnership with Ed2Go. Through our partnership with Ed2Go, students can register for and complete their choice of more than 300 online courses. Categories of classes include: Personal Finance, Communications, Writing, Leadership, Assertiveness, Web development, Photography, Graphic design, Languages and many more. Classes start once a month and lessons are released twice a week. Most classes are completed within six weeks. An online instructor is available for questions, concerns, and technical assistance. You can select your class and complete it at the time and place that is most convenient for your schedule. If you feel more comfortable studying at home you have the availability to do so. Enroll now. With such a high volume of classes, we know you can find the right course you need. Ready to start training now? Your education awaits at www.cohassetrec.com.

New York, New York – Spend a day shopping and touring New York City. Open to ages 18 and older. Children younger than 18 must be accompanied by an adult. Invite friends and enjoy a day you plan in the Big Apple. Deluxe motor coach leaves Town Hall at 6 a.m. sharp and arrives in NYC about 10:30 a.m. Midtown drop off near Rockefeller Center and pick up in the same area at 7 p.m. sharp. Limited enrollment. Pick-up location at Cohasset Town Hall parking lot. Transportation by Coach Bus. Dates: Saturday, Dec. 5. Fee is $49.

Temporary jobs to be focus of Job Search Seminar

Temporary jobs will be the focus of the next On the Job program at New North Church in Hingham on Monday, Nov. 23. On the Job meets every Monday morning at New North Church from 8:30 to 10 a.m. On Nov. 23, the program will focus on how to find part time positions, how to hold on to them and to use them in gaining more permanent employment. In today's downsized job market, temporary jobs can be an important route to full time employment and many times one of the only options for employment.

On the Job will feature a special presentation by Dan Griffith of All Star Staffing to lead the morning seminar on a critical topic for today's job searchers. Griffith has more than 10 years of recruiting and staffing experience in both corporate human relations and agency environments.

In today's downsized job market, temporary jobs can be an important route to full time employment and many times one of the only options for employment.

"Temporary employment can be looked down on by some job seekers, but in today's environment many companies are using temporary staff to fill important positions – some of those positions may never be filled permanently again and some may lead to long term employment," said Sue Wetzel, co-leader of On the Job.

Griffith is currently a senior account manager with Boston-based All Star Staffing LLC where he runs a business filling temporary and permanent vacancies across industries such as technology, healthcare, finance, creative, executive search and administrative personnel sectors. Over his career he has been a senior recruiter for Children's Hospital in Boston and was also technology-staffing officer for technology services at State Street Bank in North Quincy. He is a member of the Massachusetts Staffing Association and New England Association of Personnel Services.

Griffith is a graduate of Hingham High School, attended Norwich University and has pursued graduate programs in psychology at Cambridge College.

On the Job is led by Sue Wetzel, Marie Harris, Shirley Riddell and Bill Turpie, pastor of New North. Everyone is welcome. New North Church is at 1 Lincoln St., Hingham.

St. Stephen's accepting book donations

St. Stephen's Episcopal Church, 16 Highland Ave., is currently accepting donations of slightly worn hardcover and paperback books, books on tape, DVDs and CDs for its annual book sale, part of the ecumenical Village Fair that will take place this year on Saturday, Dec. 5, on Cohasset Common.

Donations can be brought to the church in bags or boxes and placed inside the parish hall door marked "Church Offices." Use the "Reserved Parking" spot to unload books during church office hours: Monday through Friday, 8 a.m. to 2 p.m. For more information, call D'Anne Avotins at 781-923-1104.

Books are sorted at St. Stephen's Church in Walton Rodgers Hall from 9 to 11 a.m., every Tuesday. Donations will be accepted through Nov. 30. Old textbooks, romance novels, damaged, musty or moldy books or books with notes and/or highlighting will not be accepted.

Money raised from the Book Sale will be used to send underprivileged children and their families to the Barbara C. Harris Camp in Greenfield, N.H. Donations will help change lives and strengthen the community. For more information about this facility, visit the website at bchcenter.org.

Thanksgiving breakfast at Legion Hall

The American Legion George H. Mealy Post 118 is sponsoring a Thanksgiving Day breakfast for the community from 7 to 9 a.m. on Thursday (Nov. 26) at the Legion Hall, 98 Summer St.

Cost is $7 per person. Reservations are not required. For information, call 781-383-9657.

Annual METCO holiday wreath sale

The METCO Committee is again selling fresh, 12-inch double-sided holiday balsam wreaths. The proceeds of the wreath sale benefit the METCO Scholarship Fund given to Cohasset METCO students graduating from Cohasset High School. The cost is $10 per wreath. Wreaths can be pre-ordered by contacting METCO Director, Aleisa Gittens-Carle at 781-383-1563 or Connie Afshar at 781-383-6006. Wreaths are available for pick up during the Village Fair on Saturday, Dec. 5 from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. at the Second Congregational Church.

Horoscope

SALOME'S STARS
FOR RELEASE WEEK
OF NOV. 30, 2009

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) There could be an unexpected change in plans for your upcoming holiday travels. But keep in mind that a little flexibility goes a long way in resolving any disappointments.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) A new relationship might not be responding quite as quickly as you'd hoped. Could you be expecting too much too soon? Try to ease up and let things happen at their own pace.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) As we approach the frenetic pace of pre-holiday planning, take time out now to reconnect with the wonderful people who share your life, especially the one who also shares your dreams.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) A misunderstanding should be resolved before you get caught up in the flurry of holiday preparations. Set your pride aside and deal with it, regardless of who might have hurt whom first.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) Being told that a colleague might have been trying to undercut your effectiveness might or might not be true. Get all the facts before you even think about acting on this so-called information.

VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) It's a good idea to start your holiday preparation plans early in order to avoid a time crunch if an unresolved workplace situation causes a problem. That old friend might have some welcome news.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) A family member's actions continue to surprise you, but this time with positive results. Could be your wise counsel finally got through. It's like having an early holiday gift, isn't it?

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) Your reluctance to act in a current situation could be traced to your inner self advising you to take more time to study its complexities before you attempt to deal with it. Good luck.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) Soothing hurt feelings before they can ignite an angry outburst is the wise thing to do. And, of course, when it comes to doing the "wisdom thing," you do it so well.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) Budget your time so that you can handle both your workplace duties and your personal holiday planning — including travel arrangements — without burning out on either end.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) You might find that you still need to firm up one or two of those still-outstanding decisions so that you can finally move forward as you had planned. Weigh the facts, then act.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) You usually don't carry grudges, but you might feel this is one time when you're justified in doing so. But aren't you spending too much energy holding onto it? Let it go and move on.

Fun By The Numbers

Like puzzles? Then you'll love sudoku. This mind-bending puzzle will have you hooked from the moment you square off, so sharpen your pencil and put your sudoku savvy to the test!

Here's How It Works:

Sudoku puzzles are formatted as a 9x9 grid, broken down into nine 3x3 boxes. To solve a sudoku, the numbers 1 through 9 must fill each row, column and box. Each number can appear only once in each row, column and box. You can figure out the order in which the numbers will appear by using the numeric clues already provided in the boxes. The more numbers you name, the easier it gets to solve the puzzle!

Company Theatre celebrates 2010 season with open house

Winter and spring premieres highlight 31st season

By R. Scott Reedy
CORRESPONDENT

From left, Company Theatre artistic directors Zoe Bradford, Michael Joseph and Jordie Saucerman will host an open house for the 2010 season from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. Saturday, Nov. 21.

With the economy slumping, Norwell's Company Theatre played it safe this year, its 30th anniversary, with time-tested favorites like "Godspell," "The Music Man," and holiday perennial "A Christmas Carol," which runs Nov. 27-Dec. 20. For their just-announced 2010 season, however, Company's longtime co-artistic directors Zoe Bradford, of Hingham, Jordie Saucerman and Michael Joseph, both of Weymouth, plan not one but two local premieres - "The 25th Annual Putnam County Spelling Bee," Feb. 10-14, and a spring musical, to be announced Nov. 23, which will run from March 19-April 18.

Tickets for the 2010 season will go on sale to the public this Saturday, between 10 a.m. and 2 p.m., when Bradford, Saucerman and Joseph host "A Company Theatre Open House," which will include backstage tours and free refreshments.

"We weathered the economic storm very well this year," explained Joseph by telephone last week. "We've had about 95 percent attendance at our shows so far and sales are brisk for 'A Christmas Carol.' We've been pleased, and a little bit relieved, at how well this season has been going."

Strengthened by a healthy box office this year, Company will open its upcoming season with "The 25th Annual Putnam County Spelling Bee," a Tony Award-winning one-act musical comedy about a middle-school spelling competition. With music and lyrics by Natick native William Finn, and a book by Rachel Sheinkin, the show was developed by Barrington Stage Company in the Berkshires before moving to Broadway in April 2005. A sit-down production played Boston's Wilbur Theatre in 2006-2007.

"William Finn has written charming, infectiously and hysterically funny music for 'Spelling Bee,' which I believe is a work of genius that audiences will really love."

Joseph and his partners also plan to make up for a bit of lost time in Norwell next year when they present "The Producers, a Mel Brooks Musical," the winner of a record-breaking 12 Tony Awards in 2001, which was given its local premiere by Bay Colony Players at the Orpheum Theatre in Foxboro earlier this year.

"We tried for 'The Producers' last year, but we couldn't get the rights. We're very excited to finally get this chance to do the show which we believe will appeal to audiences young and old, because it is not only outrageous, but outrageously hysterical and side-splittingly funny. The score is great, of course, but it's the comedy that really stands out. The music and the songs, like everything else including the beautiful costumes and the big sets, is there to support the hilarity of the show," says Joseph of the musical about a pair of Broadway producers banking on a flop with a musical about Adolf Hitler and the Third Reich.

Rounding out the 2010 season will be the Noel Coward comedy "Blithe Spirit," Oct. 6-24, and "It's a Wonderful Life," Nov. 26-Dec. 19, in which Jimmy Stewart doppelganger Michael Warner, formerly of Holbrook, will reprise his starring role as George Bailey.

In addition to its slate of plays and musicals, the Company Theatre will also present a 2010 concert season which includes Marrakesh Express: A Tribute to Crosby, Stills, Nash, and Young on Jan. 9; Jimmy Tingle, Jan. 15-16; The Long & Winding Road, starring Jim Witter, Jan. 30; Highway 61 Revisited: A tribute to Bob Dylan, Feb 6;, Disco Inferno, Feb. 20; Bruce in the USA: Tribute to The Boss, Feb. 27; Forbidden Broadway: The 25th Anniversary Tour, May 6-8).

For more information about the Company Theatre, 30 Accord Park Drive in Norwell, visit the box office, call 781-871-2787 or go online at companytheatre.com.

CALENDAR, see next page

Thanksgiving...Did you know?

• In the 1620s, a Thanksgiving was a religious day of fasting.

• Very little is known about the First Harvest Celebration of 1621, but we do know that it was a three day event in the fall, with feasting and political interaction between two cultures—the English colonists and the Native Wampanoag...but it was NOT a holy day of thanks giving.

• Over 90 Wampanoag men attended the First Harvest Celebration of 1621, and there were only about 50 pilgrims or colonists still alive at the time.

•Venison (the meat from 5 deer presented by the Wampanoag men), and wild fowl are the only confirmed menu items served at the First Harvest Celebration...we know there must have been other dishes, but we do NOT know what they were...or if turkey was actually part of the meal.

• There was no popcorn, mashed potatoes, or apple pie served at the First Harvest Celebration of 1621—They didn't have potatoes or apples yet!

• The First Harvest Celebration of 1621 was transformed and became known as the "First Thanksgiving" in the mid 1800's.

• President Lincoln declared the First National Thanksgiving Holiday in 1863.

• After the Civil War, many southerners were reluctant to celebrate a holiday with such Yankee roots.

• None of the early 17th century Thanksgivings (St. Augustine, Jamestown, Plimoth, etc.) had anything to do with the development of our modern holiday.

• Today, the President of the United States still declares the Thanksgiving holiday.

• Plimoth Plantation is a museum dedicated to two cultures, specifically the Native Wampanoag and Colonial English of Plimoth Colony during the 1600s.

• The museum serves over 5,000 turkey dinners the week of Thanksgiving...or the equivalent of 250, 20-pound turkeys.

• Over 70 percent of Plimoth Plantation visitors come from outside Massachusetts.

• Plimoth Plantation is open on Thanksgiving Day and during the month of November over 70,000 people make the pilgrimage there to bust myths, meet their renown, colonial and Native interpreters, and experience the true feeling of America's most beloved holiday!

Joshua Bell will perform with the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Boston Symphony Hall, 301 Massachusetts Avenue, Boston, Nov. 24-Dec. 1.

Violin virtuoso Joshua Bell will perform Brahm's Violin Concerto when he joins the Boston Symphony Orchestra, under the baton of conductor Sir Andrew Davis, for a program of Thanksgiving week concerts that will also include Debussy's "Prelude to the Afternoon of a Faun" and Stravinsky's neo-classic Symphony in Three Movements.

For more than two decades, Bell has been mesmerizing audiences with the virtuosity of his violin playing on his vintage 1713 Stradivarius. He earned national fame when he was just 14 when he made his orchestral debut with Riccardo Muti and the Philadelphia Orchestra. A Carnegie Hall debut, the prestigious Avery Fisher Career Grant, and a recording contract further cemented his reputation in the music world. With success as a soloist, chamber musician, and orchestra leader, Bell, 41, has become a true classical music superstar.

This fall, Bell released "Joshua Bell At Home With Friends," a new CD featuring collaborations with Chris Botti ("I Love You Porgy"), Sting ("Come Again"), Josh Groban ("Cinema Paradiso"), and Kristin Chenoweth ("My Funny Valentine"), among others. In just its first week, the Sony Masterworks release took the top spot on Billboards Classical and Crossover Charts, making it Bell's best-selling debut ever. Not too long ago, the Grammy Award winner took a call from Town Commons at his Manhattan home to talk about his latest album and his upcoming dates with the BSO.

Town Commons: Tell us about the new album?

Joshua Bell: The whole process was very creative and much looser than my classical work. The album has a breezy, light feeling to it, but I also learn a lot from these collaborations. It was great fun to record with so many old friends. I've known Edgar Meyer ("Maybe So") my whole life. He's been a real inspiration to me so it's always wonderful to work with him. I've also known Chris Botti since I was about 16. He's terrific, too. And my duet with Kristin Chenoweth is one we did on a Rodgers and Hammerstein television special a few years back. I had heard "Songs from the Labyrinth," the album of John Dowland that Sting did, so the piece I chose for us is classical baroque. It was great to have Sting visiting my world.

TC: You're got Sting and Josh Groban on this record. Who will you go after if you decide to make a sequel?

JB: I wanted Paul McCartney this time around, but we just couldn't make it happen. He is definitely someone I would dare to ask again. I'm a huge Beatles fan so I am glad that I at least got to record "Eleanor Rigby," with Frankie Moreno, for this project. Growing up, I loved Genesis, so I'd also love to work with Peter Gabriel, Phil Collins or Tony Banks.

TC: What are you listening to these days?

JB: Jascha Heifetz always inspires me so there's a lot of his music on my iPod.

TC: Are you looking forward to your dates with the BSO?

JB: I've spent some part of about 20 of the last 21 summers out at Tanglewood. I never pass up the chance to work with the BSO or to perform at Symphony Hall, which is, of course, one of the most acoustically superb and beautiful halls in the world. This time out, I'll be playing Brahm's Concerto, one of the greatest in the violin repertoire. I've also written my own cadenza, which is something for people to listen for at these concerts.

Joshua Bell performs with the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Boston Symphony Hall, 301 Massachusetts Avenue, Boston, Nov. 24-Dec. 1. For tickets and information, visit the box office, call 617-266-1200 or go online at bso.org.

Water quality problems not crystal clear

Public forum slated for January

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

On Spring Street resident Jody Butman's kitchen counter are eight bottles of water — water that has come from faucet in her home and in homes around Cohasset. The color ranges in color from dark brown to yellow and some have sentiment in the bottom. Each one is marked with the date and time it was placed in the bottle, but all were collected since June.

For her, this is "Exhibit A" of the ongoing and consistent problems she has with the town's drinking water.

"We've reached the saturation point with the water," Butman said recently at her dining room table. She is acting as an informal spokesperson for what she says are about 30 core households concerned with Cohasset water quality, but she is sure others are out there.

She and other residents have been talking for months (for some the issues go back years) with the water department, the water commission and more recently met with the board of health about the town's drinking water quality.

"For me, I want clean, safe, affordable drinking water 12 months a year. That's all I want and I don't think that's too much to expect," Butman said.

An Oasis of Peace in Kenya

Retired CHS teacher to open orphanage

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

Virginia Burbank spent years teaching Cohasset high school students the intricacies and beauties of the English language, but she is poised to begin teaching a new set of children a new set of skills in a place far different from this coastal town.

Virginia Burbank is optimistic the opening of the orphanage will have a ripple effect on the community that surrounds it.

Burbank is the founder and visionary behind the under-construction Oasis of Peace orphanage in the heart of Kenya. In three short years, Burbank and a team of Americans and Kenyans have transformed a vision written on a piece of notebook paper into tangible hope made from stones, concrete, workable farmland and the opportunity to change many children's lives for the better.

"We have a beautiful piece of land and, what I think, is the most magnificent building in all of Kenya," Burbank said in her Quincy home earlier this week. She is back in the US for the first time in over six months and plans to return to Kenya in time for the mid-February dedication ceremony for the new orphanage and the arrival of the first 20 children.

Burbank, who recently celebrated her 70th birthday, taught English at Cohasset High and planned to spend her retirement peacefully in a rocking chair. However, she believes a higher power called her to do something very

Dispatch discussion

Police unions to air concerns Monday

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

Should the police station be closed overnight? With a tough budget season ahead should Cohasset embrace a regional approach in the expectation of saving money? Should the town enter into an inter-municipal agreement?

These will be just some of the questions before Selectmen on Monday night as they determine if a regional dispatch center is in the best interest of the town.

Last week the Cohasset Police Association, which includes members of the Cohasset Police Patrolman's Association and the Cohasset Police Superior Officers Association, came forward with concerns regarding the regional dispatch center and the changes to emergency services that may come with it.

In part because of their concerns, the Board of Selectmen scheduled a discussion on the proposed regional dispatch center for Monday, Nov. 30 at 7:45p.m., at the Town Hall Selectmen's Office.

"The police and fire chiefs went into this saying if (a regional dispatch center) could provide better, improved safety for the public and our personnel then we'd be behind it," Silvia said.

Officer Jim McLean, who is the president of the Cohasset Police Association, has said the unions' concern is for the residents. He said the closing of the police station during the evening hours was a "backwards step" for the department.

The police unions have been on

Osgood PSO Book Fair!

PICTURE THIS/Tom Turkey

Name: Tom Turkey, also known as "Gobbler."

Occupation: Eastern Wild Turkey.

Best day of your life: Reaching the top of the pecking order.

Most fun thing I do: Fly (I can fly up to 55 mph!).

Favorite season: Late winter or early spring, when courtship season begins.

Favorite holiday: Thanksgiving – too much "turkey talk."

Favorite junk food or meal: Nuts and berries.

Best book or magazine: "Wild Turkey," by John James Audubon.

Best music: The "gobbles", "yelps", "clucks", "putts", "cackles", "purrs", "hoots", and "hisses" of wild turkeys is music to my ears.

Pet peeve: Turkey jokes like: "What do turkeys like to eat on Thanksgiving? Nothing, they are already stuffed!

Smartest thing I do: I am covered with dark feathers that help me blend in to my wooded surroundings where I live. The bare skin on my throat and head can change color from flat gray to striking shades of red, white, and blue when I become distressed or excited. Pretty cool, huh?

Goal: To change the official Thanksgiving meal to something more appropriate, like ham.

Person you would most like to meet: Benjamin Franklin because he preferred turkeys to the bald eagle.

Biggest worry: Snakes, raccoons, crows and skunks that prey on our nests.

Best part of Cohasset: The wooded areas and open meadows around town.

We Auto Know
by Gene Smith and Jay Gorman
AIRING ON THE SIDE OF CAUTION
You may have heard that race car drivers fill their tires with nitrogen, and that some car owners with commuter vehicles are following suit. Why? Nitrogen is lighter than air, which translates into better mileage and performance. Additionally, nitrogen molecules are larger than oxygen molecules, making nitrogen filled tires less prone to leakage. Because nitrogen is chemically inert, it is also less likely to oxidize tire rubber, enabling tires to last longer. If you value all of these advantages enough to justify the cost (unless it is free), nitrogen-filled tires might just be a good idea. However, once you fill your tires with nitrogen, you must stick with it. Introducing compressed air negates the advantages.
If you have any questions about the pros or cons of nitrogen-filled tires — or any other performance or maintenance issues – then give the friendly technicians at ATLANTIC TIRE & ALIGNMENT, (781-925-3200) a call today. We can answer all your questions as well as provide the regularly scheduled maintenance that your car needs to keep performing at its best. We can also provide other tips on how to improve your mileage or energy efficiency, And who doesn't need that in this economy? We are located at 25 Atlantic House Rd. If you've gotten in an accident, be sure to check out our sister store, Cohasset Collision Center, 179 Chief Justice Cushing Hwy., Cohasset, 781-383-3001.
HINT: Green caps on tire valve stems indicate that the tires are filled with nitrogen.

Curtis warns police about intoxicated customer

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

It may seem unusual for police to praise a liquor store – but Cohasset Police have good things to say about Curtis Liquors in Tedeschi Plaza. The store, which is well known for "carding" all ages, consistently calls police when there is a problem or a customer appears to be under the influence of alcohol.

"They do an outstanding job," Lt. William Quigley said. "They really pay attention and do the right thing."

Saturday was no exception when an apparently intoxicated woman tried to buy a bottle of vodka. The store refused to sell the liquor to her but also called police because they were concerned about her driving. The woman pulled out in front of oncoming traffic as she made a left out of the plaza and was stopped by a Cohasset officer responding to the call.

The 59-year-old Scituate woman was arrested for operating under the influence of alcohol (second offense) and for failure to yield to oncoming traffic.

Summonses

• At 7:26 a.m. on Monday (Nov. 16), an officer on traffic patrol on Forest Avenue, due to the West Corner detour, stopped a 2003 Cadillac Escalade operated by a 35-year-old New Bedford woman for speeding. Police said she was traveling 50 in a 30 mph zone.

A registry check revealed the woman was operating on an expired license (her license had expired on her birthday in August). She was issued a criminal summons for unlicensed operating and speeding. The SUV was turned over to one of her passengers to drive.

• At 3:01 p.m. on Tuesday (Nov. 17), an officer was monitoring traffic on North Main Street when she clocked a 1997 Nissan Pathfinder traveling at a high rate of speed. The officer pulled the vehicle over after it turned right onto Hull Street and the 31-year-old Rockland woman, who was driving, presented a Brazilian passport. Police said she had been in the U.S. for some time and did not have a license. She is being charged with operating while unlicensed and speeding. Her vehicle was towed.

• At 9:25 a.m. on Thursday (Nov. 19), an officer was monitoring traffic on Route 3A near Beechwood Street when a 2004 Volvo sedan passed by with a rejection sticker on the windshield. The officer stopped the car that was headed south; the driver was a 49-year-old Scituate man. A registry check revealed the operator had no license. The Scituate man is being issued a criminal citation for driving without a license and for driving with a rejection sticker for not meeting safety standards. The car was towed.

• At 11:29 a.m. on Thursday (Nov. 19), an officer was on traffic enforcement on Route 3A by Beeechwood Street when she stopped a 2004 Ford Focus for traveling 49 in a 35 mph zone. The 23-year-old female driver provided a Brazilian passport but did not have a license. She is being issued a criminal summons for unlicensed operation and speeding. Her car was towed.

Warrants

A 31-year-old Cohasset man was arrested at his home on Thursday (Nov. 19) on two outstanding warrants for larceny over $250 out of Boston and for motor vehicle offenses out of Quincy District Court. Both were default warrants meaning he did not show up to court when required.

MV crashes

• At 12:34 p.m. on Wednesday (Nov. 18) a 9-1-1 caller reported that she had hit a large rock with her 2004 Chevrolet pickup up as she was pulling into a parking lot on King Street. The 43-year-old Cohasset woman cut the corner too closely and struck the rock. There was minor damage to the vehicle and no injuries.

• A police officer on a police motorcycle was in a minor mishap when the motorcycle slid on some wet grass on Norman Todd Lane. The motorcycle was not damaged; the officer was transported to South Shore Hospital with minor injuries. He was treated and released. The mishap occurred at 7:35 p.m. on Friday (Nov. 20). The officer went to Norman Todd Lane on a report of past breaking and entering.

Ammo

The caregiver of a 91-year-old Cohasset man with dementia turned over shotguns shells she found in the house to police for safe keeping last week.

Suspicious vehicle

A 12-year-old girl reported to an officer in the village last Wednesday (Nov. 18) at about 12:50 p.m. that she had been approached by a man in a small dark blue car who had pulled along side her on Cushing Road. The man asked if she wanted a ride and when she said "no" – he kept driving.

Missing tire

A Cohasset resident on Ledgewood Drive called police when she saw that the spare tire to her SUV was at the end of the driveway. Police said further investigation revealed the brackets that held the tire underneath the carriage of the old SUV had rotted. When the woman drove home earlier, the tire fell off as she went over the lip at the edge of the driveway. She did not realize what had happened at the time. Later when she saw the tire in the driveway, she thought someone had tried to steal it.

B&E

A resident of Norman Todd Lane arrived home last Friday (Nov. 20) to discover that his home had been burglarized. Missing were jewelry and some personal items. Detectives processed the scene and the incident is being investigated. Police are checking with area towns to see if there have been similar incidents. The break-in occurred sometime after 10 a.m.

Intoxicated

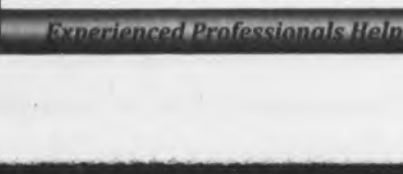
Police responded to a complaint from a concerned caller about teens possibly drinking outside the Red Lion Inn, which was holding a function on Friday (Nov. 20). The call came in at about 2 a.m. The responding officer did not find any drinking initially.

However, about an hour later, parents brought their 16-year-old, heavily intoxicated daughter to the police/fire headquarters to be checked out by paramedics.

Police returned to the Inn where a birthday party for an 18-year-old Cohasset teen was being held in the "Cave," a basement function area. The manager was on the scene and said no alcohol had been provided to the teens. Police did not find evidence of teens being served. The incident remains under investigation.

On the roof

Police responded to a complaint about boys playing on the roof of the bathhouse at Sandy Beach at about 3 p.m. on Sunday (Nov. 22). The officer did not find the boys but removed some boards that were up against the building and may have been used to get on the roof.



Good intent

A walker at Whitney Woods notified police on Saturday at about 10:15 a.m., when she saw a small dog wandering around the car of another walker whom she sees every day. She was concerned because she did not see the owner. However, the owner soon turned up and everything was OK.

COMPLETE SELECTION OF UGG® FOR MEN & WOMEN

Mother of three loses over 50 pounds!!

BEFORE

This year, a month before my 41st birthday, I heard about Get In Shape for Women. Since then I have lost over 50 lbs., 9% body fat, and 15 inches. I can't believe how effective the entire program of weight training/cardio training, nutritional planning, and accountability have been. Not only is the program highly effective, but the staff in the gym are incredible. Each time I walk through the doors of GIS4W, I am greeted with smiles, a warm welcome and personal trainers who are ready to help me become strong, fit, and successful. They provide varied and increasingly challenging workouts designed to help me meet my personal fitness goals. I'm never bored and these outstanding personal trainers have helped me learn how to follow a healthy, balanced diet. I can't thank them enough for their help, support, and encouragement. I look forward to my continued success!

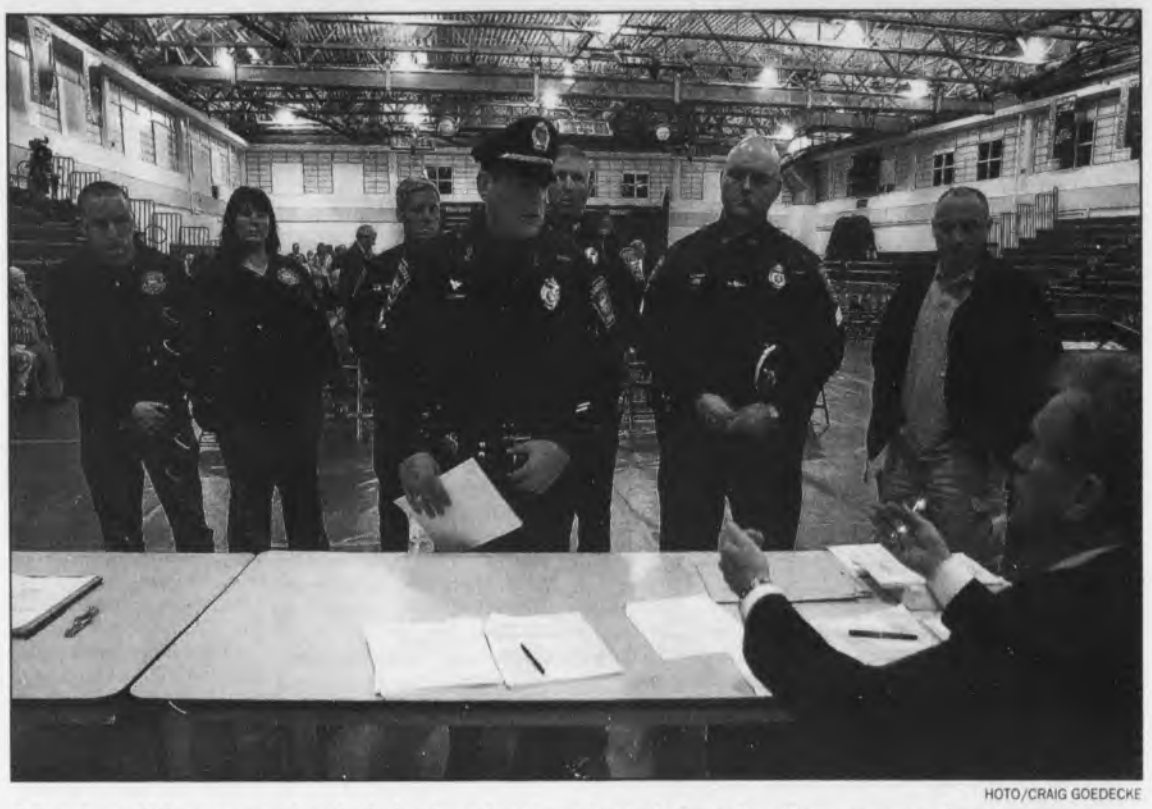
"informational campaign" to get residents to understand what a regional dispatch center might mean for the town of Cohasset. Officers' personal vehicles have been placed in visible places around town, including in front of the station, alerting residents of the issue and asking them to speak to the selectmen.

McLean said the police station has been receiving a number of calls about the regional dispatch center in the last week.

"We're looking forward to the issues being aired at Monday's meeting, getting the townspeople involved, and asking important questions to the selectmen," McLean said in a phone interview.



Silvia and Town Manager Bill Griffin said among the advantages of the regional dispatch center will allow for the full implementation of emergency medical dispatching, which allows a trained dispatcher to stay on the line after a 911 call to provide medical guidance until the first responders arrive.

Griffin said the regional emergency communications center (RECC) will provide better communication between the towns in the event an incident crosses town boundaries, and it will allow multiple dispatchers to handle the many calls that are received when a major incident occurs rather than leaving that burden to the one dispatcher on duty in Cohasset.

"...the regional system should go forward due to the advancements in public safety, not simply to save money."
— Town Manager Bill Griffin

Griffin said the dispatch center is not only a way for the towns to save money, but also improve services.

"Though there are financial savings associated with this proposed regional center for each of the towns, it has been consistently stated by the police chiefs, fire chiefs and town managers that the regional system should go forward due to the advancements in public safety, not simply to save money," Griffin said in an e-mail.

HOTO/CRAIG GOEDECKE

A banner alerts Cohasset residents who drive by police headquarters about the concerns the Cohasset Police Association has with the potential of closing the station at night.

In a phone interview, Silvia said many of the details for the regional dispatch center have yet to be set in stone. Particularly, the issue of whether the police station will be closed at night, which is the primary concern of the Cohasset Police Association union, has yet to be determined.

"That decision has not been made and it's really up to the Selectmen, town manager, the new police chief...and it's up to the townspeople and what they envision as acceptable," Silvia said, adding the towns of Norwell and Hull are wrestling with the same question.

"We've come to a situation where we feel we have an idea of how the (RECC) will run, but, to be honest, there has been many discussions, but nothing has been finalized," Silvia said. The signing of the inter-municipal agreement between the four towns, he said, would enable a consultant to come on board and start the process of the finer details being worked out.

Details like what radio channels each town will monitor and how many dispatchers will be needed require further discussion amongst the town officials.

Under the current plan, according to Chief Silvia, is the RECC would take the 911 emergency calls and the calls from the police and fires listed "emergency phone numbers" (according to the Cohasset Rotary telephone book for fire and ambulance, the emergency lines are 781-383-0260 and 781-383-6047 and for police it is 781-383-6047).

Each department would answer calls to the business lines (for police, 383-1212 and 383-1055 and for fire, 383-0616) most likely through an automated answering program. All callers who mistakenly place emergency calls to any of the business numbers are immediately instructed to hang up and dial 911.

"We'll need to get down into the weeds to make it work," said Silvia, adding he and former Chief Hussey visited the emergency communication centers of other municipalities with similar population numbers as to the combined four towns. The visits gave them a sense of how a local regional dispatch center could work.

The inter-municipal agreement establishes a Board of Directors (made up of each of the town's town manager or administrator), essentially a policy board, and an Operations Board comprised of the fire and police chiefs.

The four towns have received over $3.2-million from the State 911 Department to construct and equip the regional emergency communications center (RECC). A location in the Hingham Town Hall, next to the current police headquarters had been targeted for the new center.

In addition, the state formula favors a regional approach and therefore will provide increased annual allocations for the dispatch center. Currently, the state provides approximately $130,000 to support the dispatch centers across the four towns. With the RECC, the state 911 department will provide over $400,000 in offsets to support its operation.

The grant money kicks in once at least two towns sign the inter-municipal agreement. Hingham Board of Selectmen signed the agreement last week.

Police Chief Brian Noonan declined to comment because he has not been involved in the planning of the regional dispatch center. Former Police Chief James Hussey worked on the planning of the dispatch center with Silvia for the past two years. Hussey left his Cohasset post at the end of September.

West Corner businesses hurting

Bridge construction and detour signs deterring customers

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

A group of business owners wrote to the town officials in all three towns last week requesting confusing signage be remedied to help ensure visitors make their way to West Corner.

The unique corner where Cohasset, Hull and Hingham meet is under construction.

The towns joined forces, with the state, to reconstruct the West Corner culvert and bridge. Work started on the project earlier this fall.

The collaborative effort will bring the bridge up to date, but in the meantime the West Corner businesses are hurting. According to local business owners, the project and its associated signs are causing many potential visitors and customers to the area to re-think their plans.

A group of business owners wrote to the town officials in all three towns last week requesting confusing signage be remedied to help ensure visitors make their way to West Corner.

"Our customers, clients and patients are finding these signs confusing and misleading, they are not sure how far 1.5 miles is or which 'local businesses' are being referred to," stated the letter, which was signed by "West's Corner Businesses."

Susan Hiltz, who works in the office of John Burns DDS located on Rockland Street in Hingham, said patients have regularly been arriving 20 minutes late after being "detoured" to Forest Avenue.

While the dentist's office is an appointment destination for its clients, other businesses aren't in the same boat.

"The businesses around here have taken a big hit," Hiltz said.

Reflections Antique Emporium located in Cohasset at the corner of Jerusalem Road and Hull Street (Route 228) could not be reached by press time, but their answering message directs callers to "not follow the detour signs" and continue on Route 228 to the shop, which is located before the bridge.

West Corner Liquors, which is located in Hull on the other side of the bridge from the majority of the stores, has placed a lawn sign underneath the detour sign on Rockland St. in Hingham alerting passersby that they are open during construction. Pizza Box is also located next door to the liquor store.

Other Hingham West Corner businesses include Victoria's sub shop and Tedeschi's.

Frank Plotner, owner of DiNero's Restaurant in the Cohasset section of West Corner, said the bridge construction has had a negative effect on his business.

"The signage is very confusing, and, yeah, it's hurt," Plotner said. In the same breath though, he understood the necessity of the work.

"If the bridge has to be done, it has to be done. We're just looking forward to it re-opening," Plotner said.

The bridge is scheduled to re-open, at least with one lane of traffic, on Dec. 12, Hull DPW director Joe Stigliani said in a press release earlier this week.

The four-way intersection is parts of North Cohasset, East Hingham and South Hull. Its name has nothing to do with locational geography; rather it was named for Charles West, an early 20th century grocer who owned land at the crossroads. It was originally called West's Corner, but over the years that has morphed to "West Corner."

Given the unique geography and convergence of the three towns, the municipalities joined forces to re-construct the culvert and bridge. Funding for the multi-million dollar project was hard to come by and each town wouldn't have been able to repair the bridge on their own.

The three towns are sharing the cost of the infrastructure — 50 percent Hull, and 25 percent each for Cohasset and Hingham. Hull DPW has taken the lead on the project.

A Mass Highway report in 2000 rated the bridge in poor condition and in need of repair. The over 100-year-old bridge was in desperate need of repair. The bridge passed over the connection between Straits Pond and the Weir River Estuary. While the bridge is primarily a public safety issue, replacement of the culvert-including installing new, wider tidal gates-is expected to increase tidal flow and salinity in Straits Pond and improve the quality of the pond and the neighboring residents.

The West Corner bridge is expected to open at least for one-way traffic on Dec. 12. In the meantime, local businesses are hurting.

The double yellow line that divides Hull Street, the main thoroughfare through the Corner, also divides Hingham and Cohasset as well as Plymouth and Norfolk counties. The confusion reaches its end on the other side of the bridge across Straits Pond where the Hull town line intervenes and gives cross-road neighbors the right to pay taxes to the same municipality.

In a press release this week, Hull Supt. Stigliani reminded residents that the West Corner businesses are open during the reconstruction of the West Corner Bridge.

"Since only the bridge is closed, customers can access the businesses as usual and need not take the detour routes unless they need to go around the bridge," the press release stated.

The detours are scheduled to remain in place until Saturday, Dec. 12 after which the bridge will be open to alternating, one-way traffic, regulated by temporary traffic signals.

Cohasset town engineer Mark Brennan, who has been peripherally involved in the project said the construction workers are currently working extended days, six days a week to get the work done in time.

Hingham artist hosts gallery exhibit at Pink Tulip

Enjoy cocktails while you get an up close view of Hingham artist Jane Strone's latest watercolor and oil paintings at Pink Tulip Clothes & Accessories in Cohasset Village on Thursday, Dec. 3 from 6:30 to 8:30 p.m.

Well-known for her scenic, watercolor note cards depicting scenes in Hingham and Cohasset, Jane is primarily interested in color and the effect of light in her paintings. Her paintings have been exhibited at Duxbury Art Association, and the South Shore Art Center, where she is a charter member of the "Tuesday Painters Group", a group of sixteen painters on the South Shore. Jane also had a one-woman show exhibited at the James Library in Norwell. She also sells her work at the New York Botanical Garden.

The exhibit is open to the public.

Newly-widowed professional gains confidence and strength

Early this year I lost my first and only true love. It was sudden; we were laughing and talking one minute then the ambulance, the hospital and death in 25 hours. Shattered and heartsick, I was moving in a fog. My sons and my brother were there to take care of me, but they had to get back to their lives. I had to take care of myself.

I received a postcard in the mail from Get in Shape for Women. It brought back memories of workouts past, the endorphin highs, the self challenging. I smiled. This was exactly what I needed. The Get in Shape for Women card was offering me personal attention. I was in desperate need of that. I needed a reason to get out of bed. With it in hand, I went to the Open House. The owner and staff were friendly, informative and reassuring. I had a good feeling. After a conversation with the owner, explaining my situation, I knew what I needed to do. I signed up for a year! I needed to be pushed and they were going to hold me accountable. I put myself in their hands. All I had to do was get there. The first month was hard, but I was smiling after each workout. So, I added a third day. Now, after six months I look forward to my workouts smiling before, during and after.

My wonderful personal trainers at Get In Shape helped me with my nutritional needs. The trainers kept after me, stressing the importance of fueling my body in order to make my workouts productive. With good nutrition and challenging workouts, I have come from a shattered broken woman to a strong, healthy and happy girl. I want to thank Get in Shape for Women for pulling me out of the fog. My confidence is back, I'm back to work, the spring is back in my step and there's a smile on my face.

Sincerely,
Sandy Correia

THANKFUL

Hi there Cohasset and Happy Thanksgiving to all. As I think back on the year that we have all had, some of those memories are wonderful and for all of us at times, some of the memories are not so great. What we all need to do I think, is to take a look around us and no matter how tough things can get realize how lucky, blessed and thankful that we all are with who and what our lives have in them.

For me, I am so thankful for my family, especially my three children and the love that I have for them, my friends who support and surround me with friendship and caring and for myself, to have the ocean at any point in my day or night to view to help me calm and remember how lucky I am. I also want for us all to help and share in some ones life who may not be as lucky as you. A kind word here and there, a hug, helping with a task, donate some clothing or food and anything you can think of that will make life a little easier for someone else. Happy Thanksgiving!

BOX TOPS

The Cohasset Parent/School Organization ("PSO") would like to ask Cohasset residents to consider clipping the Box Tops for Education (the little red rectangles) from their grocery purchases. Currently, students and families at the Osgood and Deer Hill schools collect Box Tops but the PSO encourages everyone in town to consider collecting them. Each Box Top earns .10 for our schools. Collection envelopes are available at the Osgood and Deer Hill school offices as well as the Community Center, in the Cohasset Public Library and at the Our World Museum. Thank you for considering this effort as we all know that it takes a village to raise the child and this is a great way to give a little.

WORKSHOP

Here is a workshop that the public is invited to free of charge and could help in a big time way. Movin' On & Movin' In is the name of this informative workshop on real estate, mortgage financing and the tax credits for the first time and existing home buyers. If you are dreaming of owning your own home, here is a way to learn how to make that dream come true. This workshop is being held at the Our World Museum on Tuesday, Dec. 1 from 6-8 pm and Peggy Dinger, a local realtor and Maureen Powers, a Mortgage specialist will be available to talk and answer any and all questions you may have.

That is all the news for this week Cohasset! Enjoy your week with families and friends, take the time to be so thankful and then, make sure to get me all of your news, photos and memories by next week no later than Tuesday by 5 pm.

TREND TOWARD HOME CARE

Technological advances and an aging population have led to the expansion of the home health care industry in recent years. Older individuals dealing with age-related conditions, patients recovering from surgery and those with chronic illnesses can benefit from a variety of home health care equipment, products and services. Home-based patients will find help from blood pressure meters, home dialysis, mobility devices and respiratory equipment. Home health care products can assist with ostomy and mastectomy care, pain management, physical therapy and bathroom safety. Services, such as nursing care, meal preparation and house cleaning are also available to at-home patients. This column will highlight the various ways the profession is working to keep patients where they are most comfortable - at home.

We would like to welcome you to our column about in-home care for seniors. We provide trained, bonded, insured caregivers to help your parents stay in their homes longer. That will make both them and you happier. Our services include companionship, meal preparation, light housekeeping, medication reminders, shopping errands, Alzheimer's care and more. Call 781-878-2994 to learn what we can do for you and your loved ones. Our address is 145 Washington Street, Suite 11. In-home help for Massachusetts seniors.

Water quality problems not crystal clear

To begin to address residents' issues, concerns and questions a Public Water Quality meeting with the Water Commission and Board of Health will be held after the holidays on Tuesday, Jan. 12.

"The public meeting is intended to inform the public about the quality of the public water, the research, engineering and plans the Department has accomplished and the plans to deal with quality over the next years," said Water Commission Chairman Glenn Pratt.

The meeting will also discuss the different water quality standards for private wells, as well as health effects as identified by various government agencies.

Butman told the Mariner that she and others have been dealing with consistently discolored water for about four years.

Butman has been working with her neighbors and others who are experiencing discolored water and are growing increasingly concerned – and frustrated – about the water quality. Although there have been talks and discussions with the water department, Water Commission and the Board of Health, Butman has yet to see the water quality improve to the point where it is useable everyday.

"There are still a lot of questions, still a lot of concerns. The water tastes bad, it looks bad, it smells bad, it is ruining people's plumbing – and now it could be potentially dangerous to our health," Butman said.

What Butman is referring to is the high level – over the federal standard – of total trihalomethanes (TTHMs), a potential carcinogen, recently recorded in the water. Cohasset Water has not violated the standard as compliance is evaluated on a rolling annual average, not by a single measurement.

According to the Mass DEP website, total trihalomethanes is the sum of the concentrations of bromodichloromethane, bromoform, dibromochloromethane and chloroform. The four trihalomethanes are byproducts of the disinfection process. Potential health effects from ingestion of TTHMs in water include liver, kidney and central nervous system problems, as well as an increased risk of cancer. Some studies have linked higher TTHM levels in drinking water to a higher rate of miscarriage.

PHOTOS/NANCY WHITE

Residents around town have been saving samples of discolored water coming from their faucet. Samples came from Spring, Beechwood, Elm and Pond streets.

Small particles float in one of the water bottles collected by residents.

DEP spokesman Joe Ferson said most of the health effects from elevated TTHMs are long-term health risks.

"There is a need to balance properly disinfecting the water for microbial viruses like E-coli and being careful not to cause a problem with disinfection byproducts," Ferson said.

In Massachusetts, the maximum contaminant level is 80 parts per billion and was set based on the potential for an increased risk of these health effects by the EPA in 1998. Last quarter, taken in August, all four sampling sites in Cohasset came back over the 80 parts per billion maximum contaminant level ranging from 93 to 102 parts per billion.

Using their own money, Butman and other residents, paid for a private analytical reports from Geolabs, a Braintree-based environmental testing company.

Water samples were collected from one home on each of the following streets: Arrowwood Road, Spring Street, Bates Lane, and Jerusalem Road (near Linden Drive). The samples were tested for iron, manganese and THMs.

"All the results came back over the state standard for TTHMs," Butman said.

In phone interviews, both Water Commission chairman Pratt and water department superintendent Jared Hill stressed the town has not violated any DEP standard when it came to TTHMs. DEP spokesman Joe Ferson as well confirmed the town was below the maximum contaminant level for TTHMs at this time.

Right now, the town must comply with the federal standard of under 80 parts per billion for TTHMs on the basis of a rolling annual average. That means each quarter the water department takes samples at each of their four sampling sites. At the end of the year all four quarters are averaged into a single number that must be under 80 parts per billion.

Standards changing, plant retrofit

However, a change in the standard is looming in 2012. Samples will still be taken quarterly and each sampling site will be averaged annually and must be under the 80 parts per billion. Essentially, each sampling site must stand on its own and comply with the standard.

Supt. Hill said the sampling sites are not chosen at random, they are chosen according to a specific set of guidelines and are approved by the Mass DEP/EPA to represent the entire system. Two of the four sites represent the maximum water age where TTHMs are expected to be higher.

Hill said single measurements for TTHMs and other contaminants don't necessarily given the whole picture.

"If you look at the individual tests at certain times of the years, in certain parts of the system, the numbers will be high," Hill said.

The knowledge of the more stringent standard coming down the pike and a need to address both the discolored water, which is largely blamed on manganese, and improve other water quality standards, like TTHMs, has had the water department looking for a solution.

Butman and other residents aren't alone in their frustration. The Water Department and Commission is frustrated, too. They say they have done and are doing all they can to improve the water with the tools and resources they have.

"Right now and for the past four-plus years we've been in compliance with the regulations for disinfection byproducts, but does that mean we are not doing anything to improve the quality of the water and lower the TTHMs? No. In all water quality parameters we do our best to improve our numbers," Hill said.

The challenge, Hill said, lies partially in the raw water of Lily Pond.

"Our water quality in Lily Pond changes day to day, season to season, year to year. It is challenging to treat (this water) with the water treatment plant we have," Hill said. Over the past few years, he adds, the water department has changed many aspects of the treatment process in an effort to address TTHMs and other water quality issues.

"We've tweaked all that we could," Hill said. In about 150 water quality standards, Hill said the water department has made improvements nearly across the board with the exception of manganese.

"We've made all these changes and to not have it visible to the customer – it's frustrating," Hill said.

TTHMs are nothing new to the Water Commission or the Water Department. In 2005, the Water Department changed their treatment process – a change to the chlorination point — to help comply with new federal requirements to reduce the levels of TTHMs in the drinking water after they had a violation. However, in doing so, the change exacerbated the manganese issue and the discolored water, Hill said.

The solution, both Hill and Pratt said, is a major retrofit to the current water plant.

"The big thing we're focused on now is a plant retrofit," Pratt said. A pilot study with the MIEX water treatment system, which was estimated to cost $5 million a few years ago, adds a type of treatment process that specifically focused on organic removal from the raw water.

Board of Health involved

Residents have also called on the Board of Health to get involved. In addition to clean water, Butman and others would like to see the DEP tighten up the water quality standards and make it mandatory that homeowners are told when potentially dangerous chemicals, like TTHMs, are in their water.

When a group of residents, Butman included, came before the Board of Health recently they were initially there to talk about the manganese in the water, but the conversation turned to TTHMs as well. Butman showed the discolored water samples, which Board of Health chairman Peggy Chapman said were "appalling and some looked like coffee had been dumped in them," and private testing results they had received from Geolabs.

"The question is do we have a cancer causing agent in the water because that's definitely an issue," Chapman said in a phone interview. If the water department is passing all state water quality standards, it raising another issue, she said, "you get into a quandary where the law says you can do it, but who would want to drink it?"

Selectmen vice chair Karen Quigley, who has experienced discolored water on a regular basis in her home on Clay Spring Road, spoke to the water issue at recent Selectmen's meeting.

"Health and safety issues have come to light…I think we need to respond to very real concerns people have, correct misinformation, establish what has been done and continues to be done to improve water quality," Quigley said. "This could get way out of hand if not addressed quickly."

The Public Water Quality meeting will be held on Tuesday, Jan. 12 at 7p.m., location is to be determined.

different.

In 2006, she traveled to sub-Saharan Africa, to Nairobi, Kenya, to visit her missionary sister and saw thousands of children living in poverty and filth — and without parents to watch over them. The region, like so many in Africa, has been badly stricken by the AIDS epidemic and many children lose their parents to the disease.

The Oasis of Peace orphanage, which operates under the name An Orphan's Dream here in the US, has made significant strides in the last year. The orphanage is located in Gachoka, Kenya, about two hours northeast of Nairobi. The main building of the orphanage, which will house 20 orphans, is nearly complete.

A roof is the main piece needed right now, which is estimate to cost $6,000. To finish the building, windows, doors, inner plastering, tile, bringing in electricity and plumbing, and furnishing the entire place is estimated to cost $30,000.

Burbank is optimistic the opening of the orphanage will have a ripple effect on the community that surrounds it. She hopes the building attracts additional investors to the area and she hopes the orphanage becomes an integral part of the community.

"This is not going to be just a big old building just for us," Burbank said. A chapel, a playground, and an outreach program complement the primary functions of the orphanage. Already, Burbank said, the building of the orphanage has given local construction workers steady work and reliable pay for the first time.

The 10-acre piece of land will eventually hold 10 more homes each with 10 children and farmland. Burbank is searching for donors to pay for the building of each of the homes. Each small house is estimated to coat $12,000.

Already two acres are growing hundreds and hundreds of watermelon. If the crop is successful, the sale of the watermelon could pay for a year's worth of food for the children and several of the staff's salary.

"We could very well be self-sufficient — and that's really the goal," Burbank said. "There is so much going on, it is too exciting for words."

The work is hard — fundraising stateside, keeping things moving in Africa and reconciling the two very different worlds, Burbank said. In Gachoka and its surrounding area, Burbank is the only white face, or muthungu in Swahili, and the one link they have to America and its riches. Taking in all the poverty of the area and only being able to do so much is not an easy task.

"If I want to give comfort to those who suffer, I need to be willing to feel their pain," Burbank said.

Burbank herself is the first to admit she seems like an unlikely choice to complete this mission, but she has come to believe that's the point.

"I don't even know how this happened to me," Burbank said. "But, I feel like a steel rod was placed in my back and it is still burning me. I have the same incredible drive as I did the first day I was called to do this. I'm not interested in anything but the kids."

What once was a distant and unknown place for which she never gave a second thought, she is now calling Africa and Kenya, "home."

"The last time I touched down in Nairobi, I started crying. It was then I realized that this is my home now. This is home," Burbank said.

She will touch down in Nairobi once again after the holidays and this time it really will be her home. She plans to live out the rest of her life in Kenya creating what she hopes will be a better life for a group of orphans.

"All I want to do is hug the very first orphan," Burbank said with a smile.

Garden Therapy for seniors at Golden Living

The Community Garden Club of Cohasset offers a program called Garden Therapy to seniors at Golden Living Nursing Home in Cohasset. On the second Wednesday of each month, a group of enthusiastic seniors gather in the activity lounge waiting for the arrival of garden club members. CGC members arrive with containers, greens, fresh flowers and a plan. After some instruction and a little help from the volunteers, each resident produces an arrangement, which will brighten up his or her room for the next several days. The arrangements have a seasonal theme. The November theme was Thanksgiving.

This month, in addition to the Garden Therapy program, four garden club members planted 250 spring bulbs in the circle at the front of the building. It was an effort to support the National Garden Club president Renee Blashchke's project, Golden Days. She is encouraging member garden clubs to plant daffodils in their communities. The members of the Community Garden Club felt that the grounds of Golden Living Senior Center were the perfect spot for the daffodils. In the spring, seniors who are no longer in their homes and no longer have gardens will be able to enjoy this added splash of color.

Walking Trail in Great Brewster Woods

The Directors of the Cohasset Conservation Trust, Inc. (CCT) recently posted the walking trail in their Great Brewster Woods property with new yellow trail markers. The entrance to Great Brewster is at the end of Great Brewster Lane, off the St. Stephen's Church end of Highland Avenue. Parking is available in the Town Hall parking lot.

The first part of the trail winds past old stonewalls and ledge (one of which, off a short side trail on the left, offers views of Little Harbor over "the Mohawk" salt marsh) and follows a gradual downhill slope. The trail then follows a loop, turning right and then left through Dean's Meadow, then left again through a stonewall, past a small brook (just off the trail on the right) and the Mohawk salt marsh. It then turns left again, running uphill to rejoin the trail back towards town. The entire trail is now clearly marked with yellow markers.

Great Brewster Woods and Dean's Meadow together cover 26 acres and were donated to the CCT in 1985 and 1992 respectively by the Great Brewster Corporation and Helen Dean. The CCT hopes the new markers will encourage more people to walk the trail and enjoy this beautiful natural area so close to the center of Town.

Christmas at the shelter

Note cards and cookbooks among the items on sale

By Benjamin Brown
BBROWN@CNC.COM

This holiday season, why not spend some time at the Scituate Animal Shelter?

According to shelter board member Jennifer Durkin, the shelter has become a one-stop shop of sorts for this upcoming Christmas. The shelter is offering a variety of products, the sales of which will go directly toward supporting the shelter and the animals within. Among the products offered, the shelter will be selling note cards, a cookbook, a calendar and Christmas ornaments, said Durkin.

People can visit shelter animals, enjoy refreshments and pick up gifts during the shelter's holiday celebration Dec. 1 and 2 from 3 to 5 p.m., Dec. 3 from 3 to 7 p.m., Dec. 4 from noon to 3 p.m. and Saturday, Dec. 5, 1 to 4 p.m. Children's crafts and a special tree-lighting ceremony at 4 p.m. will be part of the activities on Dec. 5.

"We thought it would be awesome for families to spend time with animals that don't have any family during the holidays," said Durkin.

Sold for $12 in mixed packs, the note cards have a picture of a shelter animal on it. Rather than put a real-life picture on every card, artists from the surrounding community chose an animal from the shelter and then painted it. Eight artists teamed up to create the cards, which will be available for purchase at the shelter or from a limited number of vendors in the immediate area..

The artists who painted the animals featured on the note cards are Tina Watson, Judy St. Peter, Sue Dreamer, Scott Leaver, Alison Cook, Jill Flynne, Mary Beth LoPiccolo, and Ivy Frances.

The cookbook, which costs $20, will only be available at the animal shelter, and was created using personal recipes that people in the area submitted, said Durkin. While the book is being sold at a shelter for pets, Durkin said it is not for animals.

"It's not for animals; it's for humans, although that would be something if it were," she said.

Also on sale at the animal shelter and nowhere else is the 2010 animal calendar. Designed by Jane Higgins of Oceanside Design, the calendar uses pictures of pets that were submitted to the shelter by their owners, said Durkin. It costs $10.

For those not interested in cooking, keeping track of the day or sending animal-themed note cards, there will an alternative way to support the shelter animals. According to Durkin, the shelter will be selling ornaments that visitors can buy for a $20 donation. Shelter patrons can donate up to $250, with the sponsorship program running throughout the entire month of December.

The tree being lit on Dec. 5 is called the Tree of Memories, said Durkin.

"The purpose of that tree is to remember the pets that have passed and the pets that are still with us," she said.

Supporters can buy ribbons for the tree for $15 each.

"We have wonderful gift ideas, and your donation will help make some animal's holidays brighter," Downey said.

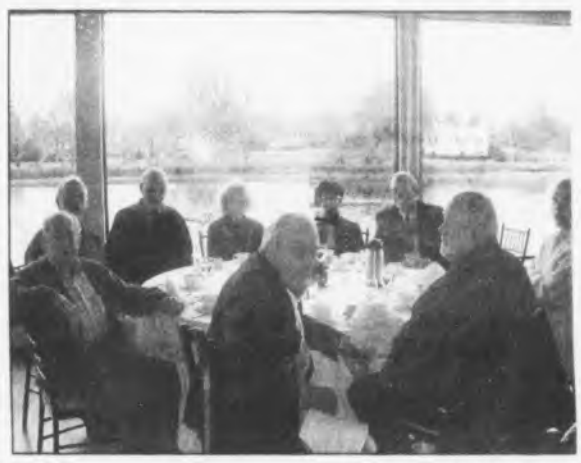
The shelter, which "proudly serves the South Shore region," is located at 780 Chief Justice Cushing Highway in Scituate. For information, visit scituateanimalshelter.org.

Festival of the Wreaths at Glastonbury Abbey

The first Festival of the Wreaths will take place from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m., on Sunday, Dec. 6, at Glastonbury Abbey, 16 Hull St., , Hingham, to benefit The Wellness Community-Massachusetts South Shore, provider of emotional support programs free of charge for cancer patients, their families, friends and caregivers. Individuals and businesses are creating and donating more than 100 wreaths of every description to be displayed and sold at the event for between $50 and $125.

Parking is free, everyone is welcome, and no admission will be charged.

The Wellness Community-Massachusetts South Shore's free, professionally led programs of support, education and hope help individuals living with cancer to enhance their health and well-being and improve the quality of their lives and chances of recovery by participating in their treatment with their health care team. Information is at 781-829-4823 and thewellnesscommunitymass.org.



Atlantica hosts senior Thanksgiving feast

As the wind swept over the harbor and rain drops begun to fall you wouldn't imagine a busy day for a restaurant that is typically closed on a Tuesday, but not your typical day was this as cars begun to fill up the lot at Atlantica for the Cohasset Elder Affairs Annual Thanksgiving dinner.

Director of Operations Joe Campbell was waiting to greet the crowd along with his wife Janet Campbell and many other resort volunteers. The annual Thanksgiving Dinner is hosted by The Cohasset Harbor Resort. "It's a good feeling to give back to the community" says Joe Campbell "We just finished up our Pie in the Sky for Community Servings program and that was also a great success". Patrons dined on fresh sliced turkey with all the traditional fixings as well as freshly baked pumpkin pies for dessert.

What a wonderful meal was the phrase that echoed the room as the plates had been taken from each table, while Joe Campbell was accepting his letter of recognition.

The guests all gathered in the restaurant lobby to wish one another happy holidays before departing.

Concerts to help people in crisis

Broad Cove Chorale and the Unicorn Singers will present two Christmas concerts to benefit the Diane Edson Fund of Wellspring Multi-Service Center. "A Welsh Christmas – A Child's Christmas in Wales" will include segments from Dylan Thomas' description of his childhood in Wales. Alternatively read and sung, the text will be presented by Michael Theobald of Milton. Audience members can join the celebration in singing traditional Welsh songs.

A Welsh Christmas will be performed at 8 p.m., on Saturday, Dec. 12, at the House of Prayer in Hingham and 4 p.m., on Sunday, Dec. 13, at First Parish Church in Cohasset. Proceeds from the concerts will provide immediate assistance to South Shore residents in crisis facilitated through Wellspring's Edson Fund.

The late Diane Edson of Hingham, founder of Wellspring, sang with the Unicorn Singers for 15 years making this benefit concert particularly touching.

Theobald, an area educator, will present segments from "A Child's Christmas in Wales," the Unicorn Singers will perform a setting by American composer Matthew Harris, and Broad Cove Chorale will provide additional holiday hymns.

The late Diane Edson of Hingham, founder of Wellspring, sang with the Unicorn Singers for 15 years making this benefit concert particularly touching. Five years ago, Wellspring established the Diane Edson Fund – to be used for one purpose – to provide immediate aid for people in trouble.

Tickets are $15 per person, or $25 for sponsors. Send checks payable to Wellspring Multi-Service Center, c/o Kathy Reardon, 9 Steamboat Lane, Hingham, MA 02043, or call 781-749-016. Tickets are also available at Nobles Camera Shop in Hingham.

OPINION

EDITORIAL

Please pass the furmity

"Would you please pass the furmity, Governor?"

"You boiled it just right in the pipkin, Mary."

"I'll have a little more aqua vita, Susanna."

It's possible the conversation went a bit like this that first Thanksgiving Day in Plymouth so many years ago.

About 140 people sat at the three-day harvest: 90 Indians and 50 Pilgrims.

If you happen to be the cook and you think that you're going to work hard on Thursday, keep in mind that at the first Thanksgiving, only four women did all the cooking.

They roasted wildfowl, turkeys, and deer in English fashion. They boiled cod and sea bass in Indian tradition.

They cooked breads and fruit tarts in a skillet over an open fire.

For dessert, they made furmity by beating wet wheat in a sack with a washbeetle, boiling it overnight, soaking it on a fire, boiling it in cream in a pipkin, then topping it with sugar.

Their guests were not worried about their cholesterol level or the fat content in the food.

They ate to their hearts' content and then washed it all down with beer called aqua vita.

They scooped food from wooden bowls with their hands.

There were knives and a few spoons, but no forks.

Huge napkins were very important.

It was a whole year after the Pilgrims first put their tattered boots on Plymouth Rock before the first Thanksgiving.

William Bradford served for 35 years as the governor of Plymouth, and he has gone down in history as the patriarch of the first Thanksgiving.

Bradford, who died in 1650, chronicled the early life of Plymouth in his little known manuscript, "Of Plymouth Plantation."

Although this manuscript was not published in Bradford's lifetime, it was used later as a reference by colonial historians.

The tiny and overcrowded Mayflower had tossed like a toy boat upon the fierce Atlantic waves for two months.

The Mayflower was bound for the Hudson River, but because it encountered treacherous weather and unchartered seas and shoals, settled on Plymouth instead.

Their trip had been stormy and long.

Their arrival was dismal and discouraging.

"Being thus passed the vast ocean, and a sea of troubles before in their preparation, they now had no friends to welcome them, nor inns to entertain or refresh their weatherbeaten bodies, nor houses to repair to," Bradford wrote. "What could now sustain them but the spirit of God and His grace?"

The first winter saw more than half their number starve or freeze to death.

Their first harvest was a disaster, but in the second year, with the help of the Indians, their fields bore fruit.

They thanked God for His blessing.

It is now more than three and a half centuries later.

We went a-hunting in a well-stocked supermarket and speared our frozen turkey with icy fingers.

Instead of checking our meat for arrowheads, we read the labels for the fat and MSG content.

Instead of cooking herbs and roots for days, we might have popped a pouch of peas in boiling water.

Instead of skillet-baked bread, we might have browned and served some rolls.

Instead of beating wet wheat for furmity, we might have heated up a pre-baked apple pie.

But the warmth of Thanksgiving was still the same.

We asked nothing more from it than a high school football game in the morning, a turkey dinner at two, and the warmth of our family around us all day.

Toxic holiday plants

By Steve Bobo
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

Tis the season to be jolly,
But please don't swallow any holly!

It's surely the season for holiday decorations, but beware of some plant species – and maybe poinsettias.

Holly, mistletoe, Jerusalem cherry and bittersweet are poisonous plants often included in holiday décor. When used, take care not to place them within reach of children or pets. Although berries and other plant parts don't taste good, small children will often be tempted. Both the stiff green leaves and the bright red berries of holly are attractive to children. The berries are significantly poisonous and ingestion of 20 berries could mean death to a child. Even if placed out of reach of children and pets, watch for dried berries that may fall to the floor. Berries, leaves and stems of mistletoe are all considered toxic. The greenish white berries fall easily and some florists are now attaching artificial berries to the stems. It is very important to quickly remove any leaves or berries that may fall on the floor.

If you think someone has been poisoned, call the Regional Center for Poison Control and Prevention at 1-800-222-1222 right away. Don't wait for the victim to look or feel sick. Do not try to treat the person yourself.

Although not as popular as it once was, Jerusalem cherry is grown for its bright orange-red colored berries. The plant is a member of the nightshade family and contains solanine, which is a heart depressant, making it one of the more toxic plants displayed during the holidays. The bright colored berries are about the size of a small cherry tomato that makes them attractive to children and pets.

Although for years accused falsely of being poisonous, research has shown that poinsettia is not poisonous.

The stems and attractive berries of bittersweet are used in wreaths and floral arrangements. All parts of this plant are potentially toxic with the berries being most easily ingested.

Poinsettia can't gettiya. Of several holiday plants used in homes or given as gifts without fear of potential poison, first is the poinsettia. Although for years accused falsely of being poisonous, research has shown that poinsettia is not poisonous. Contact with the latex sap may cause an irritation in sensitive people and a large number of ingested leaves could certainly cause stomach upset in children and pets. A second non-poisonous holiday plant is the Christmas cactus. Available in colors from white to pinks to red, it is an attractive, easy to grow plant.

Plant bulb kits featuring amaryllis bulbs are popular Christmas gifts. The bulbs are toxic and, although they are normally not eaten by children, they can be a problem with pets. Christmas peppers are a newcomer to the holiday plant list. Most of the ornamental peppers are "hot peppers" and contain an irritating substance called capsaicin. Handling the fruit can cause a burning skin irritation

LETTER TO THE EDITOR

Rabies clarified

TO THE EDITOR:

A simple correction on rabies and mammals, squirrels are almost never found to have contracted rabies and no transmitted rabies cases in the U.S. Lagomorph and rodentia species with few exceptions do not carry rabies. The woodchuck or groundhog are one of the only rodentia that can carry rabies. The majority of rabies carriers are the mammal carnivores, bats and in this area raccoons.

Absentee ballots for the special state primary

Absentee ballots for the Special State Primary on Dec. 8, 2009 are now available at the Town Clerk's office. Absentee voting may be done during normal office hours until noontime on Monday, Dec. 7, at which time the office will be closed to prepare for the election. You should vote in person on Election Day if you are in town and able to come to the polls. You may vote absentee for the following reasons only:

1. Absence from the town during the hours the polls is open.
2. Physical disability.
3. Religious beliefs, which prevent voting at the polls on Election Day.

The applicant must request an absentee ballot. Applications are available in the Town Clerk's office or a written, signed request can be sent by mail, or hand delivered by the voter or any other person. The application should include the legal voting address of the voter, which ballot is requested, Democrat, Republican, or Libertarian, where the ballot is to be mailed, and the signature of the applicant. If a voter is Un-enrolled (Independent) he needs to choose a ballot and will remain un-enrolled after the primary. If you are enrolled in a party you must vote that ballot. If you wish to change your party affiliation it must have be done on or before Nov. 18, 2009. Voters who are enrolled in a political designation may not vote in primaries.

A family member of a person qualified to vote by absentee ballot may apply on behalf of such voter. The applicant shall state his or her relationship to the absentee voter; sign the application under the pains and penalties of perjury and mail or hand deliver the application to the clerk's office. Absentee ballots must be mailed to the voter. Returned ballots should be mailed or can be delivered by an immediate member of the family to the Town Clerk's office by Dec. 8, 2009 to be counted.

If you are permanently physically disabled and cannot cast your vote at the polling place, you may file a letter from your physician with your town clerk, stating that you are permanently unable to cast your vote at the polling place because of physical disability. A completed application for an absentee ballot for you to sign and return will be mailed to you by the town clerk at least 28 days before every primary and election.

Rocky Lane sidewalk coming into focus

MAKING TRACKS

TOM GRUBER & MARK BRENNAN

Rocky Lane Sidewalk — Although this article may elicit a yawn from some of our readers, it is very important to a small cadre of our readers. That cadre is, of course, the residents of Rocky Lane. We've spoken about this from time to time, but we thought we'd summarize this project and its rationale for everyone's benefit.

The photos show the paving operation as it took place on Monday of this week.

COURTESY PHOTOS

Sidewalk Paving Operation.

Completed Sidewalk in Foreground.

The story of this sidewalk goes way back to the early Greenbush design days in 2005. For those of you who are not familiar with Rocky Lane, it is a subdivision located on the Route 3A side of North Main Street. The sub division is on a cul-de-sac, so there is only one way in and out. When the Greenbush plans were being finalized, the plans established a passing track in the area between Sohier Street and Lower King Street. Originally, this would have meant an at-grade crossing on Rocky Lane, just before it emerges onto North Main Street. However, since this crossing would have two tracks, at certain times during the day a train might be sitting on the passing track waiting for a train headed in the opposite direction to pass by. This waiting train could potentially block the at-grade crossing for a period of time. During this blockage, no emergency vehicles could enter or leave the Rocky Lane neighborhood. This could potentially endanger the welfare of the residents.

The MBTA looked at alternate ways to obtain emergency access to this residential area. The only option they could come up with was emergency access through the Rose Hill subdivision. This route posed several serious problems. There would need to be a land taking from one, or more of the residents in Rose Hill and the terrain from Rose Hill to Rocky Lane was very hilly and contained wetlands. Further, any new emergency road would need to cross the Sanctuary Pond Dam, which is only an earthen dam and is owned by the Trustees of Reservations. These access rights issues and the cost of the formidable terrain caused the MBTA to look elsewhere.

That's when they decided to build a bridge to carry Rocky Lane over the two sets of tracks and give the Rocky Lane Residents a full-time access route to North Main Street, unencumbered by the tracks. So, the plans were changed and the new access road over a bridge was constructed.

Now we fast forward to the new design and compare it with the "old" path of Rocky Lane, especially for the schoolchildren who must find their way to their bus stop on North Main Street. The "old" route of Rocky Lane had no sidewalk, but had a shallow grade and a shallow concrete berm with wide grass areas, at least on one side of the road, where children could easily step off of the paving onto the grass. Ah, but the new route — that's a different matter. As you drive up North Main Street it is easy to see that the bridge road is lined on both sides with a sharp granite curb. With out a sidewalk, the children need to navigate over the curb onto an area that could easily be overgrown with weeds and ultimately trees.

When we asked the MBTA to create a sidewalk for pedestrian safety, their answer was that there was no sidewalk there before, so they would not build a sidewalk on the new road. However, they did say they would leave room for a sidewalk if the Town would like to build one.

The Town ultimately developed plans for the sidewalk but needed to have the Conservation Commission issue a permit for our work. Because of the proximity of adjacent wetlands, we designed the paving to utilize a relatively new paving product, pervious asphalt. With this material rain can penetrate the asphalt and recharge the ground water, rather than run directly toward James Brook. (This is the first use of pervious paving in Cohasset and we are anxious to evaluate its performance.)

The photos show the paving operation as it took place on Monday of this week. The first photo shows a sidewalk-paving machine on the sidewalk. A sidewalk-paving machine is a miniature of the conventional road-paving machine. The main difference is that, because of its small size, it can't be directly fed with asphalt from a large truck. A bucket loader is used to load asphalt from the truck into the paving machine. The base coat of asphalt has been laid and the paver is laying the topcoat in the first photo.

The second photo is looking from the old Rocky Lane uphill toward the bridge. The sidewalk in the foreground has been completed and the pavers are working their way back down to North Main Street. A cross walk will be placed on North Main Street to aid pedestrians traveling from the established North Main Street sidewalk, across the street to the new Rocky Lane Sidewalk. This finally finishes another long-awaited sidewalk project. That's our story, and we're sticking to it!

'Mr. B' instrumental in teaching music

THE ARTS

Instrumental music teacher Steven Biagini quizzes students from Mrs. Corkhum's fourth-grade class on what note the beat falls on the scale.

Steve Biagini, or "Mr. B," is a well-known figure in the Cohasset School System. For 20 years, he has been teaching Cohasset's students at the Deer Hill School introductory instrumental music. Every year, a new fourth-grade class attends a meeting to choose an instrument that they have probably never held; by the spring they are playing concerts.

Mr. Biagini started exactly as his students today start — playing the trumpet in fourth grade. He switched to the French horn in ninth grade, which was when he started getting really excited about music. His high school orchestra and chorus director, Mr. Adams, had a big influence on him and was a great role model. Mr. Biagini moved on to study music and education at UMass-Lowell for four years, then continued at UMass-Amherst for another two years. While studying to be a music teacher, he studied multiple instruments, including all band instruments, strings, piano, and the guitar. These days, he still principally plays the French horn.

After graduating from college, Mr. Biagini played in the U.S. Air Force Bands in New England. He also traveled throughout Europe with the Air Force Band. After he returned, he taught at the Concord-Carlisle Regional Schools, grades four through 12. He started teaching in Cohasset in 1989.

Mr. Biagini has a busy musical life, in and out of teaching at Deer Hill School. He is the director of the Rusty Skippers, Cohasset's community band. He also plays with various bands and orchestras throughout eastern Massachusetts. He likes to play a variety of musical genres and "especially enjoy[s] the [music played in] in Rusty Skipper Band and playing in theater orchestras for musicals." Mr. Biagini particularly enjoys listening to orchestral and jazz music, but enjoys "almost anything." Mr Biagini also enjoys playing different styles of music and for different reasons: for their unique range, expressiveness, and challenges. "The flute has a beautiful sound but is probably my biggest challenge because the tone production and breath control are so different from the other instruments." However, he states, "Any instrument played well is my favorite for that moment."

When asked about teaching students who are learning to play an instrument for the first time, Steve Biagini said, "I mostly enjoy their enthusiasm and the fact that their progress is so rapid at this age." As a result of that progress, the band programs in the Cohasset Middle School and High School receive a steady stream of well-prepared band members, providing a strong foundation for the program at every level. The Town of Cohasset is very fortunate to have such an enthusiastic band teacher.

Toxic holiday plants

and if ingested by children or pets they can cause respiratory problems resulting from the shock of something that "hot" in the mouth.

The pines, balsams, spruces and firs used as Christmas trees and greens in the homes at holiday time are not toxic, but the needles can cause choking and airway obstruction if taken into the mouth in large numbers. Greens from Japanese yews should be avoided because all parts of this evergreen can be toxic.

To keep the holiday time safe, keep all holiday plants out of the reach of children and pets. Be diligent in keeping the berries and plant parts picked up and vacuum up any needles that fall from the Christmas tree or other greens. Edited version from Carl Hoffman, University of Minnesota Agriculture Extension.

Other holiday health hazards for plants and people

Soon we'll be putting up holiday decorations but state officials are urging homeowners to avoid hanging wreaths or garlands that may include invasive plant species. The Massachusetts Department of Horticultural Resources says plants pose a threat to native biodiversity in the state. Officials say that Oriental bittersweet and multiflora rose are the two invasive species most commonly used in holiday wreaths and garlands because of their natural beauty. It is illegal to sell or import either species in Massachusetts.

Commuter boats given reprieve

MBTA still in tough fiscal shape

YOUR REP

GARRETT BRADLEY

On Sept. 1, 1897, the first electric subway in America began operating between Park Street and Boylston Street in Boston. For 102 years, this system expanded outward to become the most traveled public infrastructure network in Massachusetts, responsible for transporting tens of millions of riders each year and helping to grow the economy. Now a new report casts doubt on the financial future of the Massachusetts Bay Transportation Authority.

If the phrase "no news is good news" can be applied in this circumstance, then the exclusion from this report of any reference to our Hingham and Hull commuter boats may be an encouraging sign. According to published news articles and statements from the new State Department of Transportation, there are no plans to cut or reduce commuter boat ferry service. This is great news for the thousands of local residents who rely upon the service to commute to and from work or school, however local legislators will remain vigilant against any future reductions in service.

The financial health of the MBTA as a whole is not as positive, according to an independent review of the Authority which was conducted over a two month period leading up to the Nov. 1 consolidation of transportation agencies and functions. The report states that the "forward funding" method, which was implemented in July 2000 in an attempt to make the T financially self-sufficient, did not live up to expectations and made "unrealistic" assumptions regarding costs, revenue and debt. The result has been an ongoing structural operating deficit at the agency, with increasing debt and expenses that cannot be addressed through raising fares or other sources of revenue. In fact, the report shows that even with $160 million in additional sales tax revenue each year, the MBTA faces a potential deficit of $550 million by fiscal 2014. Without that revenue source, the deficit nearly doubles to $1.19 billion.

The Forward Funding Finance Plan assumed that the operating costs would decrease 2 percent annually between fiscal 2001 and fiscal 2006. What actually happened, according to the report, was a 5 percent increase in operating costs each year over that time period, or $558 million above projections by fiscal 2008. A fiscal year runs from July 1 to June 30 of the following year. One of the reasons for the cost growth was energy. From fiscal 01 through fiscal 08, fuel and utility costs increased 122 percent, rather than the 22 percent that had been projected by the plan. The MBTA now spends over 10.4 percent of its operating budget on fuel and utility costs, and is the single largest consumer of electricity in the state. In addition, millions of dollars are spent each year to purchase gasoline, diesel and compressed natural gas for a fleet of 80 locomotives, 410 commuter rail cars, 448 subway train cars, 219 Green Line trolleys, and 1,040 buses. The report does not include figures for The Ride vehicles, the Ashmont-Mattapan line, or the commuter ferry boats.

Another key factor affecting the financial health of the MBTA concerns the 6,346 men and women who operate and maintain the service. Total payroll and benefits costs increased from $412.8 million to $548.9 million between fiscal 01 and fiscal 08, according to the report because of increased wages, health care and pension costs. These cost increases exceeded the Forward Funding projections by $113 million. The report included a comparison of top operator hourly wages among the 10 largest transit agencies in the country, showing Boston ($26.56) ranked fourth highest behind Chicago ($26.87), New York City ($26.92), and San Francisco ($29.19).

The practice of repeated restructuring of debt by the MBTA over the past 10 years can be compared to a person of limited or decreasing income applying for new credit cards and using those to pay off old credit cards and pay monthly living expenses.

Riders of the Greenbush line will note that while commuter rail costs have increased, those figures track closely to the finance plan's projections. The 14 commuter rail lines are still one of the largest MBTA expense categories, growing 43 percent from $172.5 million in fiscal 01 to $247 million per year in fiscal 08. The MBTA contracts this service out to an outside vendor, with annual cost increases governed by the contract. While the report does not break down commuter rail costs by individual lines, the total number of passengers carried daily is 143,000 on 491 trips. Annual ridership has doubled since 1989 to almost 40 million riders, due in large part to system expansions required by the Big Dig. Operating costs, ranging from 47 cents per passenger mile for the Needham line, to $9.25 per mile on the Fairmount line, rank among the lowest of the 20 commuter rail systems nationwide examined by the report.

The Legislature this year took steps to reign in some of these costs, especially pensions, by passing a Transportation Reform bill, which was signed into law by Governor Patrick. The law creates new pension rules for new MBTA workers, eliminates the "23 and out rule," and puts existing and future workers under the auspices of the Group Insurance Commission, which will lower healthcare costs and create a more efficient structure. In addition, new MBTA employees will now have to serve at least 25 years and attain the age of 55 to qualify for retirement benefits, and they will have to choose between receiving either a pension or disability payments if they are on disability.

The report describes a disturbing trend where debt payments and the deferral of debt payments, lower revenues and increasing costs intersect with deferred maintenance and aging infrastructure. Some of the recommendations made in the report include:

- Properly prioritize safety issues to ensure that those projects that need to be acted upon immediately to prevent danger to life or limb are addressed as soon as possible,
- Make expenses transparent to improve public accountability through better control and oversight;
- Reexamine existing debt issues and stop issuing new debt until the issues are addressed;
- Slow expansion of services until the financial condition stabilizes; and
- Improve public safety and service before even considering raising fares.

The practice of repeated restructuring of debt by the MBTA over the past 10 years can be compared to a person of limited or decreasing income applying for new credit cards and using those to pay off old credit cards and pay monthly living expenses. In either case, the amount of income required to pay off debt continues to rise with no end in sight. The independent review shows that the added debt accumulated by the T has prevented necessary maintenance from being performed, and threatens existing service and public safety. With new transportation leadership comes a new opportunity to restructure the way in which the MBTA is operated and administered. The old methods of solving these issues have been ineffective; new and fresh ideas are necessary to restore the MBTA's financial stability, ensure public service and safety, and address the backlog of deferred maintenance. I believe that the new law that went into effect Nov. 1 is an essential first step in cutting costs and improving service.

Legislators and other officials are still reviewing the contents of the report, and considerable debate will take place to determine how or whether any of the above recommendations might be implemented. If you would like to view the entire report online, visit http://www.mbtareview.com. As always, I would like your input. Beacon Hill Roll Call
November 16-20, 2009
Copyright (c) 2009 Beacon Hill Roll Call. All Rights Reserved.
By Bob Katzen

THE HOUSE AND SENATE. Beacon Hill Roll Call records local representatives and senators' votes on five roll calls from the week of November 16-20.

$18.8 MILLION FOR OPERATION OF LEGISLATURE (H 4348)

House 125-31, Senate 31-6, overrode Gov. Deval Patrick's veto of $18.8 million in so-called "prior appropriations continued" (PAC) funding for the operation of the Legislature. The $18.8 million is money that was given to the Legislature in prior years but was not spent. It is carried over year after year as an extra fund from which the Legislature can spend for its operations. The $18.8 million is in addition to the $53 million in the regular budget that was given to the Legislature to run its operations this year.

Override supporters said that it is important for the Legislature to have this money available to operate smoothly and to have on hand for future needs or emergencies. They argued that the Legislature has cut its budget by millions through layoffs and furloughs. They noted that this PAC account recently had some $30 million in it but the Legislature gave $12 million of if it back to the General Fund.

Opponents of the override said that it is outrageous that the Legislature has an $18.8 million slush fund that has been carried over because it was not spent in past years. They argued that in light of the budget deficit and cutbacks in many human service programs and local aid, the Legislature should give the $18.8 million back to the General Fund. They noted that the Legislature can easily operate on the other $53 million in funding it received in this year's budget. (A "Yes" vote is for giving the Legislature the $18.8 million. A "No" vote is against giving it the $18.8 million).

INMATE FEE (H 4348)

House 41-111, rejected an amendment requiring prison inmates, who are not indigent, to pay the state up to $5 per day, based on a sliding scale, to defray the cost of incarceration.

Amendment supporters said that it is time that these criminals share a small portion of the financial burden of room and board. They noted there are a lot of prisoners who have some money and argued that the proposal would raise millions of dollars in much needed revenue.

Some amendment opponents said that the proposal is misguided and mean-spirited and argued that the revenue from this program would amount to less than the cost of administering it. Others said that the House should vote against this idea and wait until a major bill overhauling the prison system comes up for debate next year. (A "Yes" vote is for the amendment requiring prisoners to pay $5 per day. A "No" vote is against requiring the payment).

The next three roll calls are on successful attempts by the Democratic leadership to essentially kill Republican proposals to reduce the sales tax from 6.25 percent to five percent; eliminate the new 6.25 percent tax on alcohol at package stores and implement a one percent across the board pay cut for all full-time state workers.

The Democrats were successful at this by proposing amendments that delay the bills from taking effect until the Department of Revenue has furnished a "study of their impact on the state's economy and the revenue cost to the commonwealth including, but not limited to, a distributional analysis showing the impact on taxpayers of varying income levels, the current practice of other states, any anticipated change in employment, and ancillary economic activity to the House and Senate Committee on Ways and Means committees and until legislation has been filed and passed."

Some supporters of these studies say that they are open to the tax cuts and pay cuts and simply want to research their possible impact. Others acknowledge that they simply oppose the tax cuts and pay cuts and use the delaying amendment as a way to kill the GOP proposals.

Opponents of these studies said that this sneaky maneuver is a blatant, age-old tactic by Democrats to kill tax cuts by studying them "to death" and avoiding an up or down vote on the tax cuts themselves. They note that none of these alleged studies are actually done and the tax cut is defeated without representatives having to take a direct vote on it.

INDEFINITELY DELAY CUTTING SALES TAX FROM 6.25 PERCENT TO FIVE PERCENT (H 4348)

House 103-51, approved a Democratic-sponsored amendment indefinitely delaying a proposal to reduce the state's sales tax from 6.25 percent to five percent. The amendment prohibits the tax reduction from taking effect until the Department of Revenue studies the impact of the cuts and a new bill is filed to reduce the tax.

Some supporters of the study said that the state cannot afford the loss of revenue and predicted that this tax cut would result in reductions to local aid, education, health care and human service programs. Others argued that they were open to a tax cut but not without first studying its impact.

Opponents of the study said that this increased sales tax is hurting consumers and retail operations, especially those on the state's borders. They argued that you can't your tax your way out of a recession and urged the state to live within its means.

The roll call vote is on the amendment to study the tax cuts. (A "Yes" vote is for studying the tax cuts. A "No" vote is against the study).

INDEFINITELY DELAY ELIMINATING THE NEW 6.25 PERCENT SALES TAX ON LIQUOR (H 4348)

House 99-54, approved a Democratic-sponsored amendment indefinitely delaying a proposal to eliminate the recently-approved new 6.25 percent sales tax on alcohol. The amendment prohibits the tax cut from taking effect until the Department of Revenue studies the impact of the cut and a new bill is filed to eliminate the tax. The tax was approved and signed into law in July and imposes the tax on liquor, wine and beer purchased at package stores.

Some supporters of the study said that the state cannot afford this revenue loss that would lead to cuts in important programs. Others argued that they would be amenable to eliminating the tax but wanted to first study its impact.

Opponents said that this 6.25 percent sales tax is an unnecessary one on a product that is already heavily taxed. They argued that the tax is hurting small mom and pop stores and stores in cities and towns on the border of other states with a smaller tax.

The roll call vote is on the amendment to study the tax cut. (A "Yes" vote is for studying the tax cut. A "No" vote is against the study).

INDEFINITELY DELAY CUTTING THE SALARIES OF STATE WORKERS BY ONE PERCENT (H 4348)

House 137-17, approved a Democratic-sponsored amendment indefinitely delaying a proposal to cut the salary of all full time state workers, including legislators, by one percent. The amendment prohibits the tax reduction from taking effect until the Department of Revenue studies the impact of the cuts and a new bill is filed to impose the one percent reduction.

Supporters of the study said that that it would be irresponsible to vote for this pay cut without knowing the cost. They argued that the Legislature is discussing furloughs and other ways to close the budget gap and noted that an across the board pay cut might be unconstitutional.

Opponents of the study said that this would save millions of dollars and send a message to people that the Legislature is serious about trying to close the budget deficit. They noted that a one percent cut is nothing compared to the thousands of people who have lost their jobs and their homes.

The roll call vote is on the amendment to study the pay cut. (A "Yes" vote is for studying the pay cut. A "No" vote is against the study).

EDUCATION CHANGES INCLUDING LIFTING CHARTER SCHOOL CAP (S 2201)

Senate 28-11, approved and sent to the House a lengthy and complicated bill making changes to the state's education system including implementing a mechanism designed to improve underperforming schools. The measure also abolishes the current cap on the number of Horace Mann (48) and charter schools (72) allowed in the state and eliminates the cap on the statewide population that can be enrolled in a charter school. Another key provision includes creation of Innovation Schools that are district schools with increased autonomy and flexibility.

Supporters said that this long overdue bill would make major reforms to a system that has not had a major overhaul for many years. They said that it would help thousands of students in districts across the state. They noted that this legislation must be signed into law soon in order for the state to be eligible for its portion of up to $250 million in federal education grants.

Some opponents said that the bill is just another temporary Band-Aid solution to an ever growing list of problems with the state's school system. Others said that the bill is irresponsibly being rushed through the Senate in order to meet a deadline for the state to be in compliance with federal regulations and be eligible for millions in federal grants.

REQUIRE VOTER APPROVAL OF CHARTER SCHOOL INCREASE (S 2210)

Senate 22-16, approved an amendment that would allow an increase in the number of charter schools only if the voters in that district approve the increase on a ballot referendum at the polls.

Amendment supporters said that voters should have the final say on whether there are more charter schools in their district.

Amendment opponents said that the amendment would essentially kill charter school expansion.

(A "Yes" vote is for the amendment requiring voter approval. A "No" vote is against the amendment).

RECONSIDER VOTE THAT REQUIRED VOTER APPROVAL OF CHARTER SCHOOL INCREASE (S 2210)

Senate 27-12, reconsidered its earlier approval of the amendment that would allow an increase in the number of charter schools only if the voters in that district approve the increase on a ballot referendum at the polls.

Following reconsideration, the sponsor of the amendment withdrew it and the amendment was no longer part of the bill.

Several senators switched their votes when they originally voted in favor of the amendment but later voted to reconsider its approval. That reconsideration led to the death of the amendment when the sponsor withdrew it.

(A "Yes" vote is for reconsideration of the approval of the amendment. A "No" vote is against reconsideration and favors the amendment).

CHANGE CORI AND SENTENCING LAWS (S 2210)

Senate 26-12, approved and sent to the House a bill making changes in the state's Criminal Offender Record Information (CORI) and mandatory sentencing laws.

The measure allows certain entities access to CORI information on felony convictions for ten years after the offender's release from jail and on misdemeanor charges for five years. Currently, records are sealed after 15 years for felonies and ten years on misdemeanors. All convictions for sex offenses, murder and manslaughter would be available for life. Another provision would prohibit employers from asking on initial job applications whether an applicant has been arrested or convicted.

The measure allows non-violent offenders sentenced to mandatory minimum sentences for drug related crimes to be eligible for parole upon serving two-thirds of the minimum portion of their sentence in a state prison or one-half of their sentences in a house of corrections. It also permits persons sentenced to mandatory minimum sentences for drug related crimes to get a job and to participate in education, training and employment programs.

Supporters said that the bill would finally reform the CORI system and insert more flexibility in the sentences of non-violent drug offenders.

Some opponents said that the bill should be divided into two bills - one dealing with CORI and the other dealing with sentencing. Others said that the bill is too complicated to be rushed through the Senate. Some noted that 11 district attorneys sent a letter to senators pointing out major flaws in the proposal.

Emily Browder has been a Music Together teacher for the Conservatory since early this year.

New faculty members have passion for music education

CONSERVATORY NOTES

ELAINE SORRENTINO

How fortunate I am to work and teach in a performing arts environment here at South Shore Conservatory! Every day I work with interesting and talented artists whose passion for music education is both contagious and inspiring. Although each musician/educator is unique, their love for the arts is what binds them together and keeps them growing artistically. Let me tell you about two extraordinary voice teachers we've recently hired.

Emily Browder has been a Music Together teacher for the Conservatory since early this year. She has been the director of Mystic Valley Music Together since 2002. A soloist in Boston area opera companies, Emily teaches voice at the New School of Music, and is the music coach for Tunefoolery, an ensemble of musicians with mental illness. It's not surprising that Emily is pursuing certification in music therapy at Anna Maria College in Paxton.

She earned her MM in vocal performance at the Longy School of Music, and was recently certified in Voice Movement Therapy. As if she isn't busy enough, she is in the process of developing a program called Voice Wellness, which helps students foster health and well-being through singing. I admire her energy, her drive and her charisma.

Recently asked what brought her to the Conservatory, Emily said, "Its faculty is skilled and passionate and truly values the life-enhancing benefits of making music. It is very exciting to see the school develop their newest programs, such as the music therapy and young singers departments."

Tenor Randy McGee's performing credits include the Bach Cantata Series with internationally-acclaimed Emmanuel Music, the concert series of Boston Baroque, the Handel and Haydn Society, the Cantata Singers, the New York-based Waverly Consort and the Boston Early Music Festival. Former music director at Wellesley Hills Unitarian Universalist Society, Randy completed his doctor of arts in vocal performance in 1996 from the University of Northern Colorado, and teaches voice at Buckingham, Browne and Nichols School.

Randy McGee loves one-on-one voice teaching, guiding students to understand their particular voice, shaping, inspiring, and finally, preparing the student for a public performance.

He loves one-on-one voice teaching, guiding students to understand their particular voice, shaping, inspiring, and finally, preparing the student for a public performance. "It is especially gratifying when the student transcends our experience and makes the performance something it never quite was in the studio," he said.

It's not only his music interests that set him aside from other faculty members. He has very diverse outside interests: design, architecture, visual and culinary art. "I specialize in using recycled materials," said Randy. "I enjoy food science as well tending to cook foods that have a scientific component. I am a chocolatier and will likely explore this passion further as I grow older."

Ah, let me be his taste tester!

Elaine Sorrentino is the communications director for South Shore Conservatory. She is also one of the Conservatory's preschool teachers.

GIMME SHELTER

Billy Jean loves to have someone pet and brush her and she does get plenty of attention from the volunteers at the shelter. However, we think she would prefer a home of her own.

Billy Jean loves being brushed

Billy Jean is a rather large – 22 pound – female black lovable cat. She loves to have someone pet and brush her and she does get plenty of attention from the volunteers at the shelter. We think she would prefer a home of her own. She's healthy and is not a big eater. We're pretty sure it's her metabolism. Come down and visit her and see if she's the right pet for you. She's great with kittens and kids.

There are still a few openings on the Friday, Dec. 11, spay day so give us a call and we'll get right back to you. It's about the best gift you can bestow on your cat.

Hull Seaside Animal Rescue has open hours from 2 to 3 p.m., on Saturdays, and 6:30 to 7:30 p.m., on Sundays. The shelter is at 50 L St., Hull. Mailing address is P.O. Box 787, Hull, MA 02045. Telephone number: 877-378-1195. Website is hsar.org. Become a fan on Facebook, and check out some videos.

Happy Thanksgiving to all; yes, the shelter cats will have a turkey dinner donated by our dedicated volunteers.

Elementary schools roll out new report cards

Shift to a 'standards-based assessment'

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

"We want to communicate with parents what their child knows and is able to do in a qualitative sense."
— Jennifer deChiara, Deer Hill Principal

Mastering the ABCs is an essential building block to all other learning. And for years now, those same ABCs (and D and F) have also been used to report to parents how their child is doing in school.

Now, after over a year of study and development, the Osgood and Deer Hill schools are replacing that traditional grading system with a more comprehensive, standards-based assessment system.

On Dec. 11 parents of students in kindergarten through fifth grade will receive the first new progress report under the new assessment system.

Over a year ago school administration, teachers and staff began meeting to talk about the possibility of a new assessment system.

"We came to the conclusion we need a progress report to reflect our standards-based curriculum," said Deer Hill Principal Jennifer deChiara. A committee was formed to reflect all levels of elementary education – the school principals, a teacher from each grade level, special education representatives, the math and reading specialists, and curriculum coordinator.

DeChiara said a standards based assessment system is more the norm at the elementary level.

"We want to communicate with parents what their child knows and is able to do in a qualitative sense," deChiara said.

The important difference between the new progress reports is they evaluate a student in relation to their mastery of the curriculum and the clearly defined standards of the curriculum. In a traditional grade reporting system it is more of a measurement of how well the student is performing compared to other students.

The purpose of the change is three-fold. First, the new progress report provides feedback to parents regarding the progress their children are making toward learning standards at their grade level. Second, the progress report provides information about a student's level of understanding or how competent they are in the learning standards. And last, it allows parents and students to understand more clearly what is expected of students and how to help them be successful in a rigorous program of studies.

For each standard, instead of grades (A, B, C etc.) parents will be informed how well the student is progressing toward the achievement of the learning standards. The standards identify what a student should know and be able to do for each subject area and grade level. Each student will be given a 1 (approaches grade level standard), 2 (meets grade level standard) or 3 (exceeds grade level standard) for each skill.

There is also a possibility for students to receive a 1+, or a 2+, which means they exceed some, but not all performance level indicators.

Despite the new progress reports not much has changed in the day-to-day learning of the classroom.

"This new progress reports reflects the type of teaching and learning going on in the classroom," said Osgood Principal Janet Sheehan, explaining it incorporates 21st century skills, like thinking and reasoning, in addition to the more traditional areas of work habits and social skills.

DeChiara said in the traditional grading system there was no way for teachers to recognize a student's ability to integrate skill across the curriculum. Before a grade reflected whether or not a third-grade student knew their multiplication tables, in the standards based assessment system it is about students being able to use those skills in real-world applications. Students need to demonstrate an understanding of the materials, not just an ability to memorize it.

Both Sheehan and deChiara said their standards-based progress report is one step ahead of other school districts because of the way it reflects the integration of the various curriculum standards.

Evidence of each students' progress will be collected in all the traditional ways of portfolios, quizzes, observation, multiple choice tests and writing samples.

"Teachers will still have the same in-depth knowledge of their student they have always had," deChiara said. "(Over the last few years,) we've worked on the curriculum, we've worked on our instructional practices and now we needed a reporting tool to reflect those improvements."

The shift in grading allows teachers to continue their focus on differentiated instruction and planning opportunities for students to show their skills, Sheehan said.

At the elementary level, students are given progress reports three times a year – in December, March and June.

The Osgood and Deer Hill schools have scheduled a joint parent meeting on Thursday, Dec. 17 after progress reports are out to review the changes in detail and answer any questions.

New standards mean something different for each grade level

Below is an example of a new standard in English language arts for writing, which is the same across all grades, and how that standard means at each grade level (performance indicators).

Standard: Engages in the writing process to communicate with an intended audience for a variety of purposes.

Grade level performance indicators:

- K = Draw pictures and/or write letters or phonetically spelled words in order to give information about a subject of interest, including a title and the author's name.
- 1 = Write or dictate letters, directions, or short accounts based on personal knowledge or experiences that follow a logical order and give some details.
- 2 = Write brief explanations of literary or informational text passages, using facts from the text as support.
- 3 = Write sets of directions, multiple directions or steps of a process, using illustrations or diagrams as needed for clarity.
- 4 = Write multi-paragraph sequential or compare/contrast accounts based on personal knowledge or research that include a clear focus and sufficient detail and description to support the ideas.
- 5 = Write compositions of varying length and in a variety of forms.

Wind turbine hearing cancelled

The public hearing will be re-scheduled at a time to be determined. The public hearing will likely need to be re-advertised, which requires at least two weeks lead time.

The scheduled public hearing for discuss the Cohasset Heights wind turbine project was cancelled late Tuesday afternoon, just hours before its advertised and posted hearing.

According to an e-mail send by Planning Board administrator Jo-Ann Pilczak, the Planning Board and the applicant are still awaiting receipt of the official, endorsed order of remand from Land Court for the CCI-Energy remand public hearing. Without the official order, the public hearing could not be opened.

The public hearing will be re-scheduled at a time to be determined. The public hearing will likely need to be re-advertised, which requires at least two weeks lead time.

The project application, put forth by a private developer, Plymouth-based CCI-Energy, proposes the installation of two AAER 1.65-megawatt sized wind turbines sited off Route 3A on the hill behind Graham Waste Services and Hingham Lumber.

The public hearing process for the CCI-Energy's special permit application, the first under the town's wind energy conversion bylaw, was contentious, controversial and drawn out. The public hearing process began for the project in early September 2008 and concluded in early May. In between, there were hours of developer and public comment entered into the record as well as hundreds of pages of data and public comment submitted.

In early May, the Planning Board voted 3 to 1 to approve the application. However, the vote was effectively a denial of the application because under state statutes, the application had to be approved by four members of the five-member board. (Planning Board member Jean Healey took office after the public hearing began and could not vote on the project.)

Planning Board vice chairman Stuart Ivimey was the sole opposing vote. The Planning Board's special permit decision was filed with the Town Clerk on July 9 and CCI-Energy filed its appeal of the decision to Land Court on July 20.

If the court orders the remand, the public hearing is intended for a "limited purpose," specifically the public hearing is on those issues related to the denial.

Update on police chief search

The opening at the top of the Cohasset Police force attracted eighty candidates from all sorts of backgrounds and experiences.

Town Manager Bill Griffin reported this week he has nine candidates. Interviews are underway.

Under the Town Manager Act, Town Manager Griffin is responsible for the appointment of the Police Chief. The Board of Selectmen has the power to "veto" the appointment within 15 days of its announcement.

Griffin previously said the candidates were a mix of internal candidates, current police chiefs and high-ranking officers in other municipalities.

A candidate evaluation team has been assembled to help Griffin narrow the field. Four residents, Melissa Browne, Marty Corry, Peter Laugelle and Rob Spofford, have signed on to help with the interviews.

Four residents, Melissa Browne, Marty Corry, Peter Laugelle and Rob Spofford, have signed on to help with the interviews.

In late September Police Chief James Hussey, who held the post for the past five years, resigned to return to the Boston Police Department where he started his career. Brian Noonan, who served as Cohasset's police chief from 1993 to 2002, is serving as interim police chief.

Following the first round of interviews, Griffin hopes there is consensus among the evaluation team members on a core group of finalists to come back for a second, more detailed interview. The second interviews will be open to the public.

If one or two finalists clearly emerge following the second interview, there will be reference checks. When Griffin determines a preferred candidate, a background check will be done.

In the job description, Griffin placed strong emphasis on "teambuilding and community outreach," what he called the "cornerstone" of Hussey's tenure.

A salary range of $100,000 to $120,000 was established for the position after Griffin surveyed the South Shore region for police chief's salaries.

Two victims of drunken drivers, Courtney Palek of Hingham, right, who along with her three children, was hit by a drunk driver while driving on Summer Street in Hingham this past February and Jill O'Bryan of Rockland who was severely injured when hit by a drunk driver on June 8, 2005. Palek and O'Bryan support the Senate bill that would require interlock devices for first-time offenders.

State Sen. Robert Hedlund, right, talks to the media, law enforcement officials and representatives from Smart Start and MADD about the bill that would require interlock devices for first-time offenders. Hedlund's office says 533 Massachusetts drivers have been required to use the devices. Of those, only two have reoffended. Not shown is state Rep. Garrett Bradley, a supporter of the bill.

Keeping drunk drivers off the road

Bill would install interlock devices for first-time offenders

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

Hingham's Courtney Palek does not want any other parents to have to rely on a miracle to avoid serious injury of their children.

Jill O'Bryan of Rockland, now just 25, does not want another innocent person to have to undergo multiple surgeries like she has.

Both women were unsuspecting victims of drunk drivers and continue to share their experiences in hopes of preventing future tragedies.

They were on hand Monday evening at the Hingham Police Station for a demonstration of an interlock safety device that can be installed in vehicles to prevent drunk drivers from starting their cars.

Also in attendance were state Sen. Bob Hedlund, who has filed a bill on behalf of MADD, that would make the devices mandatory for first-time offenders; state Rep. Garrett Bradley, a supporter of the bill; Plymouth Country District Attorney Tim Cruz: Hingham Police Chief Taylor Mills, Judge Patrick Hurley, and other officials.

David DeIuliis of MADD, who said that 12 other states have passed similar legislation, said the purpose of the bill is to reduce drunk-driving fatalities and reduce recidivism.

DeIuliis explained that Melanie's Law – the Massachusetts law that strengthens penalties for repeat offenders – does not address first time offenders. This bill would change that.

"Drunk driving is 100 percent preventable," he said. "MADD has been around for 30 years and everyone should know better, quite frankly."

"Every repeat offender was once a first-time offender," he said.

Cruz said the bill is a step in the right direction because it provides a tool to keep people safe.

"That is what it is all about – how to prevent a tragedy," he said.

Smart Start Inc., which Hedlund said is one of four companies authorized to install the devices in Massachusetts, demonstrated the device and fielded questions at Hingham Police Headquarters.

> "Every repeat offender was once a first-time offender."
> — David DeIuliis, MADD

The interlock device prevents the car from starting if it detects alcohol after the driver blows into the device, which also requires "rolling tests" after the car starts. According to Hedlund, 533 drivers in Massachusetts have been required to use the devices, which cost $91 a month and must be paid for by the offender. There are criminal penalties for tampering with the device or trying to skirt its use by having a passenger use it. There were 16,274 people arrested for drunk driving in Massachusetts in 2008.

Hingham Sergeant Steven Dearth, who organized Monday's demonstration, said the interlock devices work because they prevent the convicted drunk driver from being able to start the car if he or she has been drinking.

"It takes the guesswork out of the hands of the convicted offender," he said.

Dearth explained that the Registry of Motor Vehicles lists any restrictions on a license with a code. For example, if a driver were required to wear corrective lenses he or she would have code "B" on his or her license under "restrictions." For drivers required to have an ignition interlock device, they would have the code "Z" as a restriction. This tells the officer of the requirement. The "Z" was chose to symbolize that Massachusetts has zero tolerance for drunk drivers, Dearth said.

Palek, who, with her three children in her car, was hit head-on on Summer Street in Hingham last February, described the bill as a "parents' bill."

"But we should not have to rely on miracles to keep our kids safe," she said.

Palek and her children were on their way home that day when the alleged, repeat drunk driver was traveling at a speed double the posted 35 mph. He lost control of his vehicle, crossed the center dividing lines and smashed into the Paleks. The violent impact spun her van around and it landed on the opposite side of the road on the sidewalk. The other vehicle, with the alleged repeat drunk driver behind the wheel, spun around and flipped onto its roof. Miraculously – Palek and her children, who were all properly restrained in child safety seats, were not injured.

O'Bryan spent months in a wheelchair following being hit by a drunk driver in Weymouth in 2005 when she was 20. She has endured 26 surgeries and has had a complete knee replacement. She said it has been a "long five years" for her.

"It is all about saving lives," O'Bryan said Monday about the interlock devices for first-time offenders. "I want to get the message out there – interlock devices can save lives."

Cohasset Lt. William Quigley said he would support Sen. Hedlund's bill (S1925) to require convicted first-time offenders to have an Interlock Device for six months.

"It is another tool in our toolbox to help combat drunk driving," Quigley said.

PHOTOS/LAURA SINCLAIR

A close-up of the Interlock device made by Smart Start. The device is wired to the vehicle's ignition system and requires the driver to take and pass a test that screens for breath alcohol.

About Ignition Interlock Devices

- An Ignition Interlock Device is a handheld, breath-alcohol monitoring device that is electronically connected to a vehicle's ignition.
- Before starting the vehicle, the device requires the driver to take and pass a breath test.
- In Massachusetts, if you have two or more drunk driving offenses and are eligible for a hardship license or for license reinstatement, you must have an Ignition Interlock Device installed on any vehicle you own, lease or operate.
- For a hardship license, the device must be used for the entire life of the hardship and at least two additional years after full reinstatement. For a full license reinstatement, the device must be used for at least two years.
- The new senate bill would expand the program to first-time offenders by requiring an interlock device for six months.

Skippers set for Tuesday playoff game

By William Wassersug
WWASSERS@CNC.COM

By the time you read this, Thanksgiving Day festivities will be over, and most schools will be looking toward the start of the winter sports season.

Not so for the Cohasset football team.

As you probably know, the Skippers are headed to the playoffs, where they'll face the Tri-Valley League champion in the first round of the Division IIIA Eastern Mass. playoffs.

That will mean a tough, tough test for the Skippers.

Cohasset will be facing either Westwood or Holliston, or possibly Heading into their Thanksgiving Day battle, Holliston and Westwood looked like the two teams to beat in the Tri-Valley League, although Medway could also sneak in.

Football

Here's what the scenario was on Wednesday.

With Westwood (9-1) losing to Medway a few weeks ago, Holliston (10-0) just needed to beat the Wolverines Thursday to advance to the playoffs after years of near-misses.

Not coincidentally, the Panthers' recent attempts at postseason play have been thwarted by none other than the Westwood Wolverines. Westwood is 24-11-1 in the Thanksgiving series, including a 24-18 win last year, 28-14 the year before and 20-6 in 2006.

with an earlier loss to Bellingham that season, kept the Panthers from playing in December. In 2004, Westwood's 7-0 win, and the subsequent tiebreaker, put Westwood in the playoffs instead of Holliston, and the Wolverines went on to win the Division 3 Super Bowl 32-26 over Archbishop Williams.

The Panthers are ready for it to be their year, and after going 10-0 in the Tri-Valley League, all they have to do is get their first Thanksgiving win over Westwood in four years to take the crown outright.

If Holliston were to lose, Medway (9-1) would have a chance, squaring off in a three-way tiebreaker with Holliston and Westwood. The first tiebreaker will eliminate the team that has allowed the most first-half points in games among the teams, and the title will then go to whichever team won the head-to-head matchup among the final two.

Westwood would win the playoff spot if it beat Holliston and didn't trail by 13 or more in the first half.

Taking a look at the three teams shows one thing.

They all are very, very good teams.

Should Holliston win, they'll be 11-0, and the wins have come in dominating fashion.

Their closest game was their 31-28 win over Medway, which was Medway's only loss.

They beat Millis 52-23 and scored 50 against Hopkinton in a 50-14.

They've scored 40 or more three more times and were only held under 25 points once, in an opening day 24-20 win over Wayland.

The 50-14 win was the team's biggest margin of victory.

Holliston is led by quarterback Sean Mayo, who has a strong, accurate arm.

He's thrown for 1,592 yards with 17 touchdowns and four interceptions, completing 96 of 164 passes.

The Panthers also rely on quick-strike tailback Jake Frechette, who, like Cohasset's Dana Valentine, has the ability to bring it home at any time.

Frechette has 1,054 rushing yards and 13 touchdowns. He also has 252 yards receiving and two touchdowns.

Holliston averages 350 yards of offense a game.

Wide receivers Dan Barone and Tommy Donovan are also weapons.

Of course all that is relative if Westwood wins.

The Wolverines bring their own set of problems, mainly a ridiculously stingy defense.

Westwood has allowed eight points or less in eight of 10 games. They have five shutouts and have the No. 2 scoring defense in Eastern Mass.

Westwood's biggest win was a 46-0 smackdown against Ashland. Ashland may be an 0-10 team, but it was their biggest margin of loss all season.

Westwood relies on Sean Amaru for the bulk of their offense. Amaru has run for 1,425 yards and has scored 24 touchdowns, including two receiving and a fumble return.

As for Medway, they also bring lots of defense.

Medway has four shutouts and has only allowed more than 14 points once, in their loss to Holliston.

Medway gave up 14 twice and has four shutouts.

Their biggest win was a 36-0 win over Bellingham.

Medway plays a 5-5 Millis team on Thanksgiving.

That doesn't mean the Skippers are outgunned.

Not a chance.

This year's squad has a powerful defense, strong receivers (Brendan Doonan, Jack Carrier to name a few), a more-than capable quarterback (Jeff Cavanaro), and of course, Dana Valentine, who can break a big one any time he touches the ball.

Cavanaro has thrown for 684 yards and nine touchdowns.

Valentine has run for 1,546 yards and 14 touchdowns this season.

The Skippers have been tested and shown they can win the close ones, demonstrated by their 14-6 win over Mashpee, and have risen above the best of the rest, including Division 2 Scituate, who were just one play away from winning the Patriot League Keenan Division title.

The Sailors lost 15-13 in overtime to last year's Div. 2 Super Bowl champion Duxbury in what was essentially the title game.

It may seem like it's been forever since Cohasset was in a playoff, but they have been there not too long ago.

In 2004, The Skippers faced Westwood in a 31-8 loss.

Westwood went on to win the Super Bowl with a 32-26 win over Archbishop Williams.

In 2001, Cohasset lost to eventual champ,Tyngsboro, 31-7, and lost 20-7 to Westwood in 2003.

For the past four years, Abington has been the South Shore league representative in the playoffs.

They have had some success, winning the Super Bowl in 2005, when they beat Hopkinton 12-0 in the playoff before edging Archbishop Williams 21-20 in the title game.

A Cohasset playoff victory on Tuesday would send the Skippers to the Super Bowl at Gillette Stadium on Dec. 5 against the winner of the Catholic Central Large vs. the Cape Ann Small playoff game.

That matchup has yet to be determined.

The Rangers in the Classics Div. took a big step towards clinching first-place in their division as Jim O'Toole of Rockland, Daron Jacobs of Pembroke and Jeff Uva had a goal each as they hung on for a 3-2 win over the second-place Red Wings.

Pat Burke and Chuck Morrison of Marshfield scored the Red Wings goals as they trial the Rangers by eight points.

Marshfield's Chris Harrington scored his first two goals of the season and Mike Bartlett of Pembroke also scored two goals in the Maple Leafs'

8-3 Classics Div. win over the Canadiens. Jeff Gauthier, Dave Salvaggio, Marshfield's Dave Denton and Jim Smith of Pembroke were the other goal scorers for the Leafs, who trailed 2-0 after the first five minutes of the game.

Mike Martin and Mike Fahie both of Pembroke had a goal and an assist and John Hernon of Marshfield scored a goal for the Canadiens.

Jim Toner of Hanover and Jim Reilly scored two goals each, Guy Sylvester of Scituate and Jim Martin also of Hanover had one goal apiece in the Bruins 6-3 Classics Div. win over the Black Hawks.

In the Legends Div., Ray Degaust scored two goals, Joe Cronin, James Ward of Norwell and Mike Rober also of Norwell added one each in the final 12 minutes as the Toros rallied from a 4-0 deficit for a 5-5 tie with the Stingers.

Paul McPherson and Chuck Gosselin both had two goals and John Scag had one for the Stingers.

Mike Simon scored two goals in the span of a minute as the Crusaders rallied for a 4-3 come from behind win over the Whalers in the Legends.

Div. Cohasset's Ed Culhane and Hanover's Steve O'Mara added a goal each for the Crusaders.

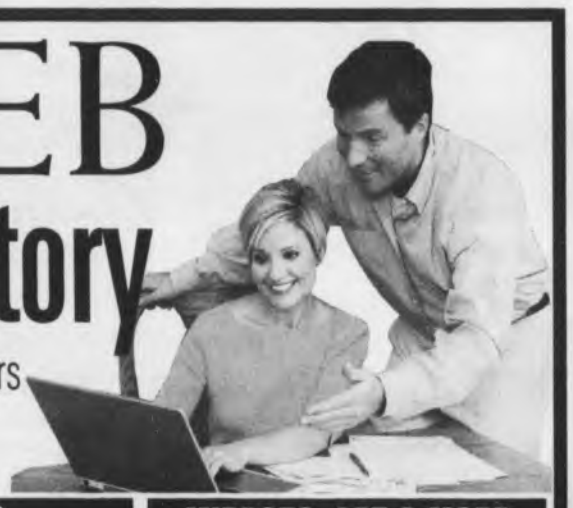
Red Sox Players sign autographs to support the Jimmy Fund

BOSTON – Boston Red Sox players and up-and-coming minor leaguers will sign autographs to benefit the Jimmy Fund at the fifth annual "New Stars for Young Stars" event. New Stars for Young Stars will be held on Saturday, Jan. 9, from 11:15 a.m. - 1:30 p.m. at Jillian's Boston.

The lineup includes Red Sox Outfielder Josh Reddick, Ryan Westmoreland ranked #4 by Sox Prospect , Red Sox 2009 "Minor League Player of the Year" Ryan Kalish, and Red Sox 2009 "Minor League Pitcher of the Year" Casey Kelly. Former Red Sox great and 2004 World Series Champion Trot Nixon will also be take part in the event.

Tickets go on sale, Dec. 1, at www.jimmyfund.org/new-stars. . Two types of tickets are available. An MVP ticket at $250 includes an official MLB jersey, plus one of the first 30 spots in line. Regular admission tickets are $150 each. All ticket holders can bring one guest, but only the ticket holder may receive autographs. A buffet lunch will be served and sports memorabilia will be on sale. In addition, there will be an opportunity drawing, silent auction and bowling to help strike out cancer.

New Stars for Young Stars is hosted by the Jimmy Fund Council of Greater Boston and has quickly become a popular event for Red Sox fans, already having raised nearly $100,000 since its inception in 2006.



Founded in 1948, the Jimmy Fund is an official charity of the Boston Red Sox. It supports the fight against cancer at Boston's Dana-Farber Cancer Institute, which is a leading cancer research and care center for adults and children, and a National Cancer Institute designated comprehensive cancer center.

For more information and to buy tickets go to www.jimmyfund.org/new-stars or call Amy Powers at 617-632-3613.

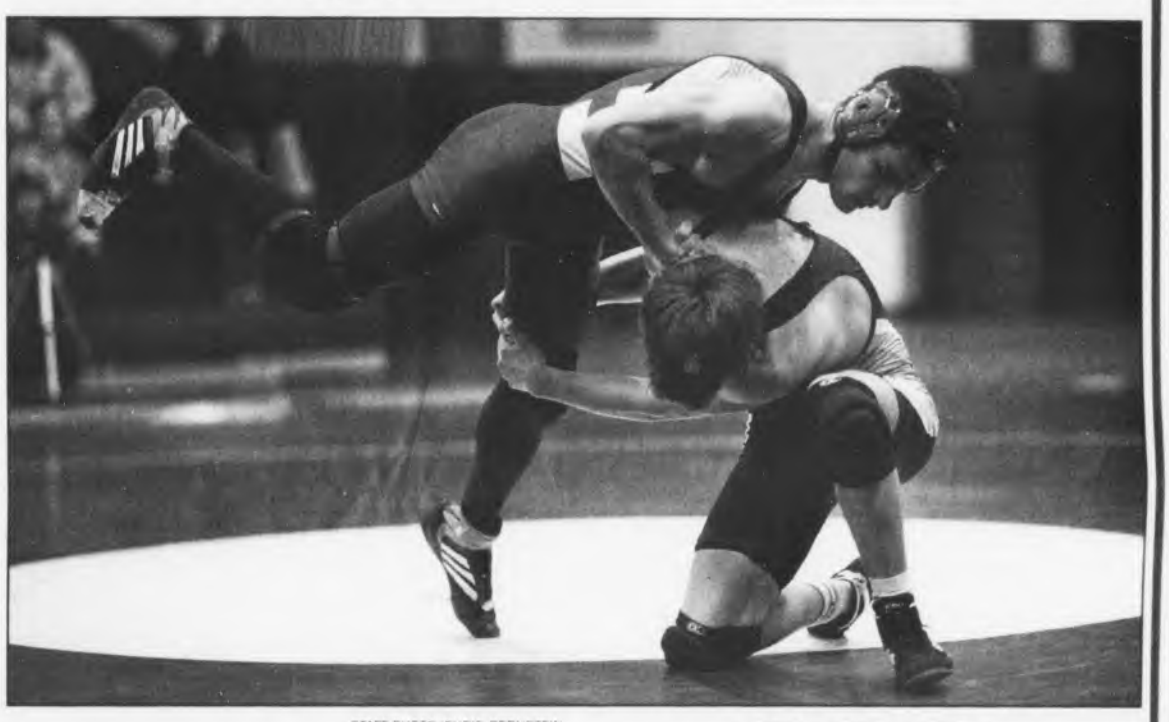
Cohasset Youth Lacrosse registration begins Nov. 19



Cohasset Youth Lacrosse will open its on-line registration for the Spring 2010 season Nov 19. To register go to our website www.cohassetlacrosse.com and click on the registration link.

Registrations will be accepted for both boys and girls at U15 (seventh and eighth grade), U13 (fifth and sixth grade) and U11 (third and fourth grade). We will also be accepting registrations for our first and second grade clinic. All youth players are welcome, regardless of experience.

Registration will continue until January 31. The program is committed to accepting every player who signs up during open registration. Once that sign-up period is completed the program will establish its ideal roster sizes and take late registrants on a first-come, first-served basis only until the rosters are filled. At that point a waiting list will be established, or players may be turned away.

Fees for grades 3-8 in 2010 are $150 per player, with family pricing of $100 for each additional family member. The fee for the first and second grade clinic is $75. Scholarships are available for families facing unusual circumstances or financial difficulty. Please check the appropriate box on the on-line form.

If you have any issues with on-line access, or registration related questions you may contact Joe Fitzgerald at fitzpj8@aol.com.

Thanksgiving: fun, food and time off

LIFE AT CHS

SEAN MACCARTHY

Thanksgiving is another reason why food is just simply amazing. We get two and a half days off because when Pilgrims came to America, they wanted to eat and share food with Native Americans. Once again, my loyal readers, food prevails as pretty much the greatest thing in life.

As I said, Thanksgiving week is awesome, not only because the food, but because of how short the school week is. It's a really great break for kids because these vacations really put a little extra something in everyone's step when they return the next week. Also, it's hard to count the half-day on Wednesday as a day of school because everyone is really just thinking about how badly the senior girls are going to destroy the junior girls in powder puff that afternoon as opposed to thinking about their schoolwork. That's right, the senior girls are coming and they are coming hard. I would say the juniors have a chance, but I know my fellow seniors to well to know that they will literally decimate the other team. I recommend Neosporin for all the turf burns.

Well since I just started out with Wednesday, the last school day of this week, I guess that means I'm going all Quenton Tarantino on you guys this week (That means I tell a story out of order and in a gory fashion). So on Tuesday, there was another Presidents' meeting. This meeting solidified the date of the blood drive, which will take place Tuesday, Dec. 8th. Everyone over 17 can do it without parental consent and 16 year olds can also take part in the blood drive as long as they have a permission slip signed by a parent or guardian. We have about 40 spots to fill so sign up quickly. Life should be appreciated so blood should be donated. I totally just came up with that.

On Monday…well…everyone was tired again. It was just you average day.

Back to Wednesday (I love this Quenton Tarantino format), the Spin sheet will be out. What's that? It's just like the Spinnaker, the student run newspaper, but it is just a shorter version. Think of it as the Spinnakers baby sister. Everyone should buy one because it basically reveals which seniors are going to take out which juniors in the powder puff game after school.

Thursday is Thanksgiving. A time for thanks, a time for feasting, and a time for football! Cohasset faces rival Hull at the Hull gut. Its probably going to be terrible weather but it is so worth going. Why? Because if Cohasset wins, they will be only the third team to go undefeated in Cohasset football history. Only the 1957 and 2004 teams did so. Besides, what better way to kick off watching Thanksgiving football on TV all day than to watch Thanksgiving football in person?

That's all I have for you this week. Short week — short article. Sorry! I'm not complaining, though. I wish you all a happy Thanksgiving!

Sean MacCarthy despises cranberry sauce. It just looks gross.

See what South Shore Voke has in store

Charles Homer, superintendent of the South Shore Regional Vocational Technical High School, has announced the annual open house of South Shore Regional, located at 476 Webster St. (Route 123 in Hanover) will take place Thursday, Dec. 10 from 6– 8:30 p.m. Snow date is Monday, Dec. 14, also from 6 – 8:30 p.m.

Homer reports that 14 technical programs will be staffed to explain their programs to future students and their parents. Homer said he hopes that not only eighth graders and their parents will attend but also sixth and seventh graders will come out to see what the four-year regional technical high school has to offer.

The South Shore District includes the towns of Abington, Cohasset, Hanover, Hanson, Norwell, Rockland, Scituate and Whitman.

South Shore Vo-Tech offers programs in auto body, automotive, carpentry, cosmetology, culinary arts, drafting, electrical, graphic arts, health careers, heating, ventilation and air conditioning, electronics, precision machine technology and welding metal fabrication.

The annual open house will also have technical and academic displays along with baking and pastry displays. For more information on the open house, call 781-871-4153.

HAPPENINGS

Jingle Bell Walk is today Nov. 27

The 15th Annual Jingle Bell Walk will be taking place this year on Friday, Nov. 27th.

Festivities begin at Cohasset Harbor at 2 p.m. when Santa, Mrs. Claus, Elves & friends arrive via fishing boat. They will then board a hayride wagon for a parade downtown, which ends at the South Shore Community Center on 3 North Main St.

All are welcome to join in the fun – there will be hot cocoa, coffee, juice, treats and delicious cookies baked by local Girl Scouts. Have a photo taken with Santa, enjoy a sing-a-long of holiday tunes, enjoy face-painting, and have a hayride around the Common! Tree-lighting will take place at dusk.

Please join the South Shore Community Center for this official kick-off to a wonderful Holiday Season!

Holly Day at Holly Hill Farm

Holly Hill Farm will sponsor Holly Day at the Farm from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m., on Saturday, Dec. 5. The fair will feature handmade goods from local artisans including Barefoot Children's Books, baby bonnets and caps by Holly Hess Design, jewelry by Sage, Beth Merry Earthenware, Andrew Rogers Seaglass Jewelry, jams and preserves from Sommers Bounty, toys and more. There will be Christmas greenery for sale, children's activities including storytelling and a barnyard walk.

Proceeds will benefit the education programs at the farm. For more information, visit the website at hollyhillfarm.org or call 781-383-6565. Holly Hill Farm is at 230 Jerusalem Road, Cohasset.

Hall of Fame Committee seeks members

The Cohasset High School Athletic Department is looking to start a Hall of Fame. Anyone potentially interested in being involved and/or possibly serving on the Hall of Fame Committee, contact athletic director Ron Ford at 781-383-6103 or rford@cohassetk12.org.

'Child Find' screenings

The Cohasset Public Schools, in accordance with Federal Law IDEA 2004 and Massachusetts Special Education Regulations 603 CMR 28.00, are in the process of conducting "Child Find." The school department is seeking children with suspected disabilities residing in Cohasset who may be in need of Special Education services.

The Cohasset Public Schools will evaluate students from age 3 through high school age who are unable to progress effectively in a regular education program due to a suspected disability in one of the following areas: developmental or intellectual delay, sensory, neurological, emotional, communication, physical, specific learning disability or health impairment. Cohasset Public Schools will also arrange for an evaluation of young people ages 16 21 who have not graduated from high school and who are not now attending school.

In addition, screenings for age 3 to 5-years olds are held the third Friday of each month at Osgood School. Call the Integrated Pre school Staff at 781-383-6117 for more information.

Cohasset provides all children with an opportunity to participate in the public school programs using a continuous and systematic process to identify students in need of special education. All programs and services are offered Without regard to color, race, sex, religion, national origin, sexual orientation or disability.

If you have a child who you suspect may have a disability or know a child with a disability who may be in need of special education services, call the Director of Student Services, Dr. Denise Messina, at 781-383-6104 for information regarding the referral process.

CEF helping schools

Walk through any of the Cohasset schools and you can see the impact of Cohasset Education Foudation's fundraising efforts. The CEF's grant programs are made possible by you – families with an interest in fostering excellence in our schools through innovation and creativity in teaching.

Please join us again this year by donating to the CEF's annual donor campaign, which is currently under way raising funds for a CMHS foreign language lab. And look forward to our upcoming events including our Annual Spring Benefit and our third annual Children's Spelling Bee for grades 2 – 5. And, don't forget to participate in the CEF's Teacher Appreciation Program, "Extra Credit" this holiday season!

Private School Fair

Looking for a high quality education for your children for next fall, Pre-Kindergarten through Twelfth Grade? You'll definitely want to consider independent private schools and our School Fair in Waltham gives you a way to look at a number of schools at the same time.

Independent schools offer choices that align with your values and support your child's intellectual, social, and emotional needs. Independent private schools are welcoming communities that feature great teachers, small classes, strong academics, tremendous opportunities for students and families, and a setting in which every student is known, nurtured and encouraged to grow.

Please come and meet folks from our schools and learn more about the wide variety of choices available to you.

For a list of schools attending the School Fair, please visit www.aisne.org

It's Happening

Estate-ish Sale part of Village Fair

In order to help make your Christmas more "green," please stop by First Parish UnitarianUniversalist (UU) for their sale of good quality used items – ready to be recycled in your home. For many years First Parish UU has sponsored a bargain sale of used items during the Village Fair. The sale started out as a "jumble sale" and then evolved to an "estate-ish sale" as the quality and popularity increased. Now in these times when recycling is paramount in everyone's thoughts, the sale has morphed into a "reusable sale", entitled "The ReUUsable Sale." The church offers for sale a wide variety of good reusable items ranging from household goods, linens, bric-a-brac, jewelry, and furniture to art work, boutique items, toys, children's clothing, and sporting goods. The sale provides excellent value with reasonable prices and good quality.

The ReUUsable Sale will run from 10 am to 2 pm on Saturday, Dec. 5th. The sale is held in Trueblood Hall in First Parish UU's parish house at 23 North Main St. It's a great place to treat yourself or pick up an inexpensive treat for someone else. If you are interested in making donations to the sale, please contact the church at 781-383-1100.

Rusty Skippers

The Rusty Skippers, Cohasset's own community concert band, will be performing their annual Holiday Pops Concert at the Meeting House of First Parish Unitarian Universalist, on the Cohasset Common, on Saturday, Dec. 5 at 12 p.m. The Skippers will be playing a variety of holiday pieces including Leroy Anderson's Sleigh Ride, and many other familiar tunes and carols. The concert will also feature vocalists Lily Sestito and Tony Carbone. The concert is free and appropriate for all ages. A free-will cash offering for the Cohasset Food Pantry will be taken.

The Rusty Skippers will also be playing on Sunday, Dec. 6 at 4pm at St. Luke's Church, Scituate, performing with the Choral Arts Society, and Sunday, Dec. 13 at 4pm at St. Andrews Church, Hanover.

If you are interested in joining or booking the band, please contact Steve Biagini c/o Deer Hill School, (781) 383-6115 ext. 155 or sbiagini@cohassetk12.org .

Frosty Frolic

The second annual Frosty Frolic will take place on Saturday, Dec. 12, at the Hingham Community Center, 70 South St.. Check-in begins at 1 p.m., and the walk kicks off at 2 p.m. Last year, walkers donned holiday attire while enjoying the sounds of local carolers, and the taste of hot chili and other delicious treats.

All proceeds from the Frosty Frolic will benefit both ALS research efforts conducted worldwide, and patient services and programs offered throughout Massachusetts. For more information or to sign up for the Hingham Frosty Frolic, visit www.walktodefeatals.org, or call 888-CURE-ALS.

LINCOLN
WISH LIST
SALES EVENT
BEST VALUES OF THE SEASON

Announcing the Lincoln Wish List Sales Event, with the best values of the season on the latest in luxury and technology:

Lincoln MKT – With three large rows of luxury for seven passengers, the all new Lincoln MKT is one giant leap for luxury crossovers. With a panoramic fixed-glass Vista Roof™ that offers breathtaking views for its passengers. Technology that includes available active park assist, which makes parallel parking a snap. And the available EcoBoost™ engine, which delivers the thrust of a V8 with the thirst of a V6.[1]

Lincoln MKS – Like Lincoln MKT, the new Lincoln MKS offers the available EcoBoost engine and active park assist. You'll also find exclusives like the SecuriCode™ keyless entry keypad, and available radar-based adaptive cruise control and collision warning with brake support that keeps Lincoln MKS a preset distance from other vehicles. All this technology is a fitting complement to luxury like hand-finished leather seating and genuine wood trim.

Lincoln MKZ – With the 2010 MKZ, Lincoln is proving that luxury and technology come in different shapes and sizes. The Lincoln MKZ offers more standard luxury. Like leather seating. Genuine wood trim. Heated and cooled front seats. And a Reverse Sensing System, to name a few.

Lincoln MKX – The new Lincoln MKX, like most Lincoln vehicles, has class-exclusive,[2] voice-activated SYNC® technology[3] that gives you turn-by-turn directions, real-time weather, sports scores and more. And with its futuristic design and available panoramic Vista Roof, the Lincoln MKX is one unique luxury crossover.

The Lincoln Wish List Sales Event. It's where luxury and technology come together for the holidays. But hurry, because great offers like this only come once a year.

Pursuing a Public Mission at UMass Boston

By J. Keith Motley, PhD, UMass Boston Chancellor

Every November at the University of Massachusetts Boston we pause to thank and pay special attention to our students who have served in the United States armed forces with a Veterans Homecoming Dinner. We believe that it's important as a public university to highlight the contributions, recognize the sacrifices, and honor the commitment that these individuals have made to our country.

This November our annual recognition of students around Veterans Day took on a heightened significance as we engaged university administrators from all across New England in a forum about how we can all improve our services to veterans under the new GI Bill, which took effect in August. With approximately 500 student veterans at UMass Boston, our campus is often seen as a friendly environment in which these men and women can begin to restart their lives. Fifty-five disability-service providers from 37 colleges who attended our day-long forum looked to UMass Boston administrators to gain insight and knowledge about how to better meet the needs of today's veteran student population, most of whom are returning from Iraq and Afghanistan.

Especially popular was a panel of UMass Boston student veterans who spoke openly about challenges that faced them and how they were able to overcome those challenges with the help of resources that are available on campus. UMass Boston has welcomed veterans since long before the most recent wars in Iraq and Afghanistan; our Veterans Affairs Office, Veterans Upward Bound precollegiate program, and student veterans' association have been active for more than 35 years. UMass Boston is also home to the William Joiner Center for the Study of War and Social Consequences, founded in 1982.

Providing a supportive educational environment for returning veterans is just one of the many elements that UMass Boston believes are important in fulfilling its public mission. As the only public university in the Greater Boston area, we thrive on providing opportunities through higher education. In our College of Liberal Arts, College of Management, College of Nursing and Health Sciences, College of Science and Mathematics, Graduate College of Education, College of Public and Community Service, and McCormack Graduate School of Policy Studies, all students can pursue professional development, participate in groundbreaking research, and prepare to engage the world. Our Division of Corporate, Continuing, and Distance Education further extends these opportunities on our campus, at off-campus sites, and online.

As chancellor of UMass Boston, I am pleased that our university has been a ray of sunshine in an otherwise gloomy economic climate, offering an alternative to high-cost private institutions. At the same time, however, we are committed to providing our students an education equal to or better in quality than available at the best private schools as we build the student-centered urban public research university of the 21st century.

I encourage you to visit www.umb.edu or call 617-287-6000 for more information about UMass Boston.

In order to achieve ACCC/AVCA certification in animal chiropractic, Dr. Indek passed both the ACCC Comprehensive Written and Clinical Competency Examinations, taken in Bluejacket, Okla., on Aug. 9; in addition he completed a 40-hour internship.

"It gives me great pleasure to announce my AVCA certification," said Dr. Indek. "Chiropractic is a drug-free approach to pet health care that when provided in conjunction with veterinary care can result in many benefits in acute and preventive treatment."

Indek Chiropractic is owned and operated by Indek, a Cohasset resident, who earned his undergraduate degree from Syracuse University, and his degree from the National College of Chiropractic; his certification in animal treatment is from Options for Animals, National Chiropractic College. Indek Chiropractic has operated from its location at 71 Parkingway, Quincy, for 26 years.

Paul DeRensis named super lawyer

All New England Super Lawyers were listed in November's issue of Boston Magazine.

Cohasset Town Counsel Paul DeRensis was named in November 2009 as one of 2009's New England Super Lawyers along with two other members of his firm, Deutsch Williams Brooks DeRensis & Holland, P.C. The list of 2009 Super Lawyers is assembled by Law & Politics in conjunction with Boston Magazine based on surveys of more than 31,000 lawyers across the region aimed at selecting as Super Lawyers the top 5 percent of New England attorneys in more than 60 practice areas and reflects both peer recognition and professional achievement verified through careful selection process to determine New England's best. Mr. DeRensis' practice is concentrated in the area of municipal law, and he was one of only sixteen lawyers recognized as a Super Lawyer in the government/cities/municipalities law area throughout the six New England states. This is the fifth time that Mr. DeRensis has been recognized as a municipal "super lawyer".

Mr. DeRensis is a graduate of Harvard College and Harvard Law School, and is admitted to practice in New York and Massachusetts and in various federal courts including the United States Supreme Court. He serves as Town Counsel to a number of Massachusetts's municipalities. Mr. DeRensis has served as Cohasset's Town Counsel for 13 years.

All New England Super Lawyers were listed in November's issue of Boston Magazine. If you have any questions, please contact Karen Egan, Director of Human Resources at Deutsch Williams Brooks DeRensis & Holland, P.C. 617-951-2300.

HolidayFit Emergency Kit provides assistance through holiday season

Fitness Together in Cohasset is giving out free HolidayFit Emergency Kits to help people manage their weight and enjoy the holiday season without guilt from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. Wednesday, Dec. 9. The kit includes tips on how to make healthy holiday food choices, examples of simple at-home workouts, and creative power recipes to enhance any exercise program.

"Many people complain that the extra sugar and fat from holiday treats, drinks, and meals makes them feel bloated and exhausted", says Michael Cardoza, Fitness Together's VP Operations. "It's not uncommon for someone to gain one pound a week between Thanksgiving and New Years. The problem is, what we gain over the holidays tends to stay on long after the New Year. By offering healthy recipes and exercise tips, we can help people manage their weight and enjoy the holiday season without feeling guilty."

Lifestyle Fitness Corporation owns and operates four franchises of Fitness Together with studios in Norwell, Cohasset, Dedham and Westborough. Fitness Together provides one-on-one, private, individualized personal training programs that include nutritional and exercise coaching. The unique fitness program incorporates cardiovascular training, strength training, Pilates and yoga style movements to achieve remarkable results. The focus is on a holistic approach to health without the crowds or competition of a gym environment. Their experience in creating individual programs and consistent health assessments make Fitness Together the perfect choice for people with health concerns. They assist clients of all ages and individual needs. The Fitness Together Mission is to help people feel better and learn to lead a healthy lifestyle through individual support and training.

For more information visit: www.ftnorwell.com, www.FT-southshore.com, www.ftdedham.com, or www.ftwestborough.com, or contact Steve Lichtman at 781-572-1002.

Horoscope

SALOME'S STARS
FOR RELEASE WEEK
OF DEC. 7, 2009

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) That change in holiday travel plans might be more vexing than you'd expected. But try to take it in stride. Also, it couldn't hurt to use that Aries charm to coax out some helpful cooperation.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) Your Bovine determination helps you deal with an unforeseen complication. And, as usual, you prove that when it comes to a challenge, you have what it takes to take it on.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) Although a romantic theme dominates much of the week, all those warm and fuzzy feelings don't interfere with the more pragmatic matters you need to take care of.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) Best not to ignore those doubts about an upcoming decision. Instead, recheck the facts you were given to make sure nothing important was left out. A weekend surprise awaits you.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) No time for a catnap — yet. You might still have to straighten out one or two factors so that you can finally assure yourself of the truth about a troubling workplace situation. Stay with it.

VIRGO (August 23 September 22) News from an old friend could lead to an unexpected (but nonetheless welcome) reunion with someone who had once been very special in your life. Be open to the possibilities.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) It might be time for a family council. The sooner those problems are resolved, the sooner you can move ahead with your holiday preparations. Don't let the opportunity pass you by.

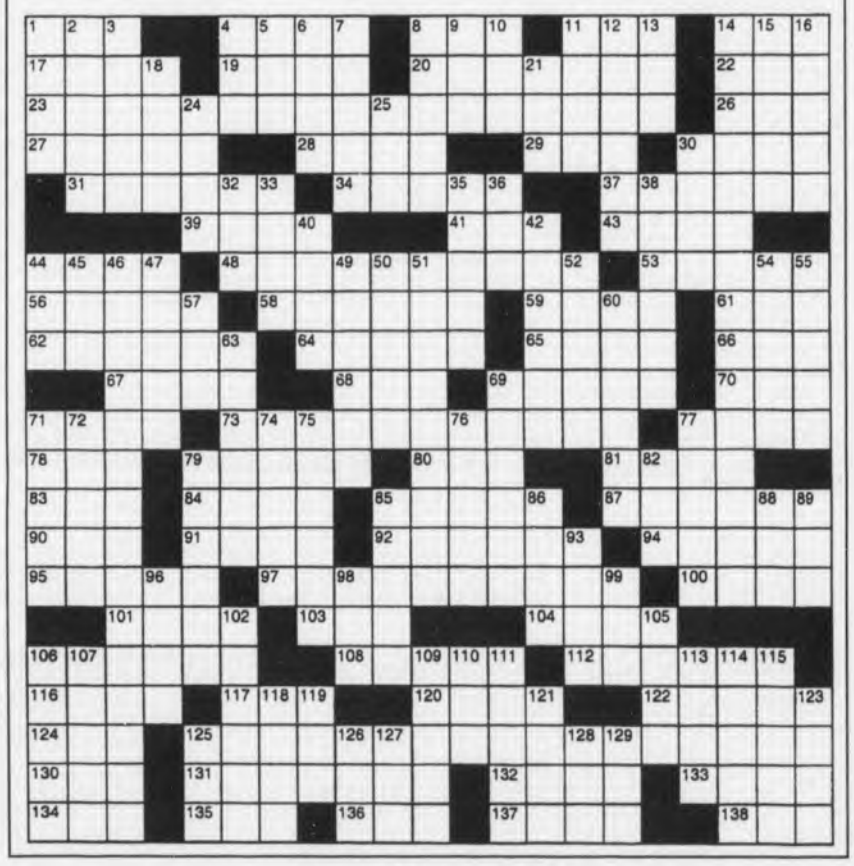
SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) Take some time out to give more attention to a personal relationship that seems to be suffering from a sense of emotional neglect. Provide that much-needed reassurance.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) Cheer up. That unusual circumstance that might faze most people can be handled pretty well by the savvy Sagittarian. Look at it as an opportunity rather than an obstacle.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) Someone you believe has hurt you in the past might now need your help. Reaching out could be difficult. But the generous Goat will be able to do the right thing, as always.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) Prioritizing is an important part of your preholiday scheduling. Try to give time both to your workday responsibilities and those personal matters you might have neglected.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) With the vestiges of your anger about that painful incident fading, you can now focus all your energy on the more positive aspects of your life, including that personal situation.



(c) 2009 King Features Synd., Inc.

BORN THIS WEEK:
You have a way of bringing your own strong sense of reassurance to others and encouraging them to hope.

Fun By The Numbers

Like puzzles? Then you'll love sudoku. This mind-bending puzzle will have you hooked from the moment you square off, so sharpen your pencil and put your sudoku savvy to the test!

Here's How It Works:

Sudoku puzzles are formatted as a 9x9 grid, broken down into nine 3x3 boxes. To solve a sudoku, the numbers 1 through 9 must fill each row, column and box. Each number can appear only once in each row, column and box. You can figure out the order in which the numbers will appear by using the numeric clues already provided in the boxes. The more numbers you name, the easier it gets to solve the puzzle!

Brega's paintings 'Coming Home'

By Jennifer H. McInerney
CORRESPONDENT

A raffle for David Brega's new masterpiece, "Coming Home," will take place next fall with all proceeds supporting the North River Arts Society's capital campaign to revitalize the G.A.R. Hall and adjacent firehouse.

It's not unusual to feel a bit bamboozled or hoodwinked upon first glimpsing one of David Brega's oil paintings. The wrinkled antiques magazine cover curls at the edges, ready to be lifted; the striped feather tucked behind a tattered No Trespassing sign appears ripe for the plucking; the masking tape affixing George Washington's portrait to a worn, scratched plank seems like it could be easily peeled away. But, wait…these are paintings.

Of course, there's no malice or treachery on Brega's part; he's simply respecting the time-honored tradition of trompe l'oeil, or fooling the eye, with details, layers, and depth so vivid and lifelike that the viewer pauses to take a second look—to make sure the objects on his canvases are not actually real, three-dimensional. And he's been doing it for nearly three decades as a prolific member of the North River Arts Society, headquartered at the G.A.R. Hall in Marshfield Hills.

"There was a time when I couldn't drive by an antique shop and not pull in," Brega admits. "That's where the ideas start: I see an object that appeals to me and I can envision it as part of a painting. I bring that item home, put it on the shelf, and live with it for a while. All of a sudden, something clicks. Sometimes it takes 10 minutes; sometimes I have to live with it for a long time."

For 25 years, the upstairs studio at the G.A.R. Hall has been Brega's artistic home away from home, and he considers the many talented and generous members of the North River Arts Society to be his extended family. Ensconced on the second floor overlooking Old Main Street, he has created nearly 300 paintings. Amazingly, he's kept track of almost every single piece that's left the nest. But soon, many of them will be coming home for a special exhibit, aptly named "Coming Home."

Opening on Saturday, Dec. 5 at the G.A.R. Hall, "Coming Home" is Brega's first solo retrospective. In 2000, he and his twin brother, Doug, had a double billing at the Springfield Museum of Fine Arts with a 75-piece show titled "Oil & Water."

The upcoming exhibit will feature more than 25 of Brega's finest works, spanning most of his career. Among the apparitions from the past will be a new masterpiece, also called "Coming Home," which will be unveiled during the opening gala reception. It's painted in the style of Maxfield Parrish, a 19th-century illustrator known for his stark and luminous representations. Raffle tickets for this piece will be available until next fall; all proceeds will support the North River Arts Society's capital campaign to revitalize the G.A.R. Hall and adjacent firehouse.

"The G.A.R. Hall is featured prominently in the painting, which is what makes it so meaningful," Brega points out. "The raffle is going to support the effort to revitalize the very place in which the painting was created."

To add some seasonal spice to the gala festivities, Brega is designing a life-sized holiday-inspired diorama, up on the G.A.R. Hall's stage, where the new "Coming Home" masterpiece will preside.

As curator, the artist personally selected each painting in the retrospective and is orchestrating the entire installation, down to every last light fixture and screw. He's eagerly awaiting the return of his creative progeny, many of which he hasn't seen for decades.

"They're the most significant works I've ever done, some of the real honeys," Brega explains.

One is called "At the Fair," which he painted in 1983. "At the time, I was living on Whitford Circle, and I drove by the Marshfield Fair every day on my way to the studio. I noticed this ticket booth, and how the shadows played across it as the afternoon wore on. It just really appealed to me. So I brought some of my props down to the Fair, and this Redbook cover from 1929 just seemed to fit. I think it was the repetition of the gothic shape of her hat—not to mention that she's beautiful and vintage."

The largest of Brega's paintings that will be coming home for the exhibit is "Homage," a 74-inch by 48-inch tour de force that took him more than two years to complete. It encompasses nine smaller landscape paintings as well as seven portraits of the Hudson River School artists to whom he's paying tribute. It's one of four paintings being loaned out by the MASCO and Manoogian Collection in Taylor, Mich.

"I haven't seen that one since 2003, when the Duxbury Art Complex borrowed it," he recalls. "When I saw it, the first thing I thought was, 'What was I thinking? I can't believe I even attempted this.' It's something I would never attempt now. Not just the size, but the detail. There's a frame within the picture and it's just ridiculous."

The farthest afield is "Suspended Animation," a smaller canvas that will travel all the way from Venice, Calif., to join its oil-on-masonite brethren. The closest will come from right in the historic Marshfield Hills neighborhood, where the North River Arts Society holds its annual Festival of the Arts each Memorial Day weekend.

One of the closest to Brega's heart is "Grade 4," a playful rendering of an old-fashioned school chalkboard with the words PLEASE DO NOT TOUCH! written across it in blue chalk and the unmistakable trail of a fingertip smudged through it.

"It's got my fourth-grade report card and my class picture in it, and some other personal touches. That one's near and dear."

Not surprisingly, there's a story lurking just below the surface of every one of Brega's tableaus. A few days after the opening, on Dec. 10, at 7 p.m., Brega will give a special gallery talk, during which he'll reveal some of the untold stories, share his sources of inspiration, and expound on his own creative process. For example: in "The Arithmetic Test," one of his earlier pieces, whose math quiz is showcased and why was Brega so fascinated by it?

In addition to the gallery talk, several other special events are planned. On Dec.12, from 3 p.m. to 5:30 p.m., the North River Arts Society will host a holiday open house, during which it will take final bids for VIP tickets to the New York City premiere of the new comedy, "Date Night," starring Steve Carell and Tina Fey. On Dec. 17 at 7 p.m., local luminary Ray Amorosi will read and sign copies of his new book of poetry, "In Praise." For information about additional events, to be announced, visit www.northriverarts.org.

"Coming Home: A Retrospective" will be open throughout the month of December; check the Web site for hours of operation.

CORRESPONDENT

A South Shore holiday tradition returns next month when JM Productions presents the 20th anniversary production of "What Christmas Means to Me" on Dec. 3, 4 and 10 at The Tirrell Room in Quincy.

"We've played to over 10,000 guests over the years since we first did this show at the Woodward School in Quincy in 1989," recalls JM Productions Founder, President, and Producing Director John F. McDonald Jr. "It was inspired by classic television Christmas specials – starring people like Andy Williams, Bing Crosby, The King Family, Carol Burnett and, of course, Bob Hope. It was watching those shows as a kid that shaped my own musical career. Over the years, I've been master of ceremonies for this show and also director, producer, and performer. I'm not sure whether or not I'll be on stage this year, but I know whatever I do will be in the company of friends."

In McDonald's case, that means he will be surrounded by some of the most talented singers and dancers on the South Shore including Cheri Kelly and Marybeth Kelly of Braintree, Kathy Teevens Fitzpatrick and Kirsten Hughes of Quincy, and Sue Gavin of Halifax, with Eric Larivee as music director.

Lower left, clockwise: Cheri Kelly of Braintree; Sue Gavin of Halifax; Kirsten Hughes of Quincy; Marybeth Kelly of Braintree and Kathy Teevans Fitzpatrick of Quincy perform in "What Christmas Means to Me" Dec. 3, 4, and 10, in Quincy.

"We've brought together our cast from 'Superwomen…A Musical Revue' for this production. It is Kathy's third time in this show. She is a splendid singer who audiences will remember from many of our musicals. Kathy was also a longtime performer at The Common Market in Quincy where she was often featured with Marybeth, who has not only done many musicals with JM Productions but has also appeared in 'The Country Christmas Show' at Opryland USA in Nashville. We know how much people love Christmas music so we have other terrific vocalists, too, including Sue Gavin who has performed on American Hawaii cruise lines, and Kirsten Hughes who played Ariel in the 'Voyage of the Little Mermaid' live show at Walt Disney World in Orlando, Fla.

"Our show also has plenty of great dance numbers, so we're delighted to have Cheri with us. Cheri has played Peggy Sawyer in both national and European tours of '42nd Street' and has appeared alongside Savion Glover in 'The New Tap Generation: A Night of Tap' in both New York and Boston."

Longtime Wollaston resident McDonald says while the "What Christmas Means to Me" casts have changed over the years, what first made the musical revue popular remains as true today as it was two decades ago.

"This show is funny and sentimental, but it also has real reverence for the season. It is rich in variety thanks to great music performed by a sensational group of singers and dancers who could put even Scrooge in the Christmas spirit. People come back year after year and often tell us that we set the tone for the Christmas season. That is because our singers perform not only traditional Christmas songs like 'Oh Holy Night' and 'White Christmas,' but also some that are not so traditional. In addition, they will share their own funny and poignant holiday memories. We believe that once you've seen our show, you will be officially ready for Christmas."

JM Productions will present "What Christmas Means to Me" on Dec. 3, 4, and 10 at The Tirrell Room, 254 Quarry St., Quincy. For more information about dinner-and-show and show-only ticketing options, call 800-595-4849 or go online at jmproductionspresents.com.

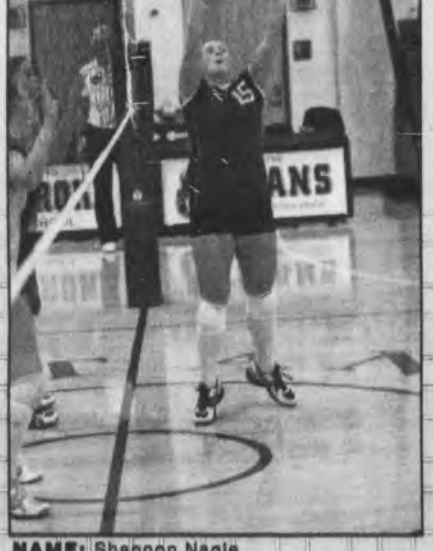
CNC SUPER TEAMS

...Volleyball...

NAME: Ann Donahue
SCHOOL: Braintree
GRADE: Senior
POSITION: Outside hitter
STATS: Donahue was one of many girls deserving Super Team honors. She had 161 kills (led team), 113 blocks (team record), 156 service points, 65 aces (led team), and 26 percent aces (led team)



NAME: Sarah Coffey
SCHOOL: Hanover
GRADE: Senior
POSITION: Outside hitter
STATS: Coffey was a Patriot League All-Star, a three-year starter and one of the most feared hitters in the area. She also has a very strong serve and is a tremendous leader for the Indians.

NAME: Barbara Henneberry
SCHOOL: Rockland
GRADE: Senior
POSITION: Setter
STATS: Barbara Henneberry has been a great leader, especially the last few games. In the Middleboro match, she was 16-for-16 from the service line with an ace, and led the way with 10 assists. Against Quincy, she was 18-for-18 with 2 aces, and had 14 assists. She is one of our team's two captains, and has led our team through some tough stretches throughout the year said coach Craig Johnson.

NAME: Berkeley Hall
SCHOOL: Pembroke
GRADE: Senior
POSITION: Outside hitter
STATS: Hall is one of the most dangerous and powerful outside hitters in the state. She finished this season with a team-high 336 kills, to go along with 82 digs, 65 assists, 56 aces, and 25 blocks for the Titans.

NAME: Shannon Nagle
SCHOOL: Marshfield
GRADE: Senior
POSITION: Setter
STATS: Setters are often overshadowed by the hitters, the ones who put up the big numbers. But this setter stood out for her well-timed setups on the court. Nagle put up ridiculous numbers. She had 413 assists, which led the Rams. She also had 72 aces, third highest on the team.

NAME: Meagan Hall
SCHOOL: Pembroke
GRADE: Junior
POSITION: Outside hitter
STATS: Another phenomenal outside hitter, Hall had a tremendous year. She had 106 kills, second best on the team, to go with her team-leading 62 aces. Hall also added 69 digs and 22 blocks.

NAME: Erica Hicks
SCHOOL: Weymouth
GRADE: Senior
POSITION: Libero
STATS: Erica was the spark plug of the team. Although there are no statistics on heart, she left hers on the floor, orchestrating plays, saving seemingly lost points and pin-point serves.

NAME: Ashley Ahearn
SCHOOL: Marshfield
GRADE: Senior
POSITION: Outside hitter
STATS: Ahearn is a lethal outside hitter, who has the ability to expose other team's weaknesses and at the same time play tremendous defense. This year, Ahearn led the Rams with 141 digs and 220 serves received. She also finished second in kills (225).

NAME: Becky Hayes
SCHOOL: Hanover
GRADE: Senior
POSITION: Libero
STATS: Hayes was just plain steady all season in the back row. In a victory over Hingham, she handled 92 balls, while making just three errors. That was the norm for Hayes, who was a key factor in Hanover's successful season. She was also a Patriot League All-Star.

NAME: Chelsey Covitz
SCHOOL: Marshfield
GRADE: Senior
POSITION: Middle hitter
STATS: The 6-foot, 3-inch Covitz smashes the living daylights out of the ball and is one of the most feared hitters in the state. This fall, the senior middle hitter led the Rams in kills (230) and blocks (47) and finished second in aces (80) and digs (101).

Discourse on dispatch

Selectmen ink inter-municipal agreement

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

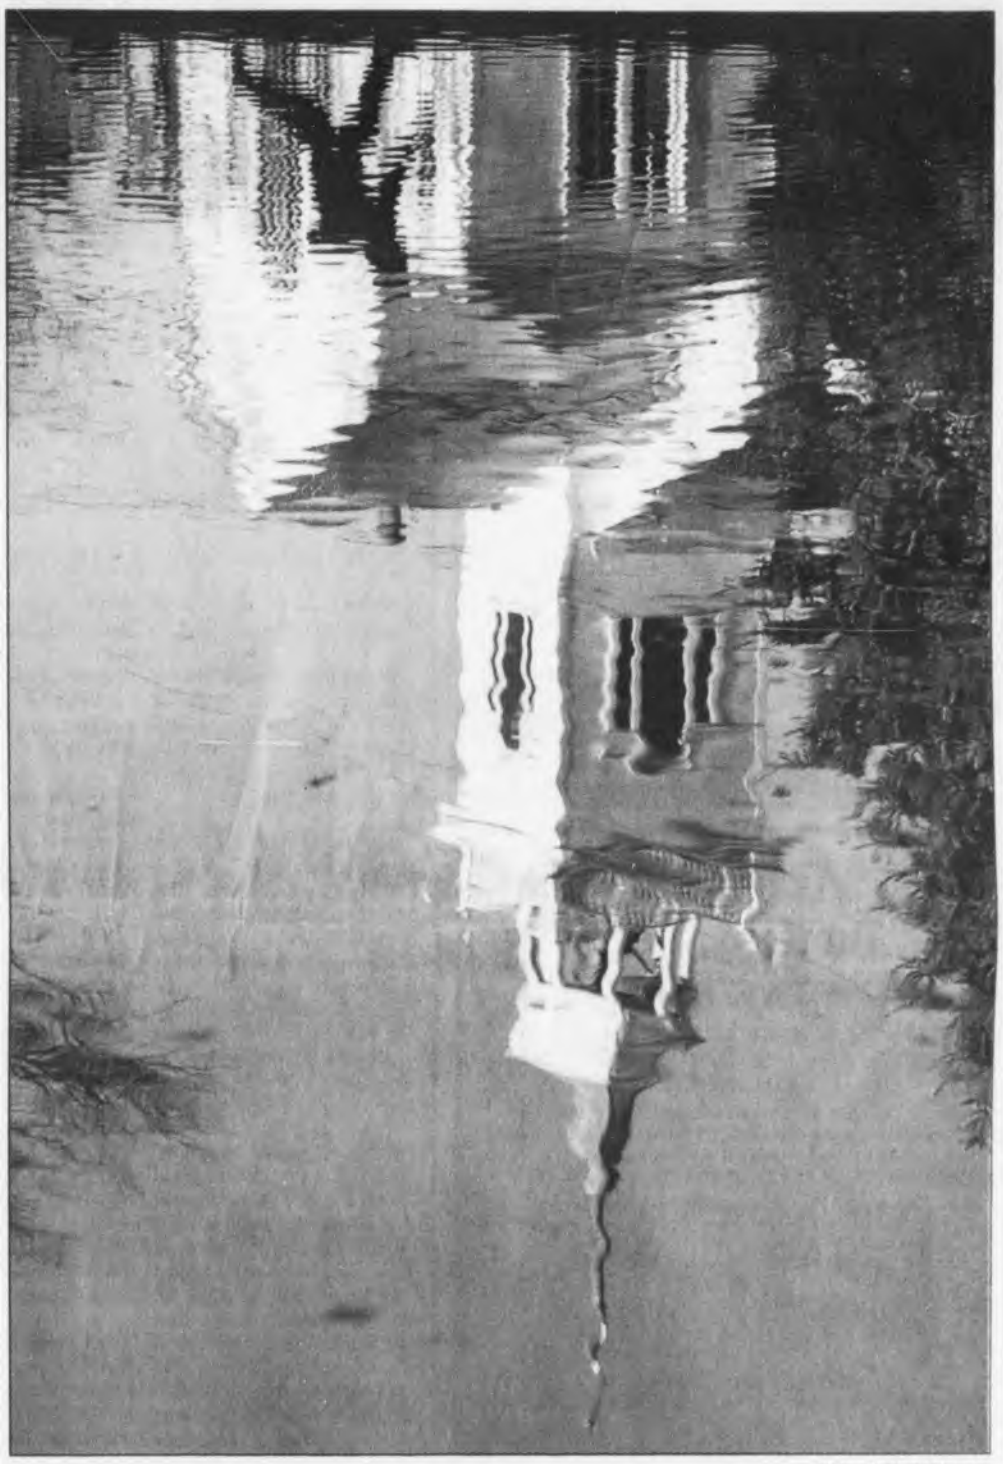
In spite of concerns voiced by the Cohasset Police unions, the regional dispatch center is going forward.

The back of the Selectmen's Office was a sea of blue on Monday night when off-duty police officers filled the room for the over two-hour discussion.

During the lengthy discussion, questions were asked about the many details of the regional dispatch center and the impacts it could have on the current operation of the police station and its services. Many were left unanswered.

"Shouldn't these details be hard and fast before entering into an agreement? Why do we have to be pioneers?"
— Officer James McLean

The primary concern voiced by residents and the police unions was the possibility the police station would be unmanned during the overnight hours. But, other concerns were brought up about proper training for the regional dispatchers and the possibility of losing the "hometown" or "personal" touch the Cohasset dispatchers currently bring to their job.



Selectmen said the concerns raised were "not insurmountable" and indicated they had faith in the people of the police and fire departments to work out the details to the personnel and public's satisfaction.

The end result was a unanimous vote of support for the regional dispatch center and the signing of the inter-municipal agreement making Cohasset is the second of four towns on board with the call center.

The regional dispatch center, which will be based at Hingham Town Hall, is expected to field all 9-1-1 and emergency calls from the towns of Hingham, Hull, Norwell and Cohasset. The towns of Hull and Norwell are expected to

Values down slightly, taxes on the rise

Selectmen keep uniform tax rate

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

As is always the way, property taxes throughout Cohasset are rising next year.

However, commercial property owners need not worry about a split tax rate, which would significantly raise their taxes, anytime soon.

Because just 7 percent of the town's property tax levy draws from non-residential property, it is unlikely the town would adopt a split rate.

Generally a split rate should not be considered unless the combined valuation of commercial, industrial and personal property equals 25 percent of the total valuation of the town, Deputy Assessor Mary E. Quill said. The town's property is valued at nearly $2.438 billion with residential making up nearly $2.3 billion of that number. Only 7.08 percent of the town's total valuation is commercial, industrial and personal property, leaving a little less than 93 percent of the tax burden on residential properties. (Personal property includes business inventory such as furniture and fixtures; utility company poles and wires and the contents of a second home).

In the uniform tax rate scenario, both commercial and residential property valued at $500,000 pay $5,610 in annual taxes.

There are 2,918 residential parcels compared to 397 commercial/industrial/personal property.

A split rate means there would be a higher tax rate for commercial properties. A split tax rate often discourages businesses from locating to a community, said Quill.

While the bulk of the tax burden falls on residential properties, shifting the tax rate even a few cents would add up to thousands of dollars more for the town's commercial taxpayers.

In the uniform tax rate scenario, both commercial and residential property valued at $500,000 pay $5,610 in annual taxes. In one of two split rate tax scenarios, a residence would pay $5,400 (a savings of $210), but the commercial property would pay $8,420 (an increase of $2,810).

"It's a huge shift and when we only have 7 percent commercial, it doesn't make sense," Quill said.

Selectmen Chair Paul Carlson agreed, "it certainly doesn't make sense to have such a large increase on our businesses for such a small return."

Voters have big choice

Special state primary is Dec. 8

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

If Kevin McCarthy, chairman of the Cohasset Democratic Town Committee, has his way – then the turnout next Tuesday for the special state primary will be off the charts.

"What's most important is that you vote at all next Tuesday," McCarthy said in an email. "Voting tells all politicians and officeholders that you exist and that you matter."

But if absentee ballots are a gauge

Names: Beth Marat. Jeff Kotter and Peg Jordan.

Occupation: French/Spanish Language Teacher, Cohasset HS (Beth). French Teacher and CSCR Summer Institute Monitor (Jeff). Spanish teacher, my 25th year! (Peg).

Best day of your life: When each of my children, Dylan and Caitlyn, were born (Beth). The day my daughter Stella was born (Jeff). Dec. 1, 1979: I was a senior in high school and it was my first date with my "future" (and current) husband. We married in 1987. For 30 years we have continued to celebrate our first date anniversary! (Peg).

Best (or worst) vacation: Best; France (too many times to count) and a tour of the National Parks with my family in 2008 (Beth). Best: Honeymoon in New Zealand; honeymooning, surfing and snowboarding all on the same trip! (Jeff). Best and worst: A three-week trip in Mexico with my family in 2005 traversing the Yucatan Peninsula. The final week a Level 4 hurricane hit which forced us to evacuate our hotel by bus at 3 am and spend 4 days in a shelter at the Guatemalan border in Chetumal. We patiently weathered the storm along with thousands of displaced tourists. My two young sons, however, thought it was great not to shower or have electricity for such a long period of time. (Peg).

Favorite season: Summer (Beth and Peg). Fall (Jeff).

Favorite holiday: Christmas (Beth and Peg). Labor Day (Jeff).

Favorite junk food (or meal): Ice cream (Beth). Anything rich in both carbs and cheese (Jeff). Milky Way candy bar (Peg).

Best book (or magazine): Barbara Kingsolver, "Pigs in Heaven" (Beth). The Surfers Journal (Jeff). Any novel by my favorite mystery novelist Patricia Cornwell. I am fascinated by the intricate details of crime scene investigation (Peg).

Best movie (or actor): "Out of Africa" with Robert Redford and Meryl Streep (Beth). "Dead Man" (dir: Jim Jarmusch) (Jeff). Antonio Banderas for his accent (Peg).

Best TV show: "Northern Exposure" (Beth). "Thalassa," a weekly French show on TV5 that showcases different coastal parts of the world and marine issues (Jeff). "I Love Lucy" (Peg).

Best music, group, or artist: Sting (Beth). I've been listening to "Ray Barbee meets the Mattson2" a lot lately (Jeff). Juanes, a Colombian singer (Peg).

Pet peeve: Interruptions (Beth). Whining (Jeff). Students that do not let their guard down and choose not to try (Peg).

Fun fact about yourself: Love crossword puzzles (Beth). I love to sing in my classes and encourage my students to do the same. You can learn a lot of Spanish and culture through song! (Peg).

Most embarrassing moment: Having to excuse myself from jury duty in front of the whole court after the trial began when I realized that the undercover officer in the case was actually my neighbor (Jeff).

Goal: Raise a happy and successful son and daughter (Beth). To learn Spanish and win a grammy for singing a duet in Spanish with Senora Jordan (Jeff). That my students venture outside of their comfort zone to travel and live in a Spanish speaking country to share the passion I have for Spanish, music and Hispanic people (Peg).

Person you'd most like to meet: Michelle Obama (Beth). The people that figure out how to cure cancer (Jeff). Edward James Olmos from "Stand and Deliver" (1985). He played Jaime Escalante, a teacher from East LA who got his Latino students to excel in the AP Calculus exam. I love the movie quote " The students will rise to the level of expectation put before them" (Peg).

Biggest worry: The economic crisis (Beth). It was getting the Swine Flu, but now that I have had it, I'm not so worried (Jeff). To afford my two sons, Hubbard and Juni, the opportunities to spread their wings and see the world. I hope they have been bitten by the travel bug like their mom (Peg).

Best part of Cohasset: The beach and the ocean for sailing, rowing, kayaking, etc. (Beth). The water/wetlands (Jeff). Since I live in Kingston, I would definitely answer the students of CMHS, and French Memories, of course! (Peg).

Boys arrested for B&E

At about noontime on Thanksgiving Day, two Cohasset boys, ages 14 and 15, were arrested by Cohasset Police following a 9-1-1 call to Cohasset's Emergency Dispatch Center reporting a breaking and entering in progress.

Both boys were charged with breaking and entering during the daytime with the intent to commit a felony, trespassing and disorderly conduct.

An alert neighbor reported that he witnessed two male teens enter a side door to a home across the street from his house on Beach Street. The caller was reporting that his neighbors were out of state for the holiday and that the home was empty. While police were en route to the call the reporting party chased the boys away into nearby woods. Once on scene, police officers were able to obtain the identity of the boys from a third uninvolved boy who was also on Beach Street.

Officers at the scene were able to make contact with the suspects via cellular telephone and convince them to turn themselves in. They subsequently came out of the woods and were arrested by police following a brief investigation.

Both boys were charged with breaking and entering during the daytime with the intent to commit a felony, trespassing and disorderly conduct. Both boys were released to their parents.

The boys were arraigned Monday, Nov. 30 at Quincy Juvenile Court. They are scheduled to return to court for a pretrial conference on Dec. 21.

Police do not release the names of juveniles (those under the age of 17).

Cohasset Police Lieutenant William Quigley, who is the patrol division commander, said, "This was a situation that involved some young folks that made some very poor and dangerous decisions on Thanksgiving Day. Both boys come from good families and this seems to have been a temporary lapse in good judgment. I don't expect that we will see these two again anytime soon."

This incident remains under investigation. Police said the home was unlocked at the time of the break.

Correction

A report in last week's Mariner about an intoxicated 16-year-old girl brought to the station by her parents following a party on Nov. 20 should have said the initial call about teens drinking came in at 8:05 p.m. Due to a reporting error, the wrong time was listed.

Winter parking

Winter parking regulations will be through April 1.

No overnight on-street parking between the hours of 2 a.m. and 6 a.m. is allowed during winter parking regulations.
